Model of independent work of students in individual sections and topics of the course:

1. When studying historical and philosophical topics, it is necessary to study in depth – at the student's choice – one of the works of a domestic or foreign philosopher of the century and prepare a report on what has been read in a practical lesson. This kind of work is designed to contribute to the development of an understanding of modern trends in the development of philosophical thought, as well as mastering the skills of philosophical analysis of various types of worldview.

2. When studying ontology, it is recommended to familiarize yourself with the concepts of being/non-being in the works of modern Russian and foreign philosophers (this can be done using the electronic resources of information and educational portals, for example, the Federal Center for Information and Educational Research), to determine your own position on this issue and to make a reasoned presentation of it at the discussion. This type of work develops independent thinking skills and the ability to conduct a discussion. The study of the topic "Scientific Pictures of the World" requires from the student, on the one hand, a deeper acquaintance with the results of modern science, on the other hand, the ability to see their worldview meanings.

3. The study of epistemology and scientific knowledge requires the student to be able to consider legal documents, as well as the studied legal disciplines in general from the point of view of using philosophical and general scientific methods in them, which contributes to a better understanding of the methodology of law.

4. When studying the topic of personality and society, it is recommended to independently familiarize yourself with the hypotheses of the social origin of man, as well as the results of modern discussions of philosophers, scientists, lawyers and representatives of the church about the essence of man, his social and biological nature. In addition, the independent work of students should be aimed at preparing for participation in discussions on the problems and contradictions of modern society, including: within the framework of the University Discussion Club.

Independent work is carried out in the following types:

Model of independent work of students in individual sections and topics of the course:

1. When studying historical and philosophical topics, it is necessary to study in depth – at the student's choice – one of the works of a domestic or foreign philosopher of the century and prepare a report on what has been read in a practical lesson. This kind of work is designed to contribute to the development of an understanding of modern trends in the development of philosophical thought, as well as mastering the skills of philosophical analysis of various types of worldview.

2. When studying ontology, it is recommended to familiarize yourself with the concepts of being/non-being in the works of modern Russian and foreign philosophers (this can be done using the electronic resources of information and educational portals, for example, the Federal Center for Information and Educational Research), determine your own position on this issue and speak with arguments at the discussion. "Scientific pictures of the world" require from the student, on the one hand, a deeper acquaintance with the results of modern science, on the other hand, the ability to see their worldview meanings.

3. The study of epistemology and scientific knowledge requires the student to be able to consider legal documents, as well as the studied legal disciplines in general from the point of view of using philosophical and general scientific methods in them, which contributes to a better understanding of the methodology of law.

4. When studying the topic of personality and society, it is recommended to independently familiarize themselves with the hypotheses of the social origin of man, as well as the results of modern discussions of philosophers, scientists, lawyers and representatives of the church about the essence of man, his social and biological nature. In addition, the independent work of students should be aimed at preparing for participation in discussions on the problems and contradictions of modern society, in the including within the framework of the University Discussion Club.

Model of independent work of part-time students:

Given the limited number of hours allocated for classroom classes, part-time students should make the most of the following:

6. Weekly consultations of leading teachers, come to them with ready-made questions, independently complete all the test tasks proposed in the work program, as well as general requirements for the study of primary sources (study according to the Reader, as well as one of the philosophers of the twentieth century in more depth).

7. Use the University website, which will contain the necessary materials.

8. Use electronic resources of information and educational portals, websites on the subject area, resources of electronic libraries and specialized databases.

V. MATERIAL AND TECHNICAL SUPPORT

5.1. Provision of the educational process with other library and information resources and means of ensuring the educational process

Students are provided with access (remote access) to modern professional databases and information reference systems. The full-text work program of the academic discipline (module) is posted on the Digital scientific, educational and social Network of the University (hereinafter - CNOSS), in the system of which the "Electronic personal cabinets of the student and scientific and pedagogical worker" function. Access to the materials is possible by entering an individual password. CNOSS is designed to create a personality-oriented information and communication environment that ensures information interaction between all participants in the educational process of O.E. Kutafin University (MSAL), including providing them with publicly available and personalized reference, scientific, educational, and social information through services based on applied information systems of O.E. Kutafin University (MSAL).

Throughout the entire period of study, each student is provided with individual unrestricted access to electronic library systems (e-libraries) and to the electronic information and educational environment of the O.E. Kutafin University (MSAL). In addition to the electronic libraries of the Kutafin University (MSAL), it is provided with individual unrestricted access to all remote electronic library systems, databases and legal reference systems connected at the O.E. University. Kutafina (MSAL) on the basis of licensing agreements, and having adapted versions of websites for students with disabilities.

The electronic library system (e-library) and the electronic information and educational environment provide simultaneous access for 100 percent of students from anywhere with access to the Internet information and telecommunications network, both on the territory of the O.E. Kutafin University (MSAL) and outside it.

The Library's electronic resource collection includes the following legal reference systems, databases, and electronic library systems:

I. GENERAL PROVISIONS

I.1 Aims and objectives of mastering the discipline

The aim of mastering the discipline "History of Russia" is to understand the peculiarities of Russian historical development against the global background. Students must assess Russia's contribution to the development of world civilization, the role of our country in resolving major international conflicts, its influence in world politics as a whole, and see the problems associated with the need to respond to general historical challenges. The discipline has an important position in the formation of patriotism, legal consciousness and legal culture of students.

The objectives of the discipline "History of Russia" are to form an understanding of history as a science capable of reflecting the totality of the most important problems, their causes and essence, ways and means of resolution, and historical significance. At the same time, it is possible and necessary to appeal to the historiography of the topic, to cite different points of view and arguments, references to historical sources, which will allow students to understand the scientific nature of historical knowledge.

From a methodological point of view, it is necessary to achieve an understanding of the unity of the historical process, the progressive development of humanity. Russian history is an integral part of this process. This allows us to see Russia's place in world history and on the international arena, the impact of global trends on the country's development, the influence of our Fatherland on the events and processes of world history. It also enables us to uncover issues of modernization, borrowing new achievements, assimilation and transfer of the global experience. This approach does not exclude, but, on the contrary, implies special attention to the peculiarities of the history and culture of Russia, its traditions and values.

The aim is to achieve an understanding of the synchronous development of the Russian and world historical process; students must see the general and the particular in domestic and world history, the connection and mutual influence of events, and assess the role of Russia in world history and culture.

1.2 Place of the discipline (module) in the structure of basic professional educational program of higher education.

The discipline "History of Russia" is a compulsory part of Block 1 "Disciplines (modules)" of the basic professional degree program of higher education."

Mastering the discipline provides an opportunity to expand and deepen the knowledge obtained at the previous stage of training, to acquire skills and abilities determined by the content of the syllabus. Competencies that are formed in the process of mastering the discipline are necessary for a successful professional life. Students acquire the ability to independently find and use the necessary substantive and logical connections with other disciplines of the program, such as the History of the State and Law of Russia, the History of the State and Law of Foreign Countries, the Theory of State and Law, and the Constitutional Law of Russia.

1.3 Formed competences and indicators of their achievement (planned results of mastering the discipline)

4. To understand the reasons for the adoption of Christianity from Byzantium and to understand the significance of the Byzantine heritage in Rus'.

5. Study the preparatory materials for the lectures:

Since the Stone Age, the territory of modern Russia has been inhabited by humans, and some of its territories were part of various political entities of antiquity. During the settlement of the Slavs across the East European Plain in the 6th–8th centuries, which became the final stage of the Migration Period, the eastern branch of the Slavs was formed. In Eastern Europe, Slavic ethnopolitical communities were formed, traditionally called "tribes", in which proto-state political structures began to form. During the 9th–10th centuries, the Eastern Slavs, as well as a number of Finnish-speaking and Baltic peoples living on the Eastern European Plain, were united under a single authority, under the leadership of the Varangian (Scandinavian) princely Rurik dynasty. A state was formed that received the name "Rus", or "Russian land", with its center in Kyiv. At the end of the 10th century, Christianity was adopted in Rus' in its eastern, Orthodox, version, which predetermined the path of cultural development of the country. The most important prerequisite for this was the contacts that had been established by that time with one of the most culturally developed countries of that time – the Empire of the Romans (Byzantium). The formation of the state and the adoption of Christianity were integral parts of the processes of political genesis and Christianization that had engulfed most of Europe at the end of the first millennium AD.

Lecture 2. Rus' in the late 10th – early 13th centuries.

Contents:

1. Peculiarities of the social system during the Middle Ages in the countries of Europe and Asia

5. Rus' in the mid-12th - early 13th centuries. Formation of lands - independent political entities ("principalities").

6. The most important lands and features of their socio-economic and political development. Formation of elements of the republican political system in Novgorod. Foreign policy of the Russian lands.

Tasks to prepare:

1. Study the relevant sections of the textbook.

2. Learn the factors that influenced the collapse of the Old Russian state.

3. Focus on the various principles of government in the Russian lands, see the significance of Kyiv during the period of existence of independent Russian lands.

4. Study the preparatory materials for the lectures:

The period from the end of the 10th to the beginning of the 12th century was the time of the existence of a relatively united Rus'. This state was one of the largest in Europe and played a prominent role in international relations. The leading role in public relations was played by princes and the military nobility (druzhina) surrounding them. The supreme power belonged to the princely family of the Rurikids, among whom the princely thrones were distributed in the constituent parts, territorial-administrative units of the state - volosts. In a number of large urban centres, the city assembly, the veche, begins to exert significant influence on the resolution of important political issues.

The socio-economic and socio-political system of the Old Russian state, although it had a number of specific features, was nevertheless in many ways similar to the system of neighboring European states: Poland, the Czech Republic, Hungary. First of all, this concerns the dominant role of the prince and the nobility that served him, the system of centralized exploitation of the dependent population, and the relatively late development of land ownership by the nobility.

In the 12th century, the state of Rus' was divided into a number of virtually independent political entities—lands, most of which were ruled by princely dynasties belonging to a certain branch of the Rurik dynasty. Despite this, the idea of the unity of Rus', of Kyiv as the all-Russian capital, of the supremacy of the Kyiv prince over all the Rurikids continued to exist. The Russian church organization, headed by the Metropolitan of all Rus', also remained united. A special form of political system developed in the Novgorod land. There, the city assembly, the veche, gradually became the highest authority, and it could invite and remove princes from the Novgorod throne and elected the most important officials.

Lecture 3. Rus' in the 13th - 15th centuries.

Lecture 3.1. Russian lands in the 13th - 14th centuries.

Contents:

1. The Mongol Empire. Genghis Khan and his descendants' conquests. The dependence system of Russian principalities on the Horde khans.
2. Features of the political development of European countries.
3. The Orders of the Crusaders and their relations with the Russian lands. Alexander Nevsky and the opposition to expansion from the West.
4. Principalities of North-Eastern Rus'. Strengthening of the Moscow Principality.
5. Relations between Rus' and the Horde: modern scientific ideas and controversial issues.

Lecture 3.2. Formation of the unified Russian state in the 15th century. Old Russian culture of the 9th - late 15th centuries.

Contents:

1. Formation of national states in Europe: general and specific issues.
2. The gathering of the Russian lands centered on Moscow. Discussions about alternative ways of gathering the Russian lands.
3. Formation of the governing apparatus of a single state.
4. The main achievements of world culture in the Middle Ages.
5. The features of the Old Russian culture.
6. The main genres of the Old Russian literature.
7. The Old Russian fine art. The Old Russian architecture.

Tasks to prepare:

1. Study the relevant sections of the textbook.
2. Study the debates in science and journalism on the "historical choice" between the West and the East made by Alexander Nevsky.
3. Pay attention to the main features of the centralization process, the system of power and governance in the Moscow principality.
4. Understand how the single Russian centralized state was formed compared to the countries of Western Europe.
5. Assess the role of the Baptism of Rus' in the further development of Russian culture.
6. Understand the peculiarities of the Russian lands culture development at various stages of medieval history.
7. Study the preparatory materials for the lectures:

The period between the mid-13th and the 15th centuries was a time of fundamental changes in the fate of Rus'. The blow dealt to the Russian lands by the Mongol conquerors in the mid-13th century seriously affected their development.

The Russian lands were politically and economically weakened and became dependent on foreign power. The Mongol Empire became the most powerful state in Eastern Europe and northwestern Asia, and after its collapse, the Horde (Golden Horde) succeeded its power. The lands of North-Eastern Rus' found themselves dependent on the Horde khans. During the second half of the 13th – early 15th centuries, the western and southern Russian lands became a part of state formations of a foreign ethnic origin – the Grand Duchy of Lithuania and the Kingdom of Poland.

After becoming dependent on the Horde, North-Eastern Rus was mainly part of the Grand Principality of Vladimir. Within its framework, the process of unification of Russian lands began, the center of which gradually became the Moscow Principality, whose princes by the end of the 14th century, after a long struggle, secured for themselves the Grand Principality of Vladimir and the right to be called "Grand Dukes of All Rus'". The political development of North-West Rus' progressed in a different way. In Novgorod (Veliky Novgorod) and Pskov, a republican system was formed that had features similar to Western European urban communes and republics.

In the 15th century, two large states dominated Eastern Europe: the Grand Duchy of Lithuania (which included a significant part of the ancient Russian territories) and the Grand Principality of Moscow. They fought for the supremacy while the power of the Horde was gradually. The united Russian (Moscow) state, which was formed on the basis of the Grand Principality of Moscow, by the end of the 15th century freed itself from dependence on the Horde, became the largest in Europe in terms of territory and joined the European system of international relations.

Module 2

Lecture 4. Russia in the 16th–17th centuries.

Contents:

1. The world at the beginning of the Modern era. Russia at the beginning of the 16th century.
2. The era of Ivan IV the Terrible. Formation of the Russian version of absolutism - autocracy.
3. Russia at the turn of the 16th-17th centuries. The Time of Troubles as a full-scale civil war.
4. Russia in the 17th century: contradictions of development.
5. The culture of Russia in the 16th-17th centuries.

Tasks to prepare:

1. Study the relevant sections of the textbook.
2. Assess the peculiarities of Russia's geographical position and the influence of this factor on the historical development of the country.
3. Understand the essence of the social upheavals of the 17th century, especially the circumstances of the schism of the Russian Orthodox Church.
4. Study the preparatory materials for the lectures:

The 16th–17th centuries occupy a special place in the world historical process, especially in the development of Europe and Russia. This was the time when European civilization expanded its horizons to a global scale, going beyond the borders of the Old World and penetrating into the territory of America and Australia, previously unknown to its inhabitants. It was during these centuries that the military and technical superiority of the European states emerged, reflected in the results of wars with the strongest of the Eastern states – the Ottoman Empire. Finding themselves in new political and economic conditions, the European states experienced serious transformations in the social, economic and political spheres. The 16th–17th centuries became the time of the birth of capitalist relations, the Reformation, the first revolutions, the rapid development of art and science, which largely determined the face of Europe in the following centuries.

These two centuries became a time when the peculiarities of Russia's historical development became quite evident. Having created a single national state at the beginning of the 16th century, synchronously with a number of European powers (Spain and France) and even significantly ahead of some other countries (Germany and Italy), the Russian state, due to its geographical location and the lack of convenient access to sea trade routes, found itself weakly involved in pan-European processes (strengthening of exchange relationships, rise of industry and shipbuilding, development of science). Here, as in a number of Eastern European states, serfdom tendencies were preserved and further developed, largely due to the peculiarities of the geopolitical position of the country, which did not have reliable natural borders and significant human and financial resources to organize their defense. Against this background, like a number of European states, the political development of Russia followed the path of forming an absolutist model of power. The development of the Russian version of absolutism—autocracy—was significantly accelerated during the reign of Ivan IV the Terrible, especially during the period of the oprichnina, when, by means of political terror, the fundamental unlimited power of the monarch was established and consolidated in practice.

The contradictions of internal development, combined with complex relations with neighboring powers, resulted in the severe crisis of the Time of Troubles at the beginning of the 17th century, which almost led to the liquidation of the state. The suppression of the royal dynasty in the country, which was perceived by the majority of its population as the hereditary patrimony of the Moscow branch of the Rurik family, and the emergence of elected sovereigns provoked a decline in the legitimacy of the central government. The combination of political crisis with acute economic problems, social conflicts and contradictions between the population of the center of the country and its outskirts led to a full-scale civil war, complicated by the intervention of neighboring states, primarily the Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth and Sweden. However, the state sovereignty was defended at the cost of great human and territorial losses.

The restoration of statehood in the 17th century was guided primarily by the previous political and socio-economic models formed by the previous century, which often contradicted the needs of society in the new socio-economic realities. The establishment of the autocratic power of the tsars and the desire to restore the positions lost during the Time of Troubles at the international arena required significant resources and provoked an increase in the tax burden on the taxable population which manifested itself through the serfs' burden and inability to leave the land they were bound to. This led to a series of social upheavals in the middle and in the second half of the 17th century.

A special place in their series belongs to the schism of the Russian Orthodox Church, which began under the rule of Patriarch Nikon, who sought, on the one hand, to bring Russian church rites into line with Greek ones, and on the other, to put spiritual authority above secular authority, which, in turn, led to a conflict between the tsar and the patriarch. The conflict soon ended as the patriarch was stripped of his rank, but the schism haunted the history of the Russian Church for a long time.

By the end of the 17th century, the Russian state had become a power that stretched from Kyiv and Smolensk to the shores of the Pacific Ocean, with unlimited power of the monarch and legally formalized serfdom. In the actual fact, the state that existed was more of an empire characterized by extensive territory, multi-ethnic, multi-confessional population, including in its territory of different political status, and in greater extent showed foreign policy activity, especially in Central and Eastern Europe and Asia. These qualities of the Russian state were evident even during its formation in the late 15th and early 16th centuries, and even then, they reflected ideology and state symbolism.

At the same time, by the end of the 17th century, the economic, scientific, military and technical disadvantage compared to the countries of Western Europe became increasingly obvious. The latter forced the country to modernize, the inevitability of which was recognized by the most far-sighted representatives of the Russian political elite. The noticeable penetration of elements of European culture, meanwhile, met with resistance from a significant part of the country's population, which remained committed to traditionalism and conservative values.

Lecture 5. Russia in the 18th century

Contents:

1. Russia in the era of Peter I's reforms. Distinctive features of foreign and domestic policy. The toll of the reforms.
2. The epoque of palace coups. 1725-1762. Preservation of the main parameters of domestic and foreign policy determined by Peter I.
3. The era of Catherine II. The main features, characteristics and goals of foreign and domestic policy.
4. Russian culture of the 18th century. New trends in Russian art.

Tasks to prepare:

1. To determine the discussions on the results and historical significance of Peter the Great's reforms.
2. To evaluate Russia's place as a "bridge" between East and West in the 18th century.
3. Study the preparatory materials for the lectures:

The era of Peter I's reforms is one of the most important periods in the history of the Russian state, which gave a powerful modernizing momentum to the development of the country for centuries onwards. The large-scale changes (modernization) affected primarily the upper classes of society, laying the foundations for future transformations for everyone else. Focusing on the ideas of public good, the reformer managed to reduce Russia's lag behind European countries in the shortest possible time in industrial, military, cultural and scientific terms.

In a relatively short period of time, a strong army and navy were created, and the industry began to develop rapidly. The introduction of attributes of a regular state along with a developed bureaucratic system contributed to the streamlining of the country's governance. The government's policy, aimed at eliminating the differences in land ownership and careers among the aristocracy and the bulk of service people, led to the consolidation of the nobility, strengthening its position as the ruling class.

The process of secularization of culture that began in the 17th century led to the dominance of the secular principle in enlightenment, education, and many areas of artistic creativity. Science emerged.

On the other hand, the stratification of society increased, and the privileged classes began distance themselves more and more from the rest of the population in terms of culture.

The political development of the country ended with the final formation of absolutism. Russia was proclaimed an empire and entered the "European concert" along with other leading powers. Thus, the new official name completed the process of Russia's development as an imperial-type state, which began during the formation of the Russian state at the turn of the 15th–16th centuries.

A radical change in Russia's international position occurred as a result of the victory in the Great Northern War against Sweden. At the same time, a task of national importance was solved, namely: access to the Baltic Sea was acquired, the country's security was significantly improved, and the best conditions for international trade and other communications were created. Peter I's efforts in the sphere of foreign policy were not limited to the Western direction. He fully understood the strategic importance of Russia as a "bridge" or a connecting link between the West and the East, Europe and Asia. Hence his efforts to strengthen Russia's position in the Caucasus, to establish relations with China, to try to find routes to India, and his grandiose plans to penetrate the Far East, which, after the death of Peter I, brought Russian sailors and then industrialists to Northwest America.

The reforms of Peter I predetermined the further development of Russia, especially during the 18th century. Under Peter I's successors, the course of reforms aimed at further modernization of Russia continued. For example, under Catherine I, the tax reform was completed and a capitation tax was introduced, under Peter II, the "Bill of Exchange Charter" was issued, which became a step forward to modernize the credit sphere, under Anna Ioannovna, further modernization of the army was carried out, under Elizabeth Petrovna, the first banks in Russian history were created, and the liquidation of internal customs cleared the space of the internal market from the barriers inherited from previous centuries. Peter III decided to eliminate monopolies in the sphere of trade and industry, he also began the secularization of church estates, and issued the "Manifesto on the Freedom of the Nobility."

A new significant step towards modernizing the country were the reforms carried out by Catherine II, whose reign in its significance and results is quite comparable to the era of Peter I. At that time, a large-scale reform of local government was carried out, which completed the construction of the system of power of the Russian Empire, the formation of the main estates of the empire was completed, legislation was developed regarding their rights and responsibilities, the issue of secularization of church estates was resolved, which led to the almost complete dependence of the church on the state. During the reign of Paul I, the transformations continued, but to a greater extent in the direction of strengthening the personal power of the emperor and increasing the role of the bureaucracy and the police. At the same time, Paul I sought to limit the tyranny of landowners by issuing the "Manifesto of Three-Day Corvee." The emperor also sought to introduce clear order in ensuring the succession of power ("The Act on Succession to the Throne"), a system of state distinctions ("The Establishment on Russian Imperial Orders"), which had long-term significance.

The development of the country and its political system in the 18th century, however, was by no means smooth and conflict-free. Immediately after the death of Peter I, a long period of political instability began, known as the era of "palace coups." These revolutions did not change the essence of the socio-political system in the country, demonstrating how violently the unlucky rulers were dealt with. However, during this struggle the interests of various groups of the nobility clashed: the old aristocracy and the recently elevated nobles, Russian and foreign by origin, the phenomenon of favoritism became widespread, and the decisive role in these events belonged to the guard and military force. All this was a consequence of a certain immaturity of state institutions that arose under Peter I, but had not yet become strong.

It is quite obvious that in this struggle the question of autocratic power and its limits emerged. During the accession of Anna Ioannovna to the throne, a group of aristocrats among the members of the Supreme Privy Council attempted to limit the power of the empress, but failed, since the overwhelming majority of the nobility unequivocally spoke out in support of the autocracy.

The strengthening of autocracy continued steadily throughout the 18th century, and at the same time the rights and privileges of the nobility as the ruling class were constantly expanding. The nobility agreed with the absolute power of the monarchs, which provided them with an ultimate position at the top of the social pyramid and unlimited power over the serfs.

It was in the 18th century that the serf system in Russia reached its heights and the position that the peasants were in became the object of attention of the authorities and many thinkers and publicists who were influenced by the ideas of the European Enlightenment. The dissatisfaction of the serfs with their lives resulted in an uprising of peasants, Cossacks, and peoples of the Volga region led by Yemelyan Pugachev.

The 18th century entered world history as the Age of Enlightenment. This ideology, corresponding to the worldview of the Modern Era, had a strong impact on the economy, culture, social movement and even government policy of many countries in Europe and North America. The radicalization of the ideas of the Enlightenment contributed to the intensification of the socio-political struggle, which ultimately led to powerful revolutionary uprisings (the War of Independence of the North American Colonies, the French Revolution). In Russia, especially during the reign of Catherine II, under the influence of the ideas of the Enlightenment, measures were taken aimed at involving the estates in local government, developing legislation (the Legislative Commission of 1767–1769), and developing journalism, science, and education.

After Peter I, throughout the 18th century, the international authority of the Russian Empire steadily grew. As one of the leading powers on the world stage, Russia pursued an active foreign policy, achieving the most important results: ensuring security along the entire perimeter of the borders, annexing the Northern Black Sea region, advancing in the eastern and northeastern directions, and acquiring territories in Northwest America. As a result of the division of the Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth, Russia secured for itself mainly the western Russian lands, which in ancient times were part of Rus' and its principalities.

At the same time as strengthening the international position, the government pursued a balanced national and religious policy aimed at ensuring stability within the empire, strengthening power at the center and in the regions, and maintaining peace in interethnic relations. The Russian nobility was replenished by people from the elite of many peoples of the country. At the same time, the privileges of the local nobility were preserved, and the free practice of religions and beliefs adhered to by different peoples was guaranteed. While traditional customs and way of life were preserved, at the same time there was a unification of local government, the limitation and liquidation of a number of autonomous structures, for example, the abolition of the Hetmanate in Left-Bank Ukraine and the abolition of the Zaporizhian Sich, the introduction of all-Russian principles of local administration in Livonia and Estonia.

Profound changes took place in the territory of the newly annexed Northern Black Sea region, which was called Novorossiia. Dozens of new cities were founded here, which became administrative, commercial and industrial centers, the region was populated by attracting Russian and Ukrainian peasants, other peoples, including colonists from abroad. A new region with a multinational population was being formed, and the Russian language and Russian culture became a factor of unity and consolidation.

Lecture 6. The Russian Empire in the 19th — early 20th centuries.

Contents:

1. Europe and the world in the 19th century.
2. Russia in the first quarter of the 19th century.
3. Russia in the second quarter of the 19th century.
4. The time of the Great Reforms in Russia.
5. The First Russian Revolution.
6. The Russian Empire in 1907–1914. The First World War and Russia.
7. Culture in Russia in the 19th — early 20th centuries.

Tasks to prepare:

1. Assess changes in the economic, social, political, and cultural spheres of life in the Western world.
2. See the features of similar changes in Russia.
3. Study the preparatory materials for the lectures:

The nineteenth century is traditionally distinguished as a special period in Russian history. Chronologically, it practically coincides with the "long nineteenth century". It began with the French Revolution of the late 18th century and ended with the outbreak of World War I. It was then that Western Europe faced the challenges of the revolutionary movement, nationalism, industrial revolution, and alternative ideological projects. All this signified the economic, social, political, and cultural restructuring of the Western world after the collapse of the "Ancien régime" (the old rule) first in France and then in other European countries. Russia was also solving similar problems, although somewhat shifted in time.

The period in question is when Russia was closely involved in pan-European processes: not only international politics, but economic, cultural, scientific, and intellectual ones. At first, Russia primarily perceived and, in its own way, reinterpreted concepts that had developed outside its borders, and then managed to offer its own ideas, scientific achievements, literary and musical works that were distributed throughout the world.

A characteristic feature of the 19th century is the emergence of a special intellectual environment, which in historiography is usually called society. At the beginning of the 19th century, these were small representatives of the predominantly metropolitan aristocracy. At the beginning of the 20th century, these were already millions of people belonging to different classes and estates. Throughout the century, society was in a difficult relationship with the state power: they both interacted and fought. At the same time, we are talking about communicating vessels. Representatives of the public and the bureaucracy were connected with each other. Moreover, many representatives of the bureaucracy can be attributed to society. In this environment, ideas, concepts, alternative projects for the country's future matured: conservative, liberal and socialist. This was an important intellectual prerequisite for the development of a social movement in Russia, of which political parties also became a part.

The government sought to meet the challenges of the time. It decided on reforms that changed the way of life in the country everywhere. A striking example of this is the cycle of the Great Reforms by Alexander II, which affected the interests of almost all strata of the population.

The Great Reforms mark the end of the first half of the 19th century. In the government and public circles, the conviction that large-scale social, legal, and economic transformations were urgently needed had been growing for a long while. The question remained: where to begin; how to carry them out without shaking the foundations of the political system to the ground. There was a reasonable apprehension that, for example, the abolition of serfdom would upset the fragile social order. Projects for the upcoming reform were being prepared, which implied Russia's smooth entry into the new reality. Some minor reforms were carried out (Kiselev's reform of state peasants, inventory reform, reforms in the Baltic provinces, etc.), which were supposed to become a "rehearsal" for all-Russian events. However, the legislators were in no hurry to make some major steps. Only the painful defeat in the Crimean War pushed the government to take decisive steps.

On the other hand, the Great Reforms determined the vector of the country's further development. Serfdom was abolished, but the peasant actually remained attached to the land, without receiving the rights of ownership. In Russia, an all-class court and an all-class zemstvo were established. Both implied the preservation of classes that clearly did not correspond to the dynamically changing society. The Great Reforms contributed to the emergence of new strata of society: lawyers, zemstvo members, zemstvo employees appeared, there were more journalists, writers, engineers. These social groups ensured the functioning of the established institutions and at the same time were the "benefiters" of new reforms that were clearly not included in the government's plans. As a result, a typical situation developed: the authorities initiated the transformations, but were not always ready for their high pace. They reformed the periphery of the system, while preserving its core. As a result, the center of the system found itself in conflict with what surrounded it. The transformed court and self-government bodies did not get along well with the traditional mechanisms of the autocratic state.

The key issue, which was by no means subject to change, was the state system. It remained unshakable in a country that had changed beyond recognition in a century.

A problem that cannot be solved by reforms is swept away by a revolution. This is what happened in 1905–1907, when Russia entered a very short but significant period in its history. This was the time of the establishment of legislative representation (the State Duma and the reformed State Council), the legal existence of political parties, the holding of electoral campaigns, freedom of speech and the press. All this ensured the necessity of socio-economic reforms, usually associated with the name of P. A. Stolypin. In actual fact, the economic growth and legal advances of this period were a direct result of the First Revolution.

However, rapid changes and rapid growth are a serious test for any organism. Russia was progressed and changed due to crises, and when surviving them, it reached a new level of development. Such changes were a serious test for the system. In the context of the impending pan-European war, such changes became risk factors.

The 19th century Russia was firmly integrated into the continental processes. It was one of the great powers that participated in the formation of the "European Concert". In essence, Alexander I became the "architect" of the Viennese system and the leader of the Holy Alliance. Over the next decades, this system would falter. Pan-European congresses had to acknowledge the growing disagreements between the great powers. This was facilitated by the weakening of the Ottoman Empire, whose legacy was seen as a prize in the clash of the leading European states. The "concert" implied a constant balancing of conflicting interests: for example, Russia and Great Britain, which competed in the Balkans, the Middle East, and Central Asia.

The situation changed radically with the emergence of new influential and ambitious players: a united Italy and Germany. The previous balance of power was upset, and it was not possible to create a new one. This became an impetus for reformatting the entire system of international relations: the "concert" of great powers was replaced by competing blocs. The interests of key players clashed everywhere. Despite the importance of the European theater of diplomacy, Russia also built relations with its Asian neighbors, took control of Central Asia, and sought to establish itself in Manchuria and Korea.

The First World War marked a deep rift in the life of Europe. It is no coincidence that the "long nineteenth century" is often considered to end with its beginning. It was a war of a new type, a total war, which required the mobilization of all forces of the powers involved in this conflict. Not only armies competed, but also economies, social systems, and political regimes. The stability of the latter largely ensured the effectiveness of the "military machines." The political sphere turned out to be the "Achilles' heel" of the Russian Empire, which predetermined the revolutionary upheavals of 1917.

SEMESTER II

Module 1

Lecture 7. Russia and the USSR in the Soviet era (1917 – 1991)

Lecture 7.1. The Great Russian Revolution (1917–1922) and its main stages.

Contents:

1. The crisis of 1917. Causes of the revolutionary crisis of 1917
2. The overthrow of the autocracy and attempts to overcome the political crisis.
3. The overthrow of the Provisional Government, the seizure of power by the Bolsheviks in October 1917
4. The civil war as a special stage of the revolution.

Lecture 7.2. The Soviet Union in the 1920s - 1930s.

Contents:

1. Transition to the New Economic Policy. The most important transformations within the framework of the NEP.
2. Formation of the USSR and adoption of the USSR Constitution of 1924
3. Political struggle in the USSR in the 1920s
4. "The Great Turn ". Transition to the policy of forced industrialization and mass collectivization.
5. Soviet society in the 1930s. The Constitution of 1936 and its practical significance.

Lecture 7.3. The Great Patriotic War of 1941-1945. The Soviet people's struggle against Nazi Germany as a key component of World War II

Contents:

1. The main stages of the Great Patriotic War of 1941-1945.
2. The USSR and the allies.
3. The results of the Great Patriotic War and World War II.

Module 2

Lecture 7.4. Soviet society in 1945-1984

Contents:

1. Dealing with the consequences of war. The world after World War II
2. "Thaw" (second half of the 1950s - first half of the 1960s).
3. The authorities and society in the second half of the 1960s - early 1980s.

Lecture 7.5. The "perestroika" and the collapse of the USSR (1985-1991)

Contents:

1. Attempts to reform the USSR in the second half of the 1980s.
2. Exacerbation of interethnic conflicts. The GKChP putsch, the establishment of the Commonwealth of Independent States and the dissolution of the USSR.
3. Foreign policy of the "perestroika" period.

Tasks to prepare:

1. To understand public sentiment and the attitude of different strata of society and political parties towards the government and its institutions on the eve of 1917.
2. Understand the issues related to the elections and dispersal of the Constituent Assembly.
3. Understand the concept of urbanization, see the pros and cons of this process.
4. Understand the most well-known facts of falsification of the history of the Great Patriotic War and the Second World War.
5. Understand the concept of the "cold war" and its influence on the socio-economic development of the country.
6. Understand the essence of the "Sixtiers".
7. Determine the reasons for the collapse of the USSR and the relationship in this case of external and internal factors.
8. Understand the essence of such a phenomenon as "new thinking" and the consequences of this for the surrender of foreign policy positions by the leadership of the USSR.

9. Study the preparatory materials for the lectures:

The period between 1917–1922 was the time of particular significance for the fate of Russia and the entire world. The series of wars and revolutions that began with the catastrophe of World War I and the growth of national movements radically changed the map of the world. Four empires that had previously determined politics in Europe, including the Russian Empire, fell apart.

The mass deaths of soldiers and civilians, the militarization of the economy and active regulation of socio-economic processes by the state, a deep crisis of government institutions and previous moral and ethical standards resulted in a radicalization of public sentiment, both in Russia and abroad.

Against the backdrop of the crisis of old concepts, ideas of reorganizing society on the principles of social justice were gaining popularity. At that time, they were associated primarily with Marxism and communist ideas. The increasingly popular Russian Bolshevism, which emerged as a radical trend in social democracy, was a product of that era. The attention of the entire world was focused on Russia, where, following the revolution in 1917, the Bolsheviks began a unique Soviet experiment.

At the beginning of the 20th century, the Russian Empire experienced a particularly complex interweaving of economic, political, social, and national contradictions and conflicts. The First World War became their powerful catalyst. The revolution in Russia was not inevitable, but the combination of objective and subjective factors and circumstances eventually led to a revolutionary explosion – the Great Russian Revolution, which lasted from 1917 to 1922 and had a huge impact on the fate of Russia and the world in the 20th century.

In its development, the Great Russian Revolution, which is considered in modern historiography as a single process, went through several main stages. The most important points of the revolution are the events of February-March 1917, which led to the collapse of the monarchy, the seizure of power by the Bolsheviks in October 1917, which became the beginning of the Civil War bloodshed, which ended in the victory of the Bolsheviks.

The Civil War ended in 1922, if we mean the military actions in the Far East. But the main forces of the Whites were defeated at the end of 1920, and in the spring of 1921 the country faced the task of establishing a peaceful life in new conditions.

The transition to a peaceful life and to a new stage of development is associated primarily with the adoption of the New Economic Policy (NEP) in 1921 and the creation of a new state in 1922 on the ruins of the Russian Empire – the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. The economic and socio-demographic consequences of the period of wars and revolutions (1914–1922) were extremely severe. By the end of the Civil War, the country lay in ruins. The situation was aggravated by the terrible famine of 1921–1922, which led to the ruin of grain-producing regions and the death of millions of people. The economic crisis was accompanied by a growing political crisis: the ideology of “war communism” had exhausted itself, anti-Bolshevik protests broke out in the country, and there was a growth in dissatisfaction with the government even among workers and sailors, who were traditionally considered the social support of the Bolsheviks.

In an effort to retain power and find a way out of the crisis, the Soviet leadership, headed by V. I. Lenin, adopted the “New Economic Policy” (NEP), a set of socio-economic reforms, the consequences of which were reflected to one degree or another in the political sphere. The NEP as a temporary and largely forced measure proved its effectiveness. It allowed the country to be fed, production to be launched, and pre-war indicators to be basically restored by the mid-1920s. At the same time, the NEP (allowing private enterprise, hiring labor, and extracting profits through exploitation, etc.) was in many ways at odds not only with communist ideas, but also with the concepts of social justice in society. The exhaustion of the basic economic potential of the NEP and the growth of the social contradictions it generated led to the abandonment of this policy in 1928.

An important historical event was the creation of the USSR in 1922, in other words, the unification of the Soviet republics that emerged during the Civil War in the territory of the former Russian Empire. Although the founders of this federal state were 4 equal republics - the RSFSR, the Ukrainian, Belarusian and Transcaucasian SSR, in fact the creation of the USSR became possible primarily due to the efforts of the RSFSR. Since then on until the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1991, it was the Russian Federation that was the backbone of the union state.

Since the 1920s, all the main issues of the federation's life have been decided in Moscow, including the development of Soviet national policy. At that time, it was largely aimed at correcting the "distortions" inherited from pre-revolutionary times. Formally, the discussion was about the development of national cultures, and often about the targeted formation of national identities and national elites. The implementation of national policy was carried out, among other things, within the framework of the so-called "indigenization" policy. During its implementation, it was not always possible to maintain a balance between the course towards the development of national cultures and the principles of internationalism. In many ways, it affected lands where a predominantly Russian population lived, such as the territory of Donbass, Novorossiia and other regions that were annexed to Ukraine. In the implementation of "indigenization" there were manifestations of formalism, and its results often led to the imposition of a culture, language, and identity alien to people. In the 1930s, this work was largely curtailed.

In the 1920s, innovative social, cultural and educational reforms were carried out in the USSR, many of which were later adopted by other countries. An active fight was waged against child homelessness and illiteracy, the protection of motherhood and childhood flourished, as well as ensuring equal rights for women. At the same time, the course towards creating a "new human" was accompanied by a fight against religion, the closure and destruction of churches, religious institutions, and repression against the clergy and religious believers.

By the end of the 1920s, the USSR faced new challenges. The exhaustion of the NEP potential against the backdrop of growing technical and technological lag behind the leading Western countries, and the aggravation of the international situation threatening a new war, led to a transition to forced industrialization and a planned, state-regulated economy of the mobilization type. The collectivization of the village, the introduction of compulsory education, and developed fundamental and applied science were seen as conditions for a technological breakthrough, a guaranteed supply of bread for the population, and literate workers for production.

In the 1930s, the country was going through a period of modernization and cultural revolution in the broad sense of the word. People's lives were changing literally right in front of them, but these lives were full of difficulties and contradictions. The rapidity of the processes that were unfolding in the USSR at that time for the first time in world history gave rise to many mistakes. On the one hand, "social elevators" began to work, and unprecedented opportunities for self-realization and career growth opened up for ordinary people. The USSR saw high rates of annual economic growth. Plants and factories were built and reconstructed, they were equipped with modern foreign equipment, and entire new branches of industry appeared. By the end of the 1930s, a generation of people raised on Soviet values and patriotism had grown up in the USSR.

On the other hand, in the 1930s, “Stalinist socialism” was built, with a dictatorship of the leader, authoritarian methods of governance, ideologisation of life, attachment of peasants to collective farms; with the widespread use of forced labour of prisoners and mass political repressions.

The unresolved issues of the First World War and the dissatisfaction with its results on the part of a number of states led to the fact that over the next two decades humanity was on the threshold of a new world war. In fact, the war began on July 7, 1937, after a massive invasion of Japanese troops into Chinese territory. The rapid involvement of European states in the global conflict was facilitated by the fact that the war finally acquired a global character on September 1, 1939, after Germany's attack on Poland. France and England with all their dominions opposed Germany, and the Nazis were supported by the Axis countries: Italy and Japan. The entry of the Soviet Union into the war was of exceptional importance for the further course of the Second World War and its results, and was a result of the attack on the USSR by Nazi Germany. Thus the Great Patriotic War of the Soviet people began.

The invasion of the USSR on June 22, 1941 by the troops of Nazi Germany and its European satellites became one of the biggest ordeals that our country has ever had to endure. In the first months, the Red Army retreated with heavy losses. Only through the joint heroic efforts of the front and rear, rallying around the country's leadership and mobilizing all resources, was it possible to stop the enemy and defeat him in the Battle for Moscow.

For the Soviet people, the Great Patriotic War became a war for survival and for the preservation of sovereignty. Hitler planned to expand the "living space for the Aryan nation" at the expense of the territory of the USSR. The victims of genocide were not only Jews and gypsies. Some of the Slavs and representatives of other peoples of the USSR, classified by the Nazis as “second-class” people, were planned to be exterminated, some were to be deported beyond the Urals, and others were to be left as slaves to serve the German settlers.

However, these misanthropic plans were not destined to come true. After the first major defeat near Moscow, which meant the collapse of the strategy of a lightning war, in 1942 the Nazis were forced to reorganize for a long war and change tactics. Now the main attack was directed towards the Caucasus, to cut off the Soviet Union from the oil fields and deprive it of the opportunity to continue the war. However, during the Battle of Stalingrad, the Soviet troops inflicted irreparable damage on the enemy. The victory of the Soviet troops in the Battle of Kursk and the subsequent offensive on the front from Smolensk to the Black Sea marked the completion of the radical turning point in the war that had begun at Stalingrad. From that moment on, the strategic initiative belonged entirely to the USSR. Partisans and guerilla fighters made a significant contribution to the defeat of the enemy. Subsequently, as a result of successful combat operations, Soviet territory was liberated in 1944. The Red Army pursued the enemy to Berlin, liberating the peoples of Eastern and Central Europe from Nazi occupation.

The Great Patriotic War was a key component of the entire Second World War (September 1, 1939 – September 2, 1945), in which the USSR was part of the Anti-Hitler Coalition. However, the outcome of the Second World War depended primarily on the events on the Soviet-German front. Here the main forces of the Wehrmacht (two-thirds of the military potential) were defeated, and the fighting was the most brutal. During the war, the USSR lost 27 million people, more than half of these victims were civilians. By comparison: the total military losses of the USA and Great Britain in World War II did not exceed 1 million people, and the losses of civilians in these countries were incomparable with similar losses of the USSR.

The 40-year period 1945–1984 includes several main stages. During the first of them, which ended mainly in the early 1950s, the Soviet people managed, thanks to heroic efforts, to restore the country destroyed by the war in the shortest possible time.

In the 1960s and 1970s, the USSR achieved its power: the country largely overcame the political consequences of Stalinism (personal dictatorship, mass political repressions, the GULAG, etc.). The economy developed successfully, the income from which was directed to improving the well-being of the population and social programs. The store shelves were filled with at least basic goods and products. During these years, the Soviet Union achieved outstanding scientific and technical achievements: in space exploration, the use of the nuclear power for civilian purposes, etc. The Soviet education system that operated at that time was considered the best in the world. The USSR had a developed network of scientific institutions.

The USSR also enjoyed high authority at the global arena. It actively helped the countries of the "third world"; it was the leader of the socialist camp, which operated within the framework of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance and the Warsaw Pact. In the 1970s, the USSR achieved parity with the USA in the field of armaments, becoming one of the two superpowers.

However, the Soviet system was not perfect; it needed to be reformed in accordance with the needs of the time. Over time, delays or failures in economic and political reforms, and the reluctance to get rid of outdated ideological dogmas began to noticeably affect the situation in the country. The economic slowdown was connected with the exhaustion of its mobilization model and extensive capabilities, low labor productivity, the rejection of technological innovations by enterprises, etc. The situation in the sphere of consumption, where the shortage of some goods coexisted with the overstocking of things that were not in demand, caused great complaints from citizens.

Dogmatism and formalism were characteristic of the ideological sphere. In the country, everything was decided by the party and the nomenklatura, and the real role of the Soviets and their deputies, contrary to the Constitution, was reduced to a minimum. All this predetermined the growth of contradictions, crisis phenomena and public discontent.

Despite the Soviet leadership's attempts to form a new community ("Soviet people"), by the mid-1980s national relations in the USSR began to gradually worsen. At that time, this tension was mostly latent. These processes finally came to light during the "perestroika".

However, not all spheres of life in the period of late socialism were in a state of crisis or "stagnation". The standard of living of people increased, social programs funding increased too. The military-industrial complex continued to develop. The development of oil and gas fields in Western Siberia gave new impetus to the development of the fuel and energy complex. Positive dynamics were observed in creative fields: science, culture, and education.

By the mid-1980s, the negative trends that were holding back the country's development began to mount. The General Secretary of the CPSU Central Committee M. S. Gorbachev, who came to power in the USSR in 1985, announced the beginning of radical economic and political reforms with the goal of "renewing socialism." Many initiatives of the perestroika period to develop glasnost, remove political censorship, return power from the party to the Soviets, etc. met active support of society. Other measures, especially in the economic sphere and in the area of federal relations, were sometimes implemented in a hurry, without comprehensive consideration of the consequences of the decisions taken. As a result, in 1989–1990, the government headed by Gorbachev, which had initiated the reforms, began to lose control over the situation in the country. Real power ended up in the hands of the republican leaders, who took a course first toward economic and then toward political independence from the consolidated center.

In 1989–1990, the “parade of sovereignties,” accompanied by a “war of laws” (the republics stopped recognizing the union’s legislation), became a reflection of the beginning of the destruction of not only the Soviet political and economic system, but also the foundations of statehood.

In this situation, much depended on the position of the "backbone" of the Soviet Union - the RSFSR and its leader B. N. Yeltsin. However, on June 12, 1990, the Declaration of State Sovereignty of the RSFSR was adopted, which gave impetus to the acceleration of decentralization trends. Gorbachev's attempts to save the country by concluding a "renewed" union treaty on the basis of a confederation after the "August putsch" of the State Emergency Committee in 1991 were unsuccessful. In December 1991, in Belovezhskaya Pushcha, secretly from Gorbachev, the heads of the RSFSR, Ukrainian and Belarusian SSRs made a decision to dissolve the USSR.

Although such actions contradicted union legislation, the March 1991 referendum on the preservation of the USSR and international acts on the indivisibility of post-war borders, the news of the liquidation of the Soviet Union was approved abroad. Gorbachev initiated a “new political thinking” during the period of perestroika, calling for an end to the confrontation in the “cold war.” Demonstrating good will, he sometimes made unilateral concessions. Gorbachev contributed to the unification of Germany, the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Europe, etc. This made him popular among ordinary people in the West. However, the leaders of these countries saw Gorbachev's position primarily as a manifestation of weakness and an opportunity to take advantage of the situation in their own interests. Thus, the USSR lost in the "cold war".

Lecture 8. The Modern Russian Federation (1991-2025)

1. The Main Trends, Problems and Contradictions of World History at the Beginning of the 21st Century
2. The Economic and Socio-Political Development of Russia in the 1990s
3. Foreign Policy in 2000–2022

4. The Main Directions of the Russian Federation's Domestic Policy in the First Decades of the 21st Century.

Tasks to prepare:

1. Understand the concept of a post-industrial society.
2. Understand the essence of such a concept as a "multipolar world".
3. Study the preparatory materials for the lectures:

After the dissolution of the USSR, the question arose about choosing a model for Russia's development in the new conditions. It was necessary to ensure the transition from a planned-distributive economy to an economy based on market relations and private property. The main components of the reforms of the early 1990s were the liberalization of prices and the introduction of free trade, and the privatization of state property. The reforms caused hyperinflation, unemployment, criminalization, and a sharp decline in living standards. Yeltsin's reforms did not lead to an improvement in the economy, but to an even greater deepening of the crisis compared to the period of "perestroika."

The pledge auctions held in the mid-1990s, as a result of which a circle of businessmen close to the government were able to acquire for next to nothing the most profitable oil and gas, mining and processing enterprises, created by the labor of several generations of Soviet people, caused great criticism. At the time, a group of oligarchs emerged controlling the media and claiming political influence in Russia.

The collapse of the USSR did not stop separatist aspirations in Russia, on the other hand, they worsened as the economic situation worsened. Chechnya in the 1990s became a haven for international terrorism and crime, and Russian laws did not apply there. This became the basis for several military operations to normalize life and restore constitutional order.

As disillusionment with market reforms grew in 1992, opposition sentiments began to grow, and the Supreme Soviet of the RSFSR was . The situation led to a split within the Russian political elite, which in 1993 turned into a state of acute crisis. The fierce struggle between the president and the opposition led to tragedy - an armed confrontation in Moscow in the fall of 1993 and the shooting of the White House on Yeltsin's orders. The political crisis was resolved with the adoption of the Constitution of the Russian Federation at the end of 1993. It significantly strengthened the powers of the president and changed the political structure of the country. Nevertheless, the political and economic situation in Russia remained unstable until the end of the 1990s.

After the collapse of the USSR, a fundamentally new situation developed in the international arena. The revision of the post-war world order was associated with the formation of a unipolar world, with the military-political dominance of the USA and NATO. Russia became the legal successor of the USSR in the international arena. It managed to retain the USSR's previous permanent membership in the UN Security Council and to achieve the withdrawal of the USSR's entire nuclear potential to its territory.

During the negotiations on the unification of Germany in 1990, USSR President M. S. Gorbachev was promised that NATO would not expand east of the borders of a united Germany. However, these verbal promises were not put into the form of international agreements, which gave Western leaders grounds to pretend that they did not exist.

The main goal of the US leadership was to turn Russia into a country that followed the American policy. However, by the mid-1990s, doubts about the partnership relations increased in Russian society. In 1999, relations between Russia and the West noticeably worsened due to the US and NATO bombing of Yugoslavia.

In general, Russia entered the 21st century weakened economically and militarily, with a large burden of internal problems that required solutions.

At the end of 1999, Russian President B. N. Yeltsin announced his resignation due to health reasons. The presidential elections held in March 2000 were won by Prime Minister V. V. Putin. He was re-elected as President of the Russian Federation in 2004, 2012 and 2018. In 2008–2012, under President D. A. Medvedev, V. V. Putin headed the government of the Russian Federation, thus remaining at the helm of the country.

In 2000, Russia entered a new long period of its history, which led to noticeable changes both within the country and in the international arena. It was possible to strengthen the vertical power structure and the integrity of the country, and to increase the efficiency of public administration. Regional laws were brought into line with all-Russian ones, and norms that did not correspond to them were cancelled. The oligarchic clans interfering in politics were done away with. The fight against international terrorism was successfully waged. The establishment of peace in Chechnya contributed to the stabilization of the situation not only in the North Caucasus, but also in Russia as a whole. In 2003, a referendum was held in the Chechen Republic on the adoption of a Constitution recognizing Chechnya as an integral part of the Russian Federation.

The government stimulated economic development and an increase in the well-being of citizens. Since 2005, Russia has begun implementing priority national projects in the areas of healthcare and education, demographic policy, affordable mortgage housing, development of the agro-industrial complex, etc. As a result, the income level of Russians in the 2000s was increased by an average of 2-3 times.

The deterioration of the international situation, the refusal of the United States and NATO to recognize Russia's national interests, and the course pursued by the American leadership to build a unipolar world was of great concern.

The expansion of NATO and its military infrastructure to the east posed a particular danger to Russia. In 1999, Hungary, Poland, and the Czech Republic became NATO members. In 2004, Bulgaria, Romania, Slovakia, Slovenia, and Latvia, Lithuania, and Estonia, which border on Russia, joined the alliance. After Ukraine and Georgia formally applied to join NATO in 2008, it became clear that their admission to the alliance was a matter of time. Russia's repeated offers of talks that would take its national interests into account, as well as warnings about "red lines" that would force Russia to take retaliatory measures, were ignored. In addition, the United States and its allies have withdrawn from the basic arms control and reduction agreements with Russia that have kept the world from global conflict for decades. These include: the refusal of NATO countries to ratify the Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe, updated in 1999, the US withdrawal from the ABM Treaty in 2002, from the Treaty on Open Skies in 2018, and from the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces Treaty in 2019.

In 2008, the Georgian armed forces, trained and encouraged by NATO, carried out a military provocation in South Ossetia, attacking the Russian peacekeeping contingent stationed there and then the city of Tskhinvali. Russia defended South Ossetia and, despite Western protests, recognized its independence. The independence of another former Georgian autonomy, Abkhazia, was also recognized.

In 2014, after the unconstitutional coup in Kyiv, residents of the Crimean peninsula voted for its accession to the Russian Federation. Another source of tension near the Russian borders arose in connection with the military actions of the Kyiv regime against the Donetsk and Lugansk People's Republics proclaimed in 2014. The Minsk Agreements of 2014–2015, concluded with the active participation of Russia with the aim of peacefully resolving this conflict, were torpedoed by the Kyiv regime and Western countries. The situation in Ukraine, whose leadership turned it into “anti-Russia” and, with the help of NATO, prepared for the “return of Crimea and Donbass,” led to the inevitability of a special military operation by Russia in 2022.

The entry of new regions into the Russian Federation - the DPR, LPR, Kherson and Zaporizhzhya regions - is one of the main intermediate results of the special operation. As part of Russia, these regions will be able to freely develop for the benefit of the entire country and all citizens of the Russian Federation.

Practical class 1. General issues of the course. Peoples and states on the territory of modern Russia and in ancient times. Formation of the state of Rus.

1. History as a science.
2. Chronological and geographical framework of the course of Russian history.
3. History of Russia and world history.
4. The beginning of the Middle Ages. Eastern Europe in the middle of the 1st millennium AD.
5. The problem of the formation of the Old Russian state. Discussions about the so-called Norman theory and modern scientific views on the problem.
6. Formation of the territorial-political structure of Rus'.
7. Adoption of Christianity and its significance.

Tasks to prepare:

When starting to study the history of Russia, it is necessary to define the subject, objectives and methodology of the discipline, to consider the stages of the formation and development of our country over many centuries. It is very important for students to become familiar with the list of sources and literature recommended by the department to study. Students should see that during the settlement of the Slavs across the East European Plain in the 6th–8th centuries, which became the final stage of the Migration Period, the eastern branch of the Slavs was formed. When studying this topic, one should also analyze the numerous factors that influenced the formation of the state in ancient Rus': socio-economic, domestic political, foreign policy and others, and see what is common and what is special in comparison with European states of that time. It is necessary to examine the basic postulates of the "Norman theory" of the origin of statehood in Rus' and be able to criticize this theory, to present the objective process of territorial, socio-political development of the Eastern Slavs. It is necessary to substantiate the conclusion that the formation of the state and the adoption of Christianity were integral parts of the processes of political genesis and Christianization that engulfed most of Europe at the end of the first millennium AD.

"Prove your point": students need to justify their point of view regarding the origin of the Russian state (Normanists - Anti-Normanists).

Sample topics for essays:

1. History of Russia in the system of humanitarian sciences.
2. Modern trends in the scientific study of history.

Practical class 2. Rus' in the late 10th - early 13th centuries.

1. Features of the social system during the Middle Ages in Europe and Asia.
2. The state system of Kievan Rus'. Central and local government.
3. Formation of Old Russian law: customary law, judicial practice, treaties between Rus' and Byzantium, legislative activity of princes.
4. Church organization and jurisdiction. Reception of Byzantine law. Church statutes, Kormchaia Book.

Tasks to prepare:

It is necessary to see that the Old Russian state developed the same way as European countries. First of all, this concerns the dominant role of the prince and the nobility that served him, the system of centralized exploitation of the dependent population, and the relatively late development of land ownership by the nobility.

When studying the state system of Kievan Rus, it is necessary to characterize the form of government at this stage - the early feudal monarchy, and also to consider the structure and competence of the central and local government bodies. When studying ancient Russian law, it is necessary to identify its main features, become familiar with the sources, and determine the degree and significance of the reception of Byzantine law in the formation of the legal system of Rus'.

Sample topics for essays:

1. Administrative and legal reforms of the first Kyiv princes.
2. Peculiarities of the development of Asian states during the Middle Ages.

Practical class 3. Rus' in the 13th – 15th centuries.

Practical class 3.1. Russian lands in the mid-13th – 14th centuries.

1. Prerequisites and the main features of the appanage period.
2. Kiev, Vladimir-Suzdal, Galicia-Volhynia principalities.

3. Novgorod and Pskov feudal republics. Social and state structure.
4. Development of the legal system in the appanage period. Features of law in the northwest of Rus'.

Tasks to prepare for practical classes:

When considering this topic, first of all, it is necessary to indicate the prerequisites for the transition from a relatively unified state structure to sovereign states-principalities, to study the main features and stages of political fragmentation in Rus' in the 12th-15th centuries. It is necessary to carry out a comparative analysis of the socio-economic and political development of the main centers of the appanage period - the Kyiv, Galicia-Volhynia, Vladimir-Suzdal principalities, with special attention paid to the unique Novgorod-Pskov republican system. When studying the sources of law of the appanage period, it is also necessary to highlight the peculiarities of the legal system of northwestern Rus'.

Creative problem-solving task: comparative analysis of the features inherent in the Pskov Judicial Charter and the Russkaya Pravda.

Practical class 3.2. Formation of a unified Russian state in the 15th century. Europe and the world in the Late Middle Ages.

1. Features of the political development of European countries. The Mongol Empire. Conquests of Genghis Khan and his descendants. The system of dependence of Russian principalities on the Horde khans.
2. The Orders of the Crusaders and the relations of the Russian lands with them. Alexander Nevsky and the opposition to expansion from the West.
3. Principalities of North-Eastern Rus'. Strengthening of the Moscow Principality.
4. Relations between Rus' and the Horde: modern scientific ideas and controversial issues.

Tasks to prepare:

This topic assumes an understanding of the fact that the period from the mid-13th to the 15th centuries became a time of drastic changes in the fate of Rus'. The blow dealt to the Russian lands by the Mongol conquerors in the mid-13th century seriously influenced their development.

It is necessary to understand why the Russian lands found themselves politically and economically weakened and became dependent on foreign power.

It should be noted that the Mongol Empire became the most powerful state in Eastern Europe and the northwestern part of Asia, and after its collapse, the Horde (Golden Horde). The lands of Northeastern Rus' became dependent on the Horde khans. During the second half of the 13th – early 15th centuries, the western and southern Russian lands became part of state entities of foreign ethnic origin – the Grand Duchy of Lithuania and the Kingdom of Poland.

It is necessary to note that North-Eastern Rus', after establishing dependence on the Horde, was mainly part of the system of the Grand Principality of Vladimir. Within its framework, the process of unification of Russian lands began, the center of which gradually became the Moscow Principality, whose princes, by the end of the 14th century, after a long struggle, secured for themselves the Grand Principality of Vladimir and the right to be called “Grand Dukes of All Rus'.” The political development of North-West Rus' followed different paths. In Novgorod (Veliky Novgorod) and Pskov, a republican system was formed, which had features close to Western European urban communes and republics.

Creative problem-solving task: determine your position in the debates in science and journalism about the “historical choice” of Alexander Nevsky between the West and the East.

Practical class 3.3. Old Russian culture.

1. The main achievements of world culture in the Middle Ages.
2. Features of Old Russian culture.
3. The main genres of Old Russian literature. Landmarks of historical and legal thought.
4. Old Russian fine art.
5. Old Russian architecture.

Tasks to prepare:

It is necessary to understand the pre-Christian culture of the Eastern Slavs and see its distinctive features. It is important to evaluate such a phenomenon as the baptism of Rus' for the further development of both Old Russian culture and Russian culture as a whole.

Based on the materials of the textbook, it is necessary to characterize the main directions of medieval European culture in general, and Old Russian culture in particular.

Creative problem-solving task: study the features of education and the level of literacy in ancient Rus' using the sample of birchbark letters.

Practical class 4. Russia in the 16th – 17th centuries

Practical class 4.1. The world at the beginning of the Modern Era. Russia at the beginning of the 16th century. The era of Ivan IV the Terrible.

1. Origin of the concept of " Modern Era", chronological framework and periodization. Formation of national states in Europe. Concept and distinctive features of absolutism.

2. Completion of the unification of Russian lands under the rule of the Grand Dukes of Moscow.

3. Reforms of Ivan IV the Terrible.
4. Oprichnina.
5. Foreign policy of the Russian state.

Tasks to prepare:

It should be understood that the 16th and 17th centuries became the time when the peculiarities of Russia's historical development became quite clearly evident. During the lesson it is necessary to understand the following thing. Having created of a single national state at the beginning of the 16th century, synchronously with a number of European powers (Spain and France) and even significantly ahead of some other countries (Germany and Italy), the Russian state, due to its geographical location and the lack of convenient access to sea trade routes, found itself weakly involved in pan-European processes (strengthening of commodity-money relations, rise of industry and shipbuilding, development of science). It is necessary to understand that here, as in a number of Eastern European countries, serfdom tendencies were preserved and further developed, largely due to the peculiarities of the geopolitical position of the country, which did not have reliable natural borders and significant human and financial resources to organize their defense. Against this background, like a number of European states, the political development of Russia followed the path of forming an absolutist model of power. It is necessary to show that the formation of the Russian version of absolutism - autocracy - was significantly accelerated during the reign of Ivan IV the Terrible, especially during the period of the oprichnina, when, with the help of political terror, the fundamental unlimited power of the monarch was established and consolidated in practice.

"Prove your point": students need to justify their point of view on the oprichnina, its causes and consequences.

Sample topics for essays:

1. The doctrine of "Moscow is the Third Rome".
2. The first Zemsky Sobors, the issue of class representation in the Russian state.

Practical class 4.2. Russia in the 17th century.

1. Prerequisites for the systemic crisis of the Russian state at the beginning of the 17th century.
2. The Time of Troubles as a full-scale civil war.
3. Russia in the 17th century: contradictions of the development.

Tasks to prepare:

It should be noted that the contradictions of internal development, combined with complex relations with neighboring powers, resulted in the severe crisis of the Time of Troubles at the beginning of the 17th century, which almost led to the liquidation of the state. The suppression of the royal dynasty in the country, which was perceived by the majority of its population as the hereditary patrimony of the Moscow branch of the Rurik family, and the emergence of elected sovereigns provoked a decline in the legitimacy of the central government. The combination of political crisis with acute economic problems, social conflicts and contradictions between the population of the center of the country and its outskirts led to a full-scale civil war, complicated by the intervention of neighboring states, primarily the Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth and Sweden. At the cost of great human and territorial losses, state sovereignty was defended.

Then it should be understood that the restoration of statehood in the 17th century proceeded primarily towards the previous political and socio-economic models left behind by the previous century, which often contradicted the needs of society in the new socio-economic realities. The establishment of the autocratic power of the tsars and the desire to restore the positions lost during the Time of Troubles at the international arena required significant resources and provoked an increase in the tax burden on the taxable population which manifested itself through the serfs' burden and inability to leave the land they were bound to. This led to a series of social upheavals in the middle and second half of the 17th century. A special place in their series belongs to the schism of the Russian Orthodox Church.

" Prove your point ": students must justify their point of view on the discussion about the causes and chronology of the Time of Troubles in Russia.

Sample topics for essays:

1. Social and political motives for the enslavement of peasants.
2. Disputes among scientists about the possibility of Russia joining the mainstream of the Central European (Polish) political model.

Practical class 5. Russia in the 18th century

Practical class 5.1. Russia in the era of Peter I's reforms. The era of "palace coups". 1725-1762

1. The need for reforms. Methods, means, principles and goals of reforms.
2. Distinctive features of foreign and domestic policy. The toll of reforms.
3. Prerequisites and main factors of political instability in Russia after Peter I.
4. The reign of Anna Ioannovna, the features of her domestic policy.
5. The reign of Elizabeth Petrovna. Peter III and the results of his short reign in the sphere of domestic policy.

Tasks to prepare:

The development of the country and its political system in the 18th century was by no means smooth and conflict-free. Immediately after the death of Peter I, a long period of political instability began, known as the era of "palace coups". It should be understood that these coups did not change the essence of the socio-political system in the country, underlining the violent way in which government officials were dealt with. It is necessary to see that in the course of this struggle the interests of various groups of the nobility clashed: the old aristocracy and the recently elevated nobles, Russians and foreigners by origin, the phenomenon of favoritism became widespread, and the decisive role in these events belonged to the guard and military force. All this was a consequence of a certain immaturity of state institutions that arose under Peter I, but had not yet become strong.

The question of autocratic power and its limits was quite obvious in this struggle. During the accession of Anna Ioannovna to the throne, a group of aristocrats from among the members of the Supreme Privy Council attempted to limit the power of the empress, but failed, since the overwhelming majority of the nobility unequivocally spoke out in support of autocracy.

" Prove your point ": students need to decide on a question related to resistance to reforms and draw a conclusion whether it was a conscious disagreement or spontaneous discontent.

Sample topics for essays:

1. The state and the church in the era of Peter I.
2. Discussions about the results and historical significance of Peter I's reforms.

Practical class 5. Russia in the second half of the 18th century. The era of Catherine II. Russian culture of the 18th century.

1. The 18th century as the century of the Enlightenment.

2. The domestic policy of Catherine II.
3. The main directions of a foreign policy in the second half of the 18th century.
4. Russian culture of the Peter the Great era.
5. Features of the culture of the mid-18th century.
6. Domestic culture of the Catherine era.

Tasks to prepare:

It is necessary to understand how in Russia, especially during the reign of Catherine II, under the influence of the ideas of the Enlightenment, measures were taken to involve the estates in local government, develop legislation (the Legislative Commission of 1767–1769), and develop journalism, science, and education. It is important to understand that after Peter I, throughout the 18th century, the international authority of the Russian Empire steadily grew. As one of the leading powers on the world stage, Russia pursued an active foreign policy, achieving the most important results: ensuring security along the entire perimeter of the borders, annexing the Northern Black Sea region, advancing in the eastern and northeastern directions, and acquiring territories in Northwest America. It is important to realize that, at the same time as strengthening the international position, the government pursued a balanced national and religious policy aimed at ensuring stability within the empire, strengthening power at the center and in the regions, and maintaining peace in interethnic relations.

It is also necessary to understand the peculiarities of cultural development throughout the century and to assess new trends in Russian art connected with the influence of European fine arts.

" Prove your point ": decide whether there was a certain system during the Paul I's reign or whether the measures that he introduced were chaotic.

Practical class 6. The Russian Empire in the 19th – early 20th centuries.

Practical class 6.1. The Russian Empire in the 19th century.

1. Europe and the world in the 19th century.
2. Russia in the first quarter of the 19th century.
3. Russia in the second quarter of the 19th century.
4. The time of the Great Reforms in Russia.

Tasks to prepare:

It is necessary to study the reorganization of the highest state administration of the first quarter of the 19th century (the State Council, ministries, the Committee of Ministers) in the era of "governmental constitutionalism" of Emperor Alexander I and to trace the changes in the new governmental model in the era of "political reaction" of Emperor Nicholas I in the second quarter of the 19th century. When considering the attempts to make the state system of Russia more democratic, it is necessary to pay special attention to the political projects and statesmanship of M.M. Speransky.

The study of the Great Reforms should begin with a characteristic of their historical prerequisites, conditioned by the crisis of the feudal-serf system and the need for a transition to a bourgeois society. It is necessary to outline the general policy of reforms of the government of Alexander II. A particular attention should be paid to the main one - the Peasant Reform of 1861: to consider the process of preparation of the reform project, to study the legislative acts on the emancipation of peasants and the purchase of landowners land.

It is important to analyze the rights of the new class of free rural inhabitants, the stages and principles of allocating land to peasants, the procedure for the redemption operation, and to point out the positive aspects of the reform and its shortcomings.

"Creative problem-solving assignment": Speransky statesmanship.

Sample topics of essays:

1. The Constitution of the Kingdom of Poland of 1815
2. The University reforms in Russia in the first half of the 19th century.

Practical class 6.2. The First Russian Revolution. The Russian Empire in 1907-1914.

1. The Revolution of 1905-1907 and changes in the state and political system of Russia.

2. Fundamental state laws of 1906.

3. The State Duma in Russia 1906-1917. Formation of political parties in Russia. Activities, reasons for the dissolution of the 1st and 2nd sessions of the Duma. New electoral law of June 3, 1907. Legislative work of the Duma of the 3rd session. Legal policy of the P.A. Stolypin government.

Tasks to prepare:

It is necessary to indicate the prerequisites for the revolution and, accordingly, bourgeois-democratic reforms in the country. It is important to highlight the main stages of the transition to a constitutional monarchy, to trace the development of the State Duma competences, the democratization of the electoral legislation. It is also necessary to note the new status of the Council of Ministers, the establishment of the position of the Prime Minister and the transformation of the State Council into the upper house of parliament. When studying the legislation on civil liberties, special attention should be paid to the Manifesto of October 17, 1905. When characterizing the form of government according to the Fundamental State Laws amended on April 23, 1906, it is necessary to consider that the issue of transition to a constitutional monarchy is debatable.

The study of the Russian parliament activities in the first quarter of the 20th century must be linked to the development of the political party system in Russia. When examining the activities of the Duma of the 1st and 2nd sessions, it is important to take into account its Cadet majority; the Duma of the 3rd session were guided by "Octobrist pendulum" was of decisive importance. It is necessary to study the content of the electoral law of June 3, 1907, to indicate the norms of the Fundamental State Laws of 1906, violated by this legislative document. It is important to get acquainted with the various assessments of historians of the reformist activities of the government of P.A. Stolypin for students to form their own point of view on this issue.

"Brainstorming": Why is the dissolution of the State Duma on June 3, 1907 called a "coup d'etat"?

"Brainstorming": How did the direction of Stolypin's agrarian reform differ from the basic principles of the Peasant Reform of 1861?

Practical class 6.3. The First World War and Russia.

1. The First World War and the transformation of the political system of Russia.

2. Stages of military operations.

Tasks to prepare:

It is necessary to understand why the First World War marked a deep rift in the life of Europe. It is no coincidence that the "long nineteenth century" is often considered to have ended with its beginning. It was a new type of war, a global war that required the mobilization of all forces of the powers involved in the conflict. Not only armies competed, but also economies, social systems, and political regimes did. The stability of the latter largely ensured the effectiveness of the "war machines". It is also necessary to characterize the changes that occurred in Russian public opinion from the beginning of the war to the beginning of 1917.

Creative problem-solving assignment: the formation of the Progressive Bloc: was there a real alternative to the further development of Russia along the path of a constitutional monarchy.

Practical class 6.4. Culture in Russia in the 19th – early 20th centuries.

1. The Golden Age of Russian culture.

2. The culture of the Silver Age.

Tasks to prepare:

It is necessary to understand the main trends of Russian science and culture and evaluate their contribution to world development.

Creative problem-solving assignment: to evaluate the transition towards individuality in the works of the "World of Art" artists and towards the avant-garde in the works of V. V. Kandinsky, K. S. Malevich, N. S. Goncharova.

Practical class 7. Russia and the USSR in the Soviet era (1917 – 1991)

Practical class 7.1. The Great Russian Revolution (1917–1922) and its main stages. The Civil War as a special stage of the revolution.

1. The February Revolution of 1917. The state and political crisis of 1916–1917. The overthrow of the monarchy in Russia. Dual power.

2. Changes in the state system during the republic.

3. The question of the Constituent Assembly. Legislation on elections to the Constituent Assembly.

4. The main frontlines of the Civil War and military operations on them.
5. Social and economic transformations of the Bolsheviks during the Civil War. The policy of "War Communism".

Tasks to prepare:

It is necessary to consider the stages of establishing a republican form of government in Russia: the dissolution of the State Duma of the 4th session in February 1917, the abdication of power of Emperor Nicholas II and the creation of the Provisional Government in March 1917. However, it is necessary to take into account the temporary nature of the new state system, based on a compromise between the Provisional Government and the Petrograd Soviet of Workers' and Soldiers' Deputies ("dual power"). The final decision on the issues of power, land and peace was to be made by the Constituent Assembly. It is from this position that the activities of the Provisional Government and the reforms it carried out must be assessed.

The seizure of power by the Bolsheviks in October 1917 became the prologue to the bloody Civil War, which ended with the victory of the Bolsheviks.

Creative problem-solving assignment: to characterize the ideology of the "white movement" and the most important anti-Bolshevik governments.

Practical class 7.2. The Soviet Union in the 1920s - 1930s.

1. Transition to the New Economic Policy.
2. The most important transformations within the framework of the NEP.
3. Formation of the USSR and adoption of the USSR Constitution of 1924
4. Political struggle in the USSR in the 1920s
5. "The Great Turn ". Transition to the policy of forced industrialization and mass collectivization.
6. Soviet society in the 1930s. The 1936 Constitution and its practical significance.

Tasks to prepare:

It is necessary to characterize the comprehensive crisis experienced by the Soviet state at the beginning of 1921. It is necessary to understand the following: in an effort to retain power and find a way out of the crisis, the Soviet leadership, headed by V. I. Lenin, adopted the "New Economic Policy" (NEP) – a set of socio-economic reforms, the consequences of which were reflected to one degree or another in the political sphere. The NEP as a temporary and largely forced measure proved its effectiveness. It allowed the country to be fed, production to be launched, and pre-war indicators to be basically restored by the mid-1920s. At the same time, the practice of the NEP (allowing private enterprise, hiring labor and extracting profits through exploitation, etc.) in many ways ran counter not only to communist ideas, but also to the concepts of social justice in society. The exhaustion of the main economic potential of the NEP and the growth of social contradictions generated by it led to the abandonment of this policy in 1928.

It is necessary to assess such a significant event as the creation of the USSR - the unification of the Soviet republics that emerged during the Civil War in the territory of the former Russian Empire.

In the 1930s, the country experienced a period of modernization and cultural revolution in the broad sense. It is important to see the main directions and contradictions of this process.

In the course of working with the Constitution of the USSR of 1936, it is important to note the way it differed from the first Constitution of the Soviet Union (issues of social order, legal status of citizens, electoral rights, etc.).

Creative problem-solving assignment: Social policy and its implementation in the 1920s.

Practical class 7.3. The Great Patriotic War of 1941-1945

1. The beginning of World War II and Hitler's policy of conquest.
2. The main stages of the Great Patriotic War 1941-1945.
3. The USSR and the allies.
4. Trials of the major war criminals: Nuremberg, Tokyo, Khabarovsk.
5. The results of the Great Patriotic War and the Second World War.

Tasks to prepare:

It should be understood that the entry of the Soviet Union into the war, which occurred as a result of the attack on the USSR by Nazi Germany, was of exceptional importance for the course of the Second World War and its results. It is necessary to characterize the main stages of the war, the features of domestic and foreign policy of that time. It is important to prove that the outcome of World War II depended primarily on the events on the Soviet-German front. The issue of the results of the war, the punishment of the main war criminals is also extremely relevant.

Creative problem-solving task: to understand the factors of falsification of the history of the Second World War and the Great Patriotic War.

Practical class 7.4. Overcoming the consequences of war. The prime and crisis of Soviet society. 1945-1984.

1. Overcoming the consequences of the war. The world after World War II. The Cold War and its impact on the socio-economic development of the country.
2. The Thaw (second half of the 1950s - first half of the 1960s).
3. Choosing a strategic path for the country's development in the mid-1960s.
4. Soviet society in the period of "late socialism".

Tasks to prepare:

It should be understood that the 40-year period 1945-1984 includes several main stages. During the first of them, which ended mainly in the early 1950s, the Soviet people managed, at the cost of heroic efforts, to restore the country destroyed by the war in the shortest possible time.

In the 1960s and 1970s, the USSR gained its power: the country largely overcame the political consequences of Stalinism (personal dictatorship, mass political repressions, the Gulag, etc.). The economy was developing successfully, the income from which was directed to increasing the well-being of the population and to social programs. The shelves of stores were filled with at least basic goods and products. During these years, the Soviet Union achieved outstanding scientific and technical achievements: in space exploration, the use of the nuclear power for civilian purposes, etc. The Soviet education system in effect at that time was considered the best in the world. The USSR had a developed network of scientific institutions.

The USSR also enjoyed high authority on the world stage. It actively helped the countries of the "third world"; it was the leader of the socialist camp, operating within the framework of the CMEA and the Warsaw Pact. In the 1970s, the USSR achieved parity with the USA in the field of armaments, becoming one of the two superpowers.

However, the Soviet system was not ideal and needed to be reformed in accordance with the needs of the time. Over time, delays or failures in reforms in the economic and political spheres, and the unwillingness to get rid of outdated ideological dogmas began to noticeably affect the situation in the country.

The economic slowdown was connected with the exhaustion of its mobilization model and extensive capabilities, with low labor productivity, the rejection of technological innovations by enterprises, etc. These processes finally came to light during the years of "perestroika."

Practical class 7.5. The period of "perestroika" and the collapse of the USSR (1985-1991).

1. Attempts to reform the USSR in the second half of the 1980s. The rise of a new generation of politicians to the levers of power. The most important characteristics of this generation of politicians.

2. Formation of the new ideology: "acceleration", "glasnost", "perestroika". The reaction of the general population to the policy of "perestroika".

3. Exacerbation of interethnic conflicts. The State Emergency Committee putsch, the establishment of the Commonwealth of Independent States, and the dissolution of the USSR. 4. Foreign policy of the "perestroika" period.

Tasks to prepare:

It is necessary to proceed from the fact that by the mid-1980s the negative tendencies that were holding back the country's development began to mount. General Secretary of the CPSU Central Committee M. S. Gorbachev, who came to power in the USSR in 1985, announced the beginning of radical economic and political reforms with the aim of "renewing socialism." Many initiatives of the perestroika period to democratize life, develop glasnost, remove political censorship, return power from the party to the Soviets, etc. met with active support from society. Other measures, especially in the economic sphere and in the area of federal relations, were sometimes carried out hastily, without full consideration of the consequences of the decisions taken. As a result, in 1989–1990, the government headed by Gorbachev, which had initiated the reforms, began to lose control over the situation in the country. Real power ended up in the hands of the republican leaders, who took a course first toward economic and then toward political independence from the union center.

In 1989–1990, the “parade of sovereignties,” accompanied by a “war of laws” (the republics stopped recognizing union legislation), became a reflection of the beginning of the destruction of not only the Soviet political and economic system, but also the foundations of statehood.

Creative problem-solving task: evaluate the gradual surrender of foreign policy positions by the USSR leadership and the consequences of this.

Practical class 8. The Modern Russian Federation (1991 – 2025)

1. Main trends, problems and contradictions of world history at the beginning of the 21st century.

2. Economic and socio-political development of Russia in the 1990s.

3. Foreign policy in 2000–2022

4. Main directions of the domestic policy of the Russian Federation in the first decades of the 21st century.

Tasks to prepare:

It should be understood that after the dissolution of the USSR, the question arose of choosing a model for Russia's development in the new conditions. It was necessary to ensure the transition from a planned-distributive economy to an economy based on market relations and private property. The main components of the reforms of the early 1990s were the liberalization of prices and the introduction of free trade, and the privatization of state property. The reforms caused hyperinflation, unemployment, criminalization, and a sharp decline in living standards. Yeltsin's reforms did not lead to economic recovery, but to an even greater deepening of the crisis compared to the period of perestroika.

It is necessary to show that the political and economic situation in Russia remained unstable until the end of the 1990s.

In 2000, Russia entered a new long period of its history, which led to noticeable changes both within the country and in the international arena. It is necessary to show the main directions and results of these changes.

2.4 Self-study work

Types of self-study work:

Preliminary familiarization with the course syllabus before the lecture;

V. MATERIAL AND TECHNICAL SUPPORT

5.1 Provision of the educational process with other library and information resources and means of providing the educational process

Students are provided with access (remote access) to modern professional databases and information reference systems. Full-text syllabus of the discipline (module) is placed in the Digital Scientific, Educational and Social Network of the University (hereinafter - TSNOSS), in the system of which 'Electronic personal accounts of the student and scientific and pedagogical worker' function. Access to the materials is possible by entering an individual password. CNOSS is designed to create a personal-oriented information and communication environment that provides information interaction between all participants of the educational process of the Kutafin University, including the provision of publicly available and personalised reference, scientific, educational, social information through services based on the applied information systems of the Kutafin University.

Each student during the entire period of study is provided with individual unrestricted access to electronic library systems (electronic libraries) and to the electronic information and educational environment of the Kutafin University. In addition to the electronic libraries of Kutafin University (MSAL), it is provided with individual unrestricted access to all remote electronic library systems, databases and legal reference systems connected at Kutafin University (MSAL) on the basis of licence agreements and having adapted versions of websites for students with disabilities.

The electronic library system (electronic library) and electronic information and educational environment provide the possibility of simultaneous access of 100 per cent of students from any point where there is access to the information and telecommunication network 'Internet' both on the territory of the Kutafin University (MSAL) and outside it.

2.3. Seminar-type classes

I MODULE

Topic 1. Introduction to the discipline "History of State and law of Russia".
The rise of statehood among the Eastern Slavs.

1. Subject, tasks, methodology of the discipline history of the state and law of Russia. Historiography, periodization.
2. The role of O.E. Kutafin University (MGUA) in the development of historical and legal knowledge.
3. The emergence of statehood among the Eastern Slavs.
4. The state system of the ancient Russian early feudal monarchy.

Assignments for preparing for practical classes.

When starting to study the history of the state and law of Russia, it is necessary to determine the subject, tasks and methodology of the discipline, to consider the stages of formation and development of state-legal forms and institutions throughout the centuries-old history of Russia. It is very important for students to familiarize themselves with the list of monographic sources and regulations recommended by the department for study.

When studying this topic, it is necessary to analyze the numerous factors influencing the formation of the state in ancient Russia: socio-economic, domestic, foreign policy, and others.

When studying the state system of Kievan Rus, it is necessary to characterize the form of government at this stage - the early feudal monarchy, as well as to consider the structure and competence of central and local government bodies.

Topic 2. The state and law of Ancient Russia.

1. The formation of ancient Russian law: customary law, judicial practice, treaties between Russia and Byzantium, legislative activity of princes.
2. Church organization and jurisdiction. The reception of Byzantine law. Church regulations, the Pilot Book.
3. Russian Truth as a monument of law. Russian Truth's emergence, editorial offices, sources; the legal status of the population according to Russian Truth; the main features of civil law; crimes and punishments; judicial process.

Assignments for preparing for practical classes.

When studying ancient Russian law, it is necessary to identify its main features, get acquainted with the sources, and determine the degree and significance of the reception of Byzantine law in the formation of the legal system of Russia.

The study of Russian Truth should begin with a description of the reasons for the creation of this collection, the place and time of the appearance of the editions of the Russian Orthodox Church. It is necessary to perform a comparative analysis of the Short and Lengthy lectures of the Russian Academy of Sciences, to study articles that reveal the social structure of ancient Russian society, also taking into account the controversial nature of the topic. Considering civil law, it is necessary to identify the norms indicating the emergence of institutions of property, obligation, and inheritance law. On the issue of criminal law, it is necessary to clarify the concept of a crime under RP, to identify the range of subjects, the subjective, objective sides of the crime, the objects of criminal activity; then to reveal the types of crimes, goals and types of punishments. In the matter of procedural law, it is necessary to identify the main features, stages of the trial, and the evidence system.

"Case-study" (situational tasks).

A "role-playing game" when considering the stages of the trial and types of judicial evidence on Russian Truth.

Sample essay topics:

1. The history of the Russian state and law in the system of legal sciences.
2. Modern directions of scientific study of the history of the state and law of Russia.
3. Kutafin Moscow State Law University (MSAL)): history of formation, stages of development, scientific schools.
4. O.E. Kutafin's role in the development of legal education in Russia.
5. Administrative and legal reforms of the first Kievan princes.
6. The contract as a source of the law of Ancient Russia.

Topic 3. Feudal states on the territory of Russia in the XII-XV centuries.

1. State and legal development of the Russian lands in conditions of political fragmentation (XII – XV centuries).
2. Kiev, Vladimir-Suzdal, Galician-Volyn principalities. The Moscow Principality in the XII – XIII centuries.
3. Novgorod and Pskov feudal republics. The social and state system.
4. The development of the legal system in the specific period. Peculiarities of law in the north-west of Russia. The Novgorod Letter of Judgment. Forms of legal proceedings.
5. Pskov judicial charter: civil, criminal, judicial law.

Preparation tasks:

When considering this topic, first of all, it is necessary to indicate the prerequisites for the transition from a relatively unified state structure to sovereign principality states, to explore the main features and stages of political fragmentation in Russia in the XII-XV centuries. It is necessary to perform a comparative description of the socio-economic and political development of the main centers of the appanage period - Kiev, Galicia-Volyn, Vladimir-Suzdal principalities, paying special attention to the unique Novgorod-Pskov republican system. While researching the sources of the law of the specific period, it is also necessary to highlight the features of the legal system of northwestern Russia, consider the origin and sources of the Novgorod and Pskov judicial charters, and characterize the legal branches of these documents.

Creative problem assignment: comparative characteristics of the peculiarities of civil, criminal, and procedural law of the Pskov Court Charter and Russian Truth.

Topic 4. The Russian (Moscow) state of the XV-XVII centuries.

1. Prerequisites and stages of the formation of a unified Russian (Moscow) state. The new state ideology.
2. The development of Russian feudal law. Sources of law, forms of legislation. Private acts.
3. Judicial books of the XV-XVI centuries: development, system, sources. The beginning of the legal registration of serfdom. Civil, criminal law, judicial system and judicial proceedings.
4. Socio-economic, political prerequisites of the estate-representative monarchy in Russia.
5. The state system. Central and local government.
6. Church organization and church law. The Church in the institutions of the estate-representative monarchy.
7. The Code of 1649: development, sources, structure. Legal status of the population. Civil, criminal law, judicial system, judicial process.

Tasks for preparing for a practical lesson

In this topic, it is important to explore the complex of socio-economic, political, geopolitical, and ideological factors that allowed the Moscow Principality to become the center of a new state in Russia, to consider the stages of the unification process, and the methods of activity of the Moscow princes. It is important to note new phenomena in the field of socio-economic, class structure of society, to understand the changes in the system of central and local government. Russian Russian (Moscow) state formation should take into account the role of the Russian Orthodox Church in this process, the Byzantine influence, and the foundations of a new political worldview shaping the ideology of the emerging autocratic statehood.

When considering the development of the legal system of the Moscow state, it is necessary to indicate changes in the system of sources of law, formulate the goals of codification of the XV – XVI centuries, investigate the process of developing the Judicial Books of Ivan III and Ivan IV, and carry out the sectoral characterization of collections. It is necessary to work with articles restricting the right of peasants to leave, consider the development of institutions of property, civil, and inheritance law, note the new attitude of the legislator to the concept of crime in comparison with the Russian Truth, identify new types of crimes and punishments, and strengthen the investigative and inquisitorial principles of judicial proceedings.

"Case-study": the stages of registration of serfdom in the Judicial System.

Studying the heyday of Moscow statehood, it is necessary to reveal the main features and prerequisites of the new form of government – the estate-representative monarchy, paying special attention to the reforms and ideology of the government of Ivan IV. It is necessary to identify the stages of the development of the estate-representative monarchy in the history of Russia in the XVI – XVII centuries, indicating changes in the structure, competence, and principles of formation of central (tsar, Boyar Duma, Zemstvo councils, orders) and local government (governors, zemstvo and provincial self-government bodies, voivodes). Special attention should be paid to the issue of church-state relations (the "symphony" of Church and state), the development of church organization and church law, and interaction with the secular state-legal system.

It is important to consider the Conciliar Code of 1649, on the one hand, as the main document of the estate-representative monarchy, on the other hand, as a collection marking the beginning of the transition to a new era – absolute monarchy. It is necessary to investigate the issue of the development, sources of the Code, and pay attention to the attempt to structure this document by industry. In property law, it is necessary to compare two forms of land ownership – patrimonial and local, to indicate new institutions, concepts in the field of compulsory and inheritance law. Considering the social system, it is necessary to compare the legal status of the service, non-service, and tax classes, emphasizing in this matter the reforms in relation to the rural population and the peasantry. Attention should be paid to the development of the concept of crime, the complication of the elements of the corpus delicti, to investigate the system of crimes and punishments, to compare the adversarial and investigative forms of the judicial process.

Sample essay topics:

1. The Oprichnina and its influence on the state system of the Russian state in the second half of the 16th century.
2. Church and Zemstvo councils in the history of the Russian (Moscow) state.

Topic 5. The state and law of the Russian Empire in the period of absolutism.

Lesson 1.

1. The formation of the absolute monarchy in Russia in the second half of the 17th-early 18th centuries, the liquidation of estate-representative institutions. Prerequisites, main features, stages of development of Russian absolutism. Legislative design, the ideology of absolute monarchy.
2. Peter the Great's state reforms in the first quarter of the 18th century.
3. Features of the state system during the "palace revolutions" of the second quarter of the XVIII century.
4. "Enlightened absolutism" in Russia in the second half of the XVIII century. The legislative activity of Catherine II. Reorganization of central and local government.
5. Reorganization of the supreme state administration in the first quarter of the 19th century. "Governmental constitutionalism". M.M. Speransky's activity.
6. "Political reaction" of the second quarter of the 19th century.
7. Stages of development of the estate system of Russia in the XVIII – the first half of the XIX centuries.

Lesson 2.

1. Sources of law, forms of legislative acts in Russia in the XVIII – first half of the XIX centuries.
2. The formation of sectoral legislation. Civil, administrative, and financial law.
3. Criminal law. Military articles of 1715: creation, sources, legal systematization. Crimes and punishments.
4. New forms of legal proceedings: "Brief description of trials or lawsuits" 1715, decree "On the form of the court" 1723
5. Codification of Russian law. The activity of the codification commissions of the XVIII century. The laid commission, the "Mandate" of Catherine II. Codification works in the first half of the 19th century: The Complete Collection of Laws of the Russian Empire; The Code of Laws of the Russian Empire of 1832 (development, structure, branches of law).
6. The Code of Criminal and Correctional Punishments of 1845

Tasks for preparing for a practical lesson

Lesson 1.

When considering this topic, first of all, it is necessary to indicate the changes in the social and political system of Russian society in the second half of the 17th century, indicating the transition to a new form of government - absolutism, to identify the prerequisites, the main features of the absolute monarchy in Russia, its differences from European models of absolutism. Considering the stages of development of the Russian absolute monarchy, it is necessary to take into account the controversial nature of this topic. It is important to specify the legislative acts that formulate the powers of the Russian monarch and the order of succession to the throne.

Next, it is important to compare the epochs of the reform of the Russian state system in the XVIII century: the empire model created by Peter I (Senate, Synod, collegiums, prosecutor's office, governors, magistrates, etc.), the change of this model during the "palace coups" (Supreme Privy Council, Cabinet of Ministers) and the empire of the period of "enlightened absolutism" Catherine II, revealing the concept of "enlightened absolutism", indicating the main reforms in the field of central and local government. It is necessary to study the reorganization of the supreme state administration of the first quarter of the 19th century. (State Council, Ministries, Committee of Ministers) in the era of the "governmental constitutionalism" of Emperor Alexander I and to trace the changes of the new government model in the era of the "political reaction" of Emperor Nicholas I in the second quarter of the XIX century. Considering the issue of attempts to democratize the Russian state system, it is necessary to pay special attention to political projects and state activities of M.M. Speransky.

In the course of the study of the Russian legal system in the XVIII – XIX centuries, it is important to note that the law becomes the only source of law, to examine various forms of legislation (decrees, regulations, charters), paying special attention to charters indicating the appearance of sectoral collections in the Russian legal system, the success of private codification. It is necessary to note the level of reception of European law, to consider the dualism of national and foreign legal institutions using the examples of civil, administrative, and financial law.

Criminal and procedural law are the branches where the reception of European law and the development of private codifications were most reflected. On this issue, it is important to consider the sources and structure of the criminal and procedural codes - Military Articles and a brief description of the 1715 processes, to explore the development of criminal law institutions (elements of the corpus delicti, the system of crimes and punishments), procedural forms, and new principles for evaluating evidence. It is also necessary to study the decree "On the form of the court" of 1723, comparing the adversarial and investigative forms of the process.

In this topic, it is important to consider the stages of codification of Russian law, the activities of codification commissions, starting with the Chamber on the Code of 1700, and up to the successful completion of the work by the Code of Laws of 1832. Special attention should be paid to the Laid Commission of 1767, the analysis of the "Mandate" of Catherine II. Considering the codification works of the 19th century, it is necessary to indicate the role of M.M. Speransky, his ideas regarding the forms and sources of codification. It is necessary to compare the Complete Collection of Laws and the Code of Laws, indicate the main directions and forms of codification work. When studying the Code of Laws, it is important to note the structure of this collection, the main features of state, civil, and criminal law (taking into account the changes and additions of the Code of Punishments of 1845).

"Creative problem task": a comparative analysis of the institutions of criminal and criminal procedure law according to the Cathedral Code of 1649 and legislative acts the first quarter of the XVIII century.

Sample topics of the essays:

The judicial system of Russia in the first half of the XVIII century.

II MODULE

Topic 6. The state and law of the Russian Empire during the transition to Bourgeois monarchy.

1. Prerequisites for the political and legal reforms of 1860-1870 of the reign of Alexander II. The main directions of reforms.

2. The peasant reform of 1861 Preparation, legislative acts. The main stages and principles of peasant liberation.

3. Judicial reform of 1864. Judicial statutes. Ship management, ship production.

4. Zemstvo 1864 and city 1870 reforms. Creation of an all-religious self-government.

5. Prerequisites for the counter-reforms of the 1880-1890 government of Alexander III. Reorganization of the judicial system. Emergency legislation.

Changes in the system of zemstvo and city self-government. "Political conservatism" of the late 19th century.

6. Transition to a constitutional monarchy (1905 – 1917): revolution of 1905-1907 and changes in the state-political system of Russia; establishment of the State Duma, development of its competence; electoral laws; reorganization of the State Council, the Council of Ministers. Basic State laws of 1906 Activities and reasons for the dissolution of the Duma of the I-IV convocations. Legal policy of the Government of P.A. Stolypin.

Tasks for preparing for practical exercises

The study of this topic should begin with a description of the historical prerequisites for reforms caused by the crisis of the feudal-serfdom system and the need to transition to a bourgeois society. The general reform policy of Alexander II's government should be described. Special attention should be paid to the main one, the peasant reform of 1861: to consider the process of preparing a draft reform, to study the legislative acts on the liberation of peasants and the purchase of land from landlords. It is important to analyze the rights of the new class of free rural inhabitants, the stages and principles of allocating land to peasants, the procedure for the redemption operation, and indicate the positive aspects of the reform and its disadvantages.

"Case-study": to draw up a charter between the landowner and the rural society with the participation of an intermediary.

Studying the judicial statutes of 1864, it is necessary to determine the system of new all-religious courts, their formation, competence, and consider the bourgeois principles of the judicial process. The study of zemstvo and city self-government should also be based on the principles of independence, equality, although it is necessary to indicate the forms of administrative control in relation to zemstvo and city bodies. It is necessary to indicate the main reasons for the tightening of the state and legal policy of the Government of Alexander III, taking into account the controversial nature of the topic. When considering changes in the judicial system, first of all, it is necessary to consider the emergency legislation on military courts, as well as legislation that destroys world justice and the principle of separation of administrative and judicial powers. Examining the norms of the Regulations on Provincial and County Zemstvo Institutions of 1890 and the City Regulations of 1892, it is important to note the strengthening of the estate-administrative role of the nobility and the large urban bourgeoisie, and the increasing complexity of forms of administrative control over zemstvo and city bodies. In the question of "political conservatism" at the end of the 19th century. Special attention should be paid to the ideology of K.P. Pobedonostsev.

Brainstorming: the main reasons for Alexander III's counter-reform policy.

When considering the topic of the formation of the constitutional monarchy in 1905 – 1917, it is necessary to indicate the prerequisites for the revolution and, accordingly, bourgeois-democratic reforms in the country. It is important to identify the main stages of the transition to a constitutional monarchy, to trace the development of the competence of the State Duma, and the democratization of electoral legislation. It is also necessary to note the new status of the Council of Ministers, the establishment of the Prime Minister, and the transformation of the State Council into the upper chamber of Parliament. When studying legislation on civil liberties, special attention should be paid to the Manifesto of October 17, 1905. Describing the form of government according to the Basic State Laws as amended on April 23, 1906, it should be borne in mind that the issue of transition to a constitutional monarchy is debatable.

The study of the activities of the Russian parliament in the first quarter of the 20th century should be linked to the development of the Russian party and political system. When considering the activities of the Duma of the First and second convocations, it is important to take into account its Cadet majority. In the activities of the Duma of the Third convocation, the "Octobrist pendulum" was of decisive importance. It is necessary to examine the content of the electoral law of June 3, 1907, and indicate the norms of the Main State Laws of 1906 that were violated by this legislative document. It is important to get acquainted with the various assessments of historians of the reformist activities of the P.A. government. Stolypin and form their own point of view on this issue.

Brainstorming: why is the dissolution of the State Duma on June 3, 1907 called a "coup d'etat"?

Topic 7. The state and law of Russia during the period of the constitutional monarchy (1905 – 1917) and the bourgeois democratic Republic (February-October 1917).

Topic 8. The creation of the Soviet state and law.

1. The February revolution of 1917, the overthrow of the monarchy in Russia, two-power. Legislative policy of the Provisional Bourgeois Government. The question of the Constituent Assembly.

2. II All-Russian Congress of Soviets and its decisions.

3. Dissolution of the Constituent Assembly.

4. The III All-Russian Congress of Soviets and its decisions. Declaration of the Rights of the Working and Exploited People. The system of the highest authorities and management of the Soviet state.

5. Constitution of the RSFSR of 1918: development, structure; political and economic foundations, organs of Soviet power; rights and duties of workers; electoral system.

6. Creation and development of the socialist judicial system: the first Soviet Decrees on the court; the Regulation on the People's Court of 1918; repressive bodies (revolutionary tribunals, the Cheka); judicial reform of 1922 – principles of the judicial system, the creation of the prosecutor's office, the bar.

7. Sources of Soviet law. Attitude to pre-revolutionary law. The first decrees of the Soviet government. The Labor Code of the RSFSR 1918; the Code of Laws on Acts of Civil Status, Marriage, Family and Guardianship of the RSFSR 1918; Guidelines on Criminal Law of the RSFSR 1919.

Tasks for preparing for a practical lesson

On this topic, it is necessary to consider the stages of the establishment of a republican form of government in Russia: the dissolution of the State Duma of the fourth convocation in February 1917, the abdication of Emperor Nicholas II and the creation of a Provisional Government in March 1917. However, it is necessary to take into account the temporary nature of the new state system based on a compromise between the Provisional Government and the Petrograd Soviet of Workers' and Soldiers' Deputies ("dual power"). The Constituent Assembly was to decide definitively the issues of power, land and peace. It is from this perspective that it is necessary to evaluate the activities of the Provisional Government and its reforms.

Socratic Dialogue: Was there a legal continuity between the tsarist government and the Provisional Government?

In preparing this topic, it is also necessary to study the legislative acts of the II All-Russian Congress of Soviets in 1917: Decrees on Peace, on Land, the Decree on the Formation of the Council of People's Commissars; legislation of the III Congress of Soviets in 1918: the Resolution "On Federal Institutions", the law "On the socialization of the earth". Special attention should be paid to the Declaration of the Rights of the Working and Exploited People. Based on these constituent documents, it is necessary to consider the features of the new form of government – the republic of Soviets, to study the structure of the highest authorities and management, the principles of foreign policy, agrarian reform, the main socio-economic and political objectives of the Soviet government. When studying the activities of the Soviets, it is necessary to take into account the references in the decrees of the Second Congress of Soviets to the Constituent Assembly, which give the reforms a legally temporary character. It was the decisions of the Third Congress of Soviets (after the dissolution of the Constituent Assembly) that ultimately shaped the Russian Soviet Socialist Republic.

The study of the Constitution of the RSFSR of 1918 should begin with the question of the development of the first Soviet code, the activities of the constitutional commission, and the debate on state-building. Next, it is necessary to consider the structure of the Constitution, the system of government and administration, the political and economic foundations of Soviet power, the rights and obligations of citizens of the RSFSR, and the specifics of electoral law.

When working on this topic, the political and legal doctrine of the "scrapping" of the old state should be taken into account. It is necessary to analyze the new system of judicial bodies, the principles of organization and operation of the Soviet court according to the norms of the Decrees on the court of 1917-1918; to talk about the creation of a single people's court, guided by the norms of the Regulations on the People's Court of the RSFSR on November 30, 1918. It must be borne in mind that during the period of "war communism" there was a system of repressive bodies. In this regard, it is necessary to characterize the system of revolutionary tribunals, the procedural features of their activities (the Regulation on Revolutionary Tribunals of 1919), and consider the stages of reorganization of revolutionary tribunals. In addition, it is necessary to understand the principles of the organization and activities of the repressive investigative bodies of the All-Russian Extraordinary Commission. The reorganization of the judiciary and law enforcement agencies in 1922 should be considered in the context of the new economic policy pursued in the country.

It is necessary to consider the system of sources of Soviet law, to carry out a legal analysis of the first decrees of the Soviet government in the field of state, civil, and land law. Special attention should be paid to such a source as the revolutionary legal consciousness, noting the possibility of applying pre-revolutionary law in 1917-1918. Next, it is necessary to work with the norms of the Soviet codes, to explore the development of new labor and family relations. When analyzing the Guiding Principles of the Criminal Law of the RSFSR in 1919 It is necessary to pay attention to the structure of the code, to be able to explain the absence of a Special part, the principles of analogy, objective imputation, to consider the concept of crime, the elements of the corpus delicti, goals and types of punishments.

Topic 9. The state and law in the period of the new economic policy. National-state building.

Topic 10. State and law in the period of state-party socialism (1930s-early 1960s).

Topic 11. State and law in the context of the crisis of socialism and the formation of a new statehood and law of the Russian Federation.

1. The development of the Soviet state in the period of the new economic policy. The tasks of codification of Soviet law. Creation, structure, and basic institutions of the Civil, Land, Labor, and Criminal Codes of the RSFSR in 1922.

2. The collapse of the Russian Empire and the formation of independent Soviet republics. The formation of federal and confederate relations during the Civil War. The development of national and territorial autonomy in the RSFSR. Creation of a federal state. The proclamation of the USSR in 1922. The Constitution of the USSR in 1924

3. Deformations in the state-political system of the USSR at the end of 1920-1930. The party-bureaucratic dictatorship and the cult of personality began. The Constitution of the USSR of 1936: development, structure; system of authorities and administration of the Union state, powers of the republics; local councils; rights and duties of citizens of the USSR; principles of electoral law.

4. Reorganization of the state and legal system during the Great Patriotic War of 1941-1945: restructuring of the state apparatus, emergency authorities and management, GKO, military justice; changes in the legal system (civil, labor, collective farm, family, criminal law). Emergency legislation of wartime.

5. Trends in the development of the command and administrative system and law in the 1950s and early 1960s.

6. The State and law during the crisis of socialism in the 1960s and 1970s. Attempts at economic and economic-legal reforms. Reorganization of law enforcement agencies. The Constitution of the USSR of 1977: development, structure, foundations of state building, the concept of "developed socialism".

7. Changes in the socio-economic and political system during the period of "perestroika" in the second half of the 1980s. Congresses of Soviets of the USSR and the RSFSR. Establishment of the Institute of the Presidency. The collapse of the USSR and the formation of a new Russian statehood in the 1990s. Preparation, structure, basic principles of the Constitution of the Russian Federation of 1993

Answering the first question, it is important to substantiate the need for changes in the state apparatus and in the legal system during the transition to the New Economic Policy, and to note the basic principles of the new economic policy. When considering this issue, it is necessary to talk about the transition from the methods of glavkizm to economic management in industry, about the reorganization of the Supreme Economic Council, about the creation and role of Gosplan, as well as new departments of sectoral management. It is necessary to substantiate the reorganization of the Cheka as one of the most important directions for strengthening the rule of law in the conditions of the New Economic Policy. When considering ways to improve the state apparatus, it is important to show the role of the CCCC-RCI, the goals and objectives of the restructuring of this body, as well as to talk about the restructuring of the work of local Councils, the development of democratic forms of their activities, and the policy of "revitalizing" Councils.

The preparation of the second question should begin with a review of the basic prerequisites of the codification work, the main of which is the transition to a new economic policy. It is important to study the development procedure and the structural features of the codes. Based on the texts of the codes, it is necessary to disclose the main institutions and features of civil law (forms of ownership, the status of state ownership, restrictions on private property, principles of compulsory and hereditary law), land law (forms and subjects of land use, types and procedure for land lease, the use of hired labor, the legal status of cooperation), labor law (transition from universal labor service to an employment contract, from the social security system to social insurance), criminal law (the concept, the composition of the crime, types of crimes and punishments, attention to economic crimes). Considering the stages of national-state building, it is necessary, first, to study the first constitutional acts of Soviet power: the Decree on Peace of the II Congress of Soviets and the Declaration of the Rights of the Peoples of Russia in 1917, which formulated the principles of equality and sovereignty of nations, on the basis of which the process of Empire destruction and the formation of independent republics develops. Secondly, it is necessary to study the forms of national and territorial autonomy within the RSFSR, as well as to note the prerequisites and stages of the unification process during the Civil War and the post-war period of the restoration of the national economy, the formation of confederate relations between the republics (military, economic, international unions). Considering the creation of the USSR, it is necessary to note the internal party discussion on the principles of federation, to consider the documents of the First Congress of Soviets of the USSR – the Treaty and the Declaration on the Formation of the USSR in 1922. The study of the Constitution of the USSR of 1924 should also begin with the question of the development and structure of this document, determine the basic principles of the national state structure of the USSR, the structure of the union and republican authorities, administration and justice.

"Creative problem assignment." Prepare a presentation on the topic:

"Changes in the systems of the Civil Code of the RSFSR of 1922 and the Labor Code of the RSFSR of 1922 in comparison with the relevant legislation of 1918-1919."

"Brainstorming". Why in 1922, when the USSR was created, it was impossible to use a federation form similar to the 1918 federation (RSFSR)?

Sample topics of abstracts:

1. The Civil Procedure Code of the RSFSR of 1923
2. The Criminal Procedure Code of the RSFSR of 1923

When working on this complex topic, it should be borne in mind that many issues are debatable, so it is important not only to study the educational literature and regulations of the 30 – 90s of the XX century, but also to give your own assessment of the stages of development of the Soviet state. It is necessary to take into account that the restructuring of the political system and the state apparatus in the 1930s and 1940s. It was caused by the development of the party-bureaucratic dictatorship, the cult of Stalin's personality, the elimination of the legal foundations of a multi-layered economy, the forced collectivization of agriculture, and the formation of a command and administrative system for managing the national economy. While working with the 1936 Constitution of the USSR, it is important to note its difference from the first Constitution of the Union (issues of the social system, the legal status of citizens, suffrage, etc.).

Considering the period of development of the USSR state and law in the 60-70s of the XX century, it is important to investigate the main problems of the state-political system, indicating the crisis of the Soviet socialist model of society, the growth of the party-Soviet bureaucracy. It is also necessary to consider the issue of attempts to modernize the economic system and law enforcement agencies. Analyzing the norms of the USSR Constitution of 1977, it is important to understand the concept of "developed socialism" and draw conclusions about the conformity of this concept with the realities of the development of the Soviet state and law in the 70s of the XX century.

Assessing the policy of "perestroika" in the second half of the 1980s, it is necessary to analyze changes in the socio-economic and political system, consider the problem of the collapse of the USSR, etc. It is necessary to explore the main directions, principles of the formation of a new Russian statehood and law in the early 1990s, the process of developing a constitution. the Constitution of the Russian Federation of 1993, questions about the form of government, the state structure, and the rights of citizens of the Russian Federation.

"Creative problem assignment": prepare a presentation on the topic: "The Prosecutor's Office during the Great Patriotic War of 1941-1945."

The course work is designed to identify the student's ability to independently conduct research on a specific issue (topic, section, module) of the discipline based on the knowledge gained, and is also aimed at developing the relevant competencies of the student.

A characteristic feature of coursework in historical and legal disciplines is the study of legal monuments directly.

Having independently selected one of the proposed topics and carefully studied the relevant textbook material and recommended literature, it is necessary to turn to the study of normative acts related to the chosen topic. Using them is a necessary condition for a positive assessment of course work. However, the verbatim reproduction of legal norms should not be abused: the term paper should not turn into a collection of rewritten articles of the law. The student, getting acquainted with the text of the monument of law, will encounter incomprehensible words and expressions. It has long been customary to comment on ancient acts. The largest collections of legal documents recommended by the department for the preparation and writing of term papers are "Russian legislation of the X - XX centuries" (Vol. 1-9. Moscow, 1984-1994) and "Monuments of Russian law" (Vol. 1-35. Moscow, ed.: Khachaturov R.L., 2013).

Course work should It should contain a title page, an outline, an introduction, a main text, a conclusion, a list of references and regulations. Finally, the results of the study should be summarized and the conclusions drawn should be outlined. The page numbering is continuous, starting from the second page. The student puts his signature on the last page.

When quoting or using any provisions from the law, recommended literature, references are given to the source (relevant articles) or to the author of the work from which the material is borrowed. The course work uses page-by-page footnotes.

The term paper must be completed in hard copy, on one side of a standard A4 sheet. If the content of the term paper is typed in a Microsoft Word text editor, then it is recommended to use the font: Times New Roman, font size - 14 pt., line spacing–1.5. Margins of all pages: left - 3 cm, right - 1.5 cm, bottom - 2 cm, top - 2 cm. The volume of the course work is 25 pages.

Sample coursework plans.

We recommend textbooks on all topics.:

1. Isaev I. A. History of the state and law of Russia. Textbook. Moscow, 2023.
2. Isaev I. A., Saltykova S.A. History of the state and law of Russia (part 1). Textbook, Moscow, 2020.
3. Isaev I.A., Kuvyrchenkov N.S. The history of the national state and law in diagrams and tables. Textbook for undergraduate studies. Moscow, 2013.
4. Textbook on the history of the state and law of Russia / compiled by Yu. P. Titov. Moscow, 2012.

Topic. Ancient Russian feudal law

The approximate plan:

1. The formation of ancient Russian feudal law. Russian Truth — the Code of Early Feudal Law (its origin and main editions).
2. Ownership rights according to Russian Truth.
3. Criminal law according to Russian Truth.
4. The trial of the Russian Truth.

Methodological guidelines

Considering the first issue of the work, it is necessary to talk about the peculiarities of ancient Russian law, to indicate its main sources. Special attention should be paid to the first princely laws: the financial and administrative reform of Princess Olga, the church regulations of Princes Vladimir St. and Yaroslav the Wise. It is also necessary to analyze the content and significance of the pre-negotiations between Russia and Byzantium. Then it is necessary to reveal the origin of Russkaya Pravda, to analyze its main editions (when and by whom it was published, which sources were its basis, to show the difference between the Short edition of Russkaya Pravda and the Lengthy edition).

Answering the second question, it is necessary to talk about the right of feudal property of the Smerdov, inheritance of the Smerdov, emphasizing the class character of the protection of property rights according to the Russian Truth.

Considering the third question of the topic, it is necessary to analyze the concept, composition, types of crimes and punishments according to the Russian Truth.

In the last question of the topic, it is necessary to reveal the adversarial nature of the process in Ancient Russia, to characterize certain types of evidence (statements and views, ordinances, oaths).

The coverage of all issues of the topic should be based on the extensive use of the text of the documents. Without this, the work will not be read. It is impossible to mechanically retell the contents of documents, it is necessary to analyze them.

Topic. Criminal law and judicial process in Russia in the first quarter of the XVIII century.

The approximate plan:

1. The formation of an absolutist state in Russia. The aggravation of class contradictions at the beginning of the 18th century and the intensification of criminal repression.
2. The concept, composition, types of crimes and punishments according to Military Articles of 1715
3. The development of procedural law in the first quarter of the XVIII century.

Methodological guidelines

Based on an in-depth study of the recommended literature, it is necessary to show the features of Russia's economic and political development in the late 17th and early 18th centuries, to justify the inevitability of the formation of an absolute monarchy, emphasizing the features of this process in Russia compared with Western European countries.

Then it is necessary to reveal the reasons for the aggravation of class conflicts in Russia at the beginning of the 18th century, which led to increased criminal repression by the absolutist state. When covering the second and third issues, the main attention should be focused on the fractional characteristics of the development of criminal and procedural law, the most important changes in the system of crimes and types of punishments, in the methods and forms of judicial process in the first quarter of the XVIII century. The presentation of all issues should be based on the extensive use and analysis of the texts of Military Articles and documents of procedural law (in particular, the "Brief depiction of trials or lawsuits" of 1715, the decree "On the form of court" of 1723, etc.). A work written without using legal sources will not be credited.

Topic. The first codifications of Soviet law

The approximate plan:

1. The emergence of Soviet law. The constitutional significance of the first decrees of the Soviet government.
2. The Labor Code of the RSFSR 1918
3. The Code of Laws on Acts of Civil Status, Marriage, family and Guardianship of the RSFSR 1918
4. Guiding principles on the criminal law of the RSFSR in 1919.

Methodological guidelines

Answering the first question, based on the analysis of the most important decrees, it is necessary to highlight their constitutional significance and role in the development of civil codes.

When analyzing specific codes, their article-by-article study is mandatory. It is necessary to show their content, their role in protecting the interests of workers, their importance for the formation of new labor and family relations, as well as the characteristics of that period. When analyzing the Guiding Principles of the criminal law of the RSFSR in 1919. Special attention should be paid to the concept of crime, the system of punishments, and the specifics of the criminal law of this period.

I. GENERAL PROVISIONS

1.1. Objectives and Tasks of Mastering the Discipline

The objective of mastering the academic discipline "History of State and Law of Foreign Countries" is to understand the essence and main patterns of development of state-legal phenomena, the evolution of legal systems of foreign countries within the trends of global civilization, and to acquire knowledge about past legal events necessary for understanding modern legal norms and institutions.

The tasks of mastering the academic discipline "History of State and Law of Foreign Countries" include forming the ability and readiness of graduates to use historical and legal knowledge about the emergence, development, types, and forms of state and law in foreign countries in their professional activities, as well as about the experience accumulated in foreign countries in drafting, issuing, and applying legal acts. This also involves developing the capability to independently assess specific legal issues and, by using historical and legal experience, seek the most optimal solutions.

1.2. The place of the discipline in the structure of the OPOP VO

The discipline (module) "History of state and law of foreign countries" refers to the mandatory part of Block 1 (B1.O) of the main professional educational program of higher education.

Studying the discipline provides an opportunity to expand and deepen knowledge gained at the previous stage of education, as well as to acquire skills and abilities defined by the program content. The competencies formed during the study of the discipline are essential for successful professional activity. Trainees develop the ability to independently find and use necessary substantive-logical connections with other disciplines (modules) of the program, such as "Theory of state and law," "History of state and law of Russia," "Roman law," "Constitutional law," "Civil law," and "Criminal law."

1.3. Formed competencies and indicators of their achievement (planned learning outcomes of the discipline)

Upon completion of the discipline "History of state and law of foreign countries," the student should possess the following competencies in accordance with the Federal State Educational Standard (FSES):

MODULE I

Practical 1. Introduction to the subject and methodology of studying the history of state and law of foreign countries. Periodisation of the history of state and law.

Practical 2. The State and Law of the Ancient World. The Ancient East.

2.1. Ancient Egypt and China. Ancient Babylon.

1. Main stages in the history of Ancient Egypt.
2. Social structure.
3. Oriental despotism as a specific form of government. Main administrative offices. The role of the Priesthood in State governance.
4. Features of the emergence, evolution, and governance of the state in Ancient China.
5. Formation of the state in Mesopotamia. The Kingdoms of Sumer and Akkad (two prominent Mesopotamian civilizations). The rise of Babylon. The state system. The New Babylonian Kingdom.
6. The laws of King Hammurabi:
 - a) general characteristics,
 - b) social structure and legal status of major population groups,
 - c) property relations,
 - d) crimes and punishments,
 - e) judicial procedure.

Assignments for preparation:

Understand the features of "Oriental despotism" as a form of government and study the system of state authorities and governance institutions, paying attention to the three-tier structure of these institutions in Ancient Egypt.

The peculiarities of statehood formation in Mesopotamia should be clarified, focusing primarily on the emergence of the Babylonian state. The text of the Code of Hammurabi needs to be carefully scrutinized, particularly regarding the legal status of individuals and the law of obligations.

2.2. Ancient India.

1. Chronology and periodization of Ancient Indian History. The Varna-caste System (4 broad classes) in Ancient Indian Society.
2. The sources of law in Ancient India. The Laws of Manu:
 - 2.1. general characteristics;
 - 2.2. rights in rem in accordance with the Laws of Manu;
 - 2.3. law of obligations under the Laws of Manu;
 - 2.4. marriage and family relations; inheritance law under the Laws of Manu;
 - 2.5. crimes and punishments;
 - 2.6. the judiciary, its institutions and procedures under the Laws of Manu.

Assignments for preparation:

When preparing for the practical class, students should create a diagram of the Varna-caste division of society in Ancient India.

Work with the texts of legal monuments: complete the table titled “The comparative analysis of legal norms of the Code of Hammurabi and the Laws of Manu”.

Practical 3. The state and law of Ancient Greece.

1. Formation of the Athenian State. “The Reforms of Theseus”.
2. The Reforms of Solon (early 6th century BCE), Cleisthenes (late 6th century BCE), Ephialtes (mid-5th century BCE), and Pericles (roughly 461 to 429 BCE). Their place in the history of the Athenian state.
3. The main state and legal institutions of the Athenian democratic republic (Ekklesia (Assembly), Boule (Council of Five Hundred), Dikasteria (popular courts), Strategoi (generals)).
4. Athenian naval leagues and their historical significance.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing for this class, students should clarify the meaning of the key concepts “oligarchy” and “democracy”. Having thoroughly studied all the reforms mentioned above, students should clarify how the democratic republic was established in Athens.

Practical 4. The state and law of Ancient Rome.

1. The periodization of the History of state and law of Ancient Rome.
2. Political organization during the Royal period. The Reforms of Servius Tullius.
3. Establishment of the Republic. The legal status of the population. The state system.

4. The regime of Military dictatorships at the end of the Republic. Transition to the Monarchy.
5. The Principate. Decline of Republican institutions and formation of the Imperial bureaucracy.
6. The Dominate. The Reforms of Diocletian and the legislation of Constantine.
7. Division of the Empire into Western and Eastern. Fall of the Western Roman Empire. Byzantium as the Successor of the Roman Empire.
8. The laws of the Twelve tables as the first monument of Civil law.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing for the practical, students should study the Reforms of Servius Tullius, clarifying their significance in the formation of the state in Ancient Rome. Then, students should consistently familiarize with each stage in the history of the state and comprehend the features of the Roman republic, comparing them with the Republic in Athens. Special attention should be given to the Imperial period. It is paramount to understand the difference between the Principate and the Dominate. The analysis of the Laws of the Twelve tables is crucial for comprehending the peculiarities of civil law as the basic element of the Roman legal system. Then, students should discover the causes of the emergence of Praetorian law (jus praetorium or honorary law) and the law of nations and highlight their distinctive features.

MODULE II

Practical 5. The state and law of the Middle Ages. Byzantium. The Arab Caliphate.

1. Trends in the development of the Feudal state and law in the Middle Ages.
2. Features of the Byzantine state structure.
3. Byzantine law: sources and main institutions.
4. Organization of the Roman Catholic Church and its role in the formation of Western European States. Canon law.
5. Origins and periodization of the History of the Arab Caliphate. Muslim law.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing for the practical, it is vital to familiarise yourself with the Corpus Juris Civilis (Justinian Code). The Ecloga as a monument of Byzantine law. Students should get acquainted with the four schools of Muslim jurisprudence.

Practical 6. The Frankish state and law.

1. Formation of the Frankish state. The central and local administration.

The Reform of Charles Martel. The Carolingian (Charlemagne) Empire (The Frankish Empire). The Treaty of Verdun.

2. Salic law as a monument of Early Feudal law:
 - a) forms of land ownership;
 - b) crimes and punishments;
 - c) judicial procedure.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing this topic, it is vital to understand the peculiarities of the formation of the state of the Salian Franks and find out its historical significance. Then, students should specify the development of land relations and their impact on the social and state structure. For this, students should study the text of the Salic law and comprehend the essence of Charles Martel's reform.

Practical 7. The state and law of France in the Middle Ages.

1. Formation of the state in France. The beginning of centralization. The Reforms of Louis IX.
2. Formation of the Estates-Representative monarchy in France. The Estates-General, "The Great March Ordinance" (1357).
3. The French Absolutism. Central and Local Governance in the Era of Absolutism.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing for this practical, it is essential to understand the periodisation of the medieval state and grasp the essence of each stage using France as an example, where each phase had a classical representation. It is mandatory to study the text of the "Great March Ordinance", as well as familiarise oneself with other documents in the chrestomathy.

Practical 8. The state and law of Germany in the Middle Ages.

1. Formation of the "Holy Roman Empire of the German nation".
2. The Golden Bull of 1356 and its historical significance.
3. Features of the Feudal state development in Germany. Estates-Representative monarchy. The Princely absolutism.
4. Specifics of Medieval German legal sources. The Carolina (1532).

Assignments for preparation:

Studying this topic, it is indispensable to understand the peculiarities of the formation of the German state and the characteristics of its further development. Students should thoroughly study the texts of the Golden Bull and the Carolina, and gain a clear understanding of such concepts as "princely absolutism" and "enlightened absolutism".

Practical 9. The state and law of England in the Middle Ages.

1. Formation of the Statehood in England. The Anglo-Saxon Kingdoms.
2. The Norman Conquest of England (1066). The Reforms of Henry I and Henry II.
3. The Magna Carta Libertatum (1215). The Oxford and Westminster Provisions.
4. Emergence of the English Parliament, its structure, development, and competence.
5. The features of English absolutism.
6. Formation of the English judicial system. Common law and Equity.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing for this practical, students should specify: how the English state emerged; what role the Norman Conquest played; why the state managed to avoid political fragmentation in England; how the English Parliament differed from estates-representative institutions in other countries; why English absolutism is referred to as “incomplete”. The text of the Magna Carta Libertatum (1215) should also be thoroughly studied and its significance in English history should be understood.

MODULE III

Practical 10. The state and law in the Modern Era. Great Britain.

1. The crisis of English absolutism in the 17th Century. Proclamation of the Republic.
2. Legislation of the English Revolution (1640–1660): The Triennial Act (1641); The Grand Remonstrance (1641); Oliver Cromwell and the Instrument of Government (1653).
3. Restoration of the Stuarts in England. The Habeas Corpus Act (1679).
4. The “Glorious Revolution” in England. Bill of Rights (1689).
5. The Act of Settlement (1701). The state system of England in the 18th century.
6. The Cabinet of Ministers. The Responsible Government.
7. Development of Electoral law. The Electoral Reforms of 1832, 1867, and 1884–1885.
8. The Reforms of Local Governance and the judiciary in the 19th century.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing for this practical, students should familiarize themselves with the texts of the following legal sources: the Petition of Right (1628); the Triennial Act (1641); the Grand Remonstrance (1641); the Instrument of Government (1653); the Habeas Corpus Act (1679).

Students need to analyse the Bill of Rights (1689) and the Act of Settlement (1701), and determine their historical significance. It is necessary to trace how constitutional monarchy evolved into parliamentary monarchy, examine the reasons for electoral reform, study the content of these reforms, and understand the changes they brought about.

Students need to familiarise themselves with the Representation of the People Acts adopted in the 19th–20th centuries.

Practical 11. Formation and development of the state and law of the USA.

1. Struggle of the American Colonies of England for Independence. The Declaration of Independence (1776).
2. “The Articles of Confederation”. Transition to the Federative structure.
3. The Constitution of 1787. The system of Checks and Balances.
4. The Bill of Rights (1791).
5. The Civil War (1861–1865). Constitutional development after the Civil War.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing for this practical, students need to understand: how the independent state of the United States was formed, what path the American state routed in its development, why the federation prevailed.

Students should study the Declaration of Independence, “the Articles of Confederation”, and, with utmost care, the Constitution of 1787. Then, the causes of the Civil War should be understood, and students should specify how the state managed to preserve the federation, and what important amendments were made to the 1787 Constitution.

Practical 12. The state and law of France in the Modern Era.

1. The Great French Revolution of the late 18th century: causes, political participants, periodisation, and changes in the state system of France at the main stages of the Revolution.
2. The beginning of the Revolution. The Declaration of the Rights of Man and of the Citizen (1789). Establishment of a constitutional monarchy. The French Constitution of 1791.
3. Transition to the Republican form of government in France. The National Convention (1792-1795).
4. The Jacobin dictatorship. The French Constitution of 1793. “Revolutionary Government Order” of October 10, 1793.
5. The Thermidorian Reaction of 1794 (the parliamentary revolt). The Directory. The Constitution of 1795.
6. The Consulate. The Constitution of 1799.
7. The Senate Consults of 1802 and 1804. Transition to the Empire.

Bonapartism.

8. Общая характеристика кодекса. The French Civil Code of 1804: history of creation, sources, structure, principles. General characteristics of the Code.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing for this practical, it is necessary to understand the main stages of constitutional changes in France.

Students should create a diagram of government bodies according to the following versions of the French Constitution: of 1791, 1793, 1795, and 1799. After completing the diagram, students should provide a written summary of conclusions drawn from this assignment.

In preparation for the practical, students should also familiarise themselves with the text of the Napoleon's Code (the Civil Code of 1804) and prepare a corresponding table based on the Articles on ownership, norms of the law of obligations, family-marriage law, and inheritance law. Also students should be ready to work on case studies based on the French Civil Code.

Practical 13. Formation of Unified Germany. Development of law in the Modern Era.

1. The Dissolution of the "Holy Roman Empire of the German Nation". The German Unification in the 19th Century: causes, options, and stages.
2. The Napoleon's Protectorate: from the Confederation of the Rhine to the German Empire. Prussian Hegemony.
3. The Constitutional Acts of Germany during the Revolution of 1848–1849. The Prussian Constitution of 1850. The Constitution of the North German Confederation of 1867.
4. Formation of the German Empire. The Constitution of the German Empire of 1871.
5. Общая характеристика правовых норм кодекса. The German Civil Code (BGB) of 1896: development of the Code, sources, structure, principles. General Characteristics of the Code's legal norms.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing for the practical, students should specify the peculiarities of formation of the unified German state and clarify the role of Chancellor O. Bismarck in this process. Students should also create a diagram of government institutions based on the Constitution of the German Empire (1871).

Students should also familiarise themselves with the text of the German Civil Code (Bürgerliches Gesetzbuch, BGB) of 1896 and conduct a comparative analysis of the BGB and the Napoleonic Code (Code civil) of 1804 based on the following areas: property law, law of obligations, family law, inheritance law.

Practical 14. The state and law of Asia in the Modern Era. Japan. China.

1. Features of the Asian path of state and law development in the Modern Era.
2. The state and law of Japan in the Modern Era. The Meiji Period.
3. The state and law of China in the Modern Era. The Xinhai Revolution of 1911 and the First Constitutional Acts.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing for the practical, it is necessary to get acquainted with the section of the textbook devoted to the history of China and Japan in the Modern era, study the topic “Colonial Law” and analyse the relevant Constitutional acts of Japan and China.

MODULE IV

Practical 15. The state and law of Great Britain in the Contemporary Era.

1. Main changes in the state system of Great Britain in the 20th – early 21st centuries.
2. The electoral reforms and the parliamentary reforms in the 20th century.
3. Development of British law: sources and main institutions.

Assignments for preparation:

For this practical preparation it is needed to get acquainted with the following legal sources: the Parliament Acts of 1911, 1949, and 1999. Students should also realise the reasons for the Electoral reforms and the Reforms of Parliament, and clarify how the balance between legislative and executive powers has changed over time.

It is essential to clear up the issue: what was the novelty of policy implemented by F.D. Roosevelt in the sphere of economics.

Practical 16. The state and law of the USA in the Contemporary Era.

1. Franklin D. Roosevelt’s “New Deal”: causes and objectives.
2. Experience of legislative regulation of economy.
3. Social and labor legislation in the U.S. during the “New Deal” Era.
4. Revision of the “New Deal” legislation in the postwar period. The Taft-Hartley Act, the Landrum-Griffin Act, and others.
5. Constitutional development in the U.S. in the 20th century. The new amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

Assignments for preparation:

Within this topic, it is necessary to analyse the Emergency Banking Act of 1933, the National Industrial Recovery Act of 1933, and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and others. Students should also study the Norris–La Guardia Act, the Wagner Act, and the legislation on social insurance. Preparing for the practical, it is important to understand the essence of state regulation of the economy and social sphere, and to assess the effectiveness of Franklin D. Roosevelt’s “New Deal” policy.

In writing, students should conduct the analysis of the Wagner Act and the Taft-Hartley Act (rights and obligations of workers and employers; trade/labour union activities; the purpose of each law - whose interests it was designed to protect; the consequences of their adoption).

Practical 17. The state and law of France in the Contemporary Era.

1. World War II and the fall of the Third Republic. The Vichy Government.
2. Emergence of the Fourth Republic. The Constitution of 1946, its main features. “The Second-generation rights”.
3. Transition to the Fifth Republic. The Constitution of the French Republic (1958).
4. Development of law: sources and main institutions.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing for the practical, special attention should be given to studying the texts of the French Constitution of 1946 and the Constitution of the French Republic of 1958, and understanding the reasons for the fall of the Fourth Republic and the transition to the Fifth Republic.

Practical 18. The state and law of Germany in the XXth century.

1. The November Revolution in Germany. The Treaty of Versailles and its significance for Germany.
2. The Weimar Constitution of 1919, its structure, main features, and institutions.
3. Changes in the state system of the Weimar Republic with the rise of National Socialists.
4. Post-war German states and their unification.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing for the practical, it is necessary to understand the causes and course of the November 1918 Revolution in Germany, and find out why attempts to establish the Soviet-style rule failed and how a civil war was avoided.

After studying the text of the Weimar Constitution, students should highlight the provisions that indicate its social character. It is also necessary to carefully examine the articles that define and characterize the powers of the President.

Practical 19. The Nuremberg Trials. Legal foundations of International Criminal Justice.

1. The Peace Treaties of the first half of the 20th century as a legal basis of the world order.
2. Emergence and development of the idea of an International Criminal Court.
3. The Charter of the International Military Tribunal (IMT): development, structure, principles of organization and operation, jurisdiction and authority of the IMT.
4. The Nuremberg Trial of major war criminals of the European Axis Countries: the composition of the Tribunal, chief prosecutors, key stages of the Trial.
5. The structure and form of the judgment against the Nazi War criminals. The Soviet Union's position on the structure and form of the judgment.
6. The role of the USSR in the establishment of the International Military Tribunal and prosecution of War criminals.
7. The trials of War criminals based on the Nuremberg Principles.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing for this practical, students should familiarize themselves with the main provisions of the Treaty of Versailles. To prepare for the second question, it is advisable to start with the emergence and development of the idea of the International Criminal Court, as discussed in the works of Gustave Moynier, L.A. Kamarovsky, and Hoans Kelsen. Regarding the question of the organisation and functioning principles of the International Military Tribunal (IMT), it seems appropriate to critically analyse the American draft proposal for the IMT. Studying the Nuremberg Trial, it is vital to examine the work of the Prosecutors' Committee at the Nuremberg Trial and the speeches delivered by prosecutors during the Trial. In addressing the fifth issue - the structure and form of judgment against the Nazi criminals - special attention should be given to the dissenting opinion of the Soviet member of the IMT, Major General of Justice and the judge of the Supreme Court of the USSR I.T. Nikitchenko. Studying the last question, students should explore the trials of fascist war criminals held in the Soviet Union, as well as those conducted by the United States in the occupation zone.

Practical 20. The states and law of Asia in the Contemporary Era. China. Japan.

1. The Revolution of 1911 and the establishment of the Republican Regime.
2. Political struggle in the Republic of China. The Kuomintang and the Chinese Communist Party.
3. Formation and development of the People's Republic of China. The Constitutions of the PRC. The Highest organs of State power.
4. The Reforms in the PRC in the late 20th century.

5. The Government structure and the legal system of Contemporary Japan, the main stages of their evolution in the 20th century.

Assignments for preparation:

Preparing for the practical, it is necessary to identify the reasons for the fall of the Empire and the establishment of the Republic. Then, it is essential to understand the reasons for the political struggle between the Kuomintang (GMD) and the Chinese Communist Party (CCP). It should be specified how the People's Republic of China (PRC) was established, what role Mao Zedong played in governing the country, and how his policies influenced the Constitutions of the PRC. Furthermore, students need to find out what reforms were carried out in the 1980s and what results they led to.

2.4. Self-study

Types of self-study

1. Preliminary familiarisation with the course program before the lecture.
2. Study issues of practicals in accordance with their theme.
3. Review of primary source texts when preparing for a practical.
4. Work with additional and reference literature on specific course topics.
5. Case studies and their resolution when preparing for practical sessions.
6. Preparation of essays (research papers) or reports for presentations during practical sessions.
7. Preparation of presentations for speeches.
8. Preparation of reports for participation in student scientific club meetings, academic, and research-practical conferences.

Thematic assignments for self-study on certain topics of the discipline

Theme 2. The State and Law of the Ancient World. The Ancient East.

Studying this topic, students can independently explore the debated question of the peculiarities of the Eastern mode of production and discuss it during the practical.

Theme 3. The State and Law of Ancient Greece.

Students are asked to create a diagram of the state structure of Athens in the 5th century BC, highlighting the democratic institutions.

Theme 4. The State and Law of Ancient Rome.

Students are required to solve case studies in Roman law.

Theme 5. The State and Law of the Middle Ages. Byzantium. The Arab Caliphate.

Students should familiarize themselves with the content of the following topics and prepare summaries:

Trends in the development of feudal state and law in the Middle Ages.

Features of the state system of Byzantium.

Byzantine law: sources and main institutions.

Organization of the Roman Catholic Church and its role in the formation of states in Western Europe.

Canon law.

Prepare for a colloquium on the topic “Muslim Law”:

Specifics of the emergence and development of Muslim law.

Sources of Muslim law: Quran, Sunna, Ijma, Qiyas, Fatwa, Adats, Firman, Kanun. Mazhabs. Fiqh and Sharia. Legal regulation of property relations, family relations, crimes and punishments.

Students need to familiarise themselves with the Justinian Code.

The Ecloga as a monument of Byzantine law.

Theme 6. The Frankish state and law.

Working with the text of the Frankish legal monument – the “Salic Law”. Compiling, based on the chrestomathy, a table titled “The Salic law and its legal norms”.

Prepare a report for the practical on the creation of the Frankish Empire by Charlemagne (Charles the Great).

Themes 7, 8, 9. The state and law of France, Germany, England in the Middle Ages.

Studying these topics, students are asked to conduct a comparative analysis of different stages in the development of state and legal institutions in Western European countries during the Middle Ages.

Students are required to solve legal case studies based on the text of the “Carolina” (Constitutio Criminalis Carolina) (1533).

Theme 10. The state and law in the Modern Era. Great Britain.

Students are required to independently study the issue of religious movements that emerged on the eve of the Civil War in England. A report on Oliver Cromwell and his role in English history is also required.

Based on the texts of constitutional acts, students need to compile a list of powers of the English Parliament in the 17th century.

It is advisable to solve case studies based on the new laws on voting rights in Great Britain.

Theme 11. Formation and development of the state and law of the USA.

Preparation of reports:

- The Founding Fathers of the USA.

- Legal sources and the drafting of the U.S. Constitution of 1787.

Preparation for the practical session conducted in "small groups" while studying the struggle for independence of the North American colonies of England.

Theme 12. The state and law of France in the Modern Era.

Studying this topic, students are required to extract the following articles from the Declaration of the Rights of Man and of the Citizen (1789):

Articles devoted to the legal status of the individual;

Articles that established new principles of state structure;

Articles proclaiming the principles of the new legal system.

For the practical, some students are expected to prepare a presentation on Napoleon and his contribution to the history of French legislation.

Solve case studies based on the Napoleonic Code of 1804.

Theme 13. Formation of Unified Germany. Development of law in the Modern Era.

Work with the text of a codified legal act — the German Civil Code (BGB) of 1896.

Preparing for the practical, it is necessary to solve the case studies offered in the content of the discipline's work program.

Theme 14. The state and law of Asia in the Modern Era. Japan. China.

The study of this topic should begin with recalling the knowledge about the state and legal development of Japan and China from ancient times.

When preparing for this topic, students should familiarize themselves with the historical events of the Modern era.

Japan: The “opening” of Japan in the mid-19th century. The need for modernization. The Meiji Restoration. The Bourgeois reforms in Japan during the 1870s–1880s. The Constitution of 1889 and establishment of the constitutional monarchy. The power of the emperor. Militarization and territorial expansion of Japan at the end of the 19th and beginning of the 20th centuries.

China: Transformation of China into a semi-colony in the first half of the 19th century. The Opium Wars and China's subordination to European powers. The crisis of the political system of the Qing Empire in the late 19th century.

Theme 16. The state and law of the USA in the Contemporary Era.

Studying this topic, students can independently explore the question of what role the Wagner Act played in the development of the labor union movement.

Theme 17. The state and law of France in the Contemporary Era.

Changes in the political system of the Third Republic after World War I. The party and electoral system in France. The Popular Front in the 1930s. The fall of the Third Republic at the beginning of World War II. The Vichy regime. The Provisional Government of France and the activities of de Gaulle. The Fourth Republic in France. Changes in the party system. The Constitution of 1946 and subsequent constitutional amendments. The fall of the Fourth Republic. The parliamentary-presidential republic. The Constitution of 1958 and its subsequent amendments.

Studying legal sources and educational literature will allow students to present this material in a table titled “Changes in the state-legal system of France in the 20th century: based on the analysis of Constitutional Acts”.

Theme 18. The state and law of Germany in the XXth century.

The fall of Kaiser Wilhelm's Germany in 1918. The establishment of the Weimar Republic.

Familiarization with the German Constitution of 1919. Pay attention to the articles of the Weimar Constitution that contained prerequisites for the formation of a totalitarian political regime.

The Nuremberg Trials. Legal foundations of International Criminal Justice. Preparing this topic, students should familiarize themselves with the main provisions of the Treaty of Versailles.

The preparation of the second question should begin with the emergence and development of the idea of an International Criminal Court in the works of G. Moynier and L.A. Kamarovskiy, H. Kelsen.

Regarding the principles of the organization and functioning of the International Military Tribunal, it is advisable to critically analyze the American draft of the International Military Tribunal.

In addressing the activities of the Nuremberg Trials, it is important to study the work of the Prosecutors' Committee during the Trial, as well as the speeches delivered by the prosecutors.

When discussing the structure and form of the verdict against the Nazi criminals, special attention should be given to the dissenting opinion of the Soviet representative at the International Military Tribunal, I.T. Nikitchenko.

Theme 20. The states and law of Asia in the Contemporary Era. China. Japan.

The Revolution of 1911. The overthrow of the Manchu dynasty and the proclamation of the republic. The military dictatorship of Yuan Shikai.

China: Political fragmentation in the 1920s–1940s. Civil wars and Japanese aggression. The Kuomintang and the Soviet-controlled areas. Mao Zedong. The Communists' restoration of China's territorial integrity. Establishment of the People's Republic of China (PRC) and the provisional constitutional laws of 1949. The PRC Constitution of 1954. The Cultural Revolution of 1966–1976. The Constitutions of 1978 and 1982. The economic and political reforms of the 1980s.

III. ASSESSMENT OF THE QUALITY OF DISCIPLINE MASTERY

The following means may be used as assessment tools among others:

- Questions for written or computer-based testing
- Questions for short written or oral quizzes
- Questions for a vocabulary or concept dictation
- Case studies (situational tasks)
- Essay topics (for essays, reports, or presentations)
- Topics for control assignments (graded papers)
- Questions for tests/exams covering the topics/sections/modules of the discipline

3.1. Practical training tasks

Variant I

Case Study 1

The Babylonian construction contractor Aspasin entered into a written contract with the client Zashir-Bel for the construction of a house. Half a year later, the built house collapsed, resulting in the death of the client's son and damage to his property.

What liability does the contractor bear in this case according to the Code of Hammurabi? Also, cite other articles of the Code dealing with liability under construction contracts.

Methodological guidelines

The solution to the case should begin with a brief overview of the Code of Hammurabi. In particular, students should list the types of contracts mentioned in the Code. Addressing this specific contract, it is necessary to demonstrate the application of the principle of talion (lex talionis) to contractual obligations.

Case Study 2

The French citizens Luc Durand and Jules Berthier entered into a sales contract for a country house owned by Durand. The seller was supposed to hand over the house to the buyer on June 15. However, he did not manage to bring the keys on that day due to a severe thunderstorm. During the storm, lightning struck the house and it partially burned down.

What are the legal consequences of these events for the seller and the buyer under the French Civil Code of 1804?

Methodological guidelines

Solving this case, it is necessary to carefully study the provisions of Book Three of the Napoleonic Code relating to the law of obligations. First of all, students should refer to the definition of a contract contained in the Code. Then, attention should be drawn to Chapter III of Title III, devoted to the "force of obligations," and to Title VI, which deals with the sales contract in order to find the articles applicable to the situation described in the case.

Variant II

Case Study 1

A Roman citizen, Numerius Negidius, borrowed a large sum of money from Aulus Agerius by concluding a nexum contract in the prescribed form. However, he did not manage to repay the debt on time and asked for postponement of debt repayment.

What type of contract was the nexum? What was the procedure for concluding it? What liability arose from its non-performance under the Laws of the Twelve Tables? What changes were introduced by the Petelian Law of 326 BCE?

Methodological guidelines

The solution to the case should be preceded by a brief background on the adoption of the Twelve Tables. Answers to the questions posed must be based on specific provisions of this legal monument.

Case Study 2.

In the summer of 1830, a student named Henri Debrun rented an attic apartment in Paris, whose owner was Jean Buzanquet. In autumn, the tenant asked the landlord to repair a leaking roof. Buzanquet refused to repair the roof and evicted the tenant from his apartment. Debrun sued Buzanquet.

What should be the court’s decision according to the French Civil Code of 1804?

Methodological guidelines

Solving this case, students should refer to the definition of a contract contained in the Napoleonic Code. Then, it is necessary to identify the specific type of contract that was concluded in this case and analyse the relevant articles pertaining to it.

Variant III

Case Study 1

Frank Arnulf, who had killed his neighbor, did not manage to pay the wergild (compensation for the murder) and turned to his relatives for help. His uncle, Sigibert, declared that he no longer considered the murderer his nephew and refused to have anything to do with him or with the rest of the family.

What wergild was established by the Salic law in this case? Are the relatives obligated to assist in its payment? Does Sigibert have the right to renounce the kinship?

Methodological guidelines

Solving this case, students should briefly explain what the “barbarian laws”

(or “leges barbarorum”) are. The answers to the questions posed in the case must be based on specific provisions of the Salic law.

References

Case Study 2

In 1863, a German immigrant named Carl Schulze approached a New York lawyer for help. He explained that he had worked as a farmhand on the estate of a large Prussian landowner all his life but decided to move to the United States in the hope of acquiring land there. The lawyer explained to the client the provisions of the Homestead Act.

Did Carl Schulze have the right to receive a land plot and acquire property ownership?

Methodological guidelines

Solving this case, students should briefly discuss the circumstances of the adoption of the Homestead Act, its goals and significance. Then, apply the provisions of the Act to the situation described in the case.

Variant IV

Case Study 1

Frank Berulf bought a horse from Segimund, promising to pay the agreed price one month later. However, the buyer evaded the payment within the prescribed period. Segimund sued Berulf, but Berulf did not appear at the trial.

What were the legal consequences of his actions under the Salic law?

Methodological guidelines

Solving this case, students should briefly explain what the “barbarian laws” (or “leges barbarorum”) are. The answers to the questions posed in the case must be based on specific provisions of the Salic law.

References

Case Study 2

The deceased German entrepreneur Johann Müller left behind a wife, a son, and a daughter. After the opening of the inheritance, it was revealed that shortly before his death, Müller had issued a special testamentary disposition disinheriting his son due to what the father considered dishonorable behavior.

What part of the inheritance is each of the indicated family members of the deceased entitled to claim according to the State Civil Code of 1900? What is a "mandatory share"?

Methodological guidelines

The solution should be preceded by brief information about the German Civil Code (BGB) and its structure. After that, students should refer to the relevant book of the Code and find the provisions applicable to the situation described in the case.

References

Variant V

Case Study 1

In the 16th century, a German citizen named Karl Schmidt killed a man he did not know. During the interrogation, he explained that the victim had attacked him with a dagger and attempted to rob him while he was returning home from a visit late in the evening with his wife and elderly father.

Shall Karl Schmidt be held responsible for murder under the “Carolina” (Constitutio Criminalis Carolina)? Would the outcome of the case change if Schmidt had been accompanied by adult sons at the time of the attack?

Methodological guidelines

The solution to the case should begin with a brief overview of the “Carolina” (Criminal Constitutions Carolina) - its purpose and significance for the fragmented German territories. After that, by referring to specific provisions of this legal primary source, explain the concept of "justifiable circumstances of deprivation of life" under the Carolina, paying special attention to the articles on necessary defense. In what other cases could the deprivation of life be considered non-punishable?

References

Case Study 2

In 1763, British journalist John Wilkes was arrested for criticizing the king's throne speech delivered by King George III. His attorney petitioned the court for a habeas corpus order.

What legal protections for the rights of an arrested person are provided under the Habeas Corpus Act of 1679?

Methodological guidelines

It is necessary to explain the duties and responsibilities imposed by the Habeas Corpus Act on judges and the administration of detention facilities, as well as the procedure for determining the pre-trial detention measures for the arrested person. Keep in mind that John Wilkes was a real historical figure, and the situation described in the case actually occurred.

 - b) marriage and family relations;
 - c) property relations
 - d) criminal law
 - e) judicial procedure.

Conclusion.

Methodological guidelines

In the introduction of this work, students should speak about the earliest state formations in Mesopotamia and provide a description of the Sumerian city-states.

Then, it is necessary to explain when and how the state of Babylonia emerged. After that, students must systematically describe the social structure, state system, and legal framework of Babylon.

Analysing the text of the Code of Hammurabi, it is important to identify the logic of the presentation of legal material and determine the source from which the legal norms originated.

Examining marriage and family relations, students should identify the marriage requirements, the grounds and procedures for its dissolution, as well as the personal and property rights of spouses. It is also necessary to define the legal status of children. Furthermore, students need to establish the rules of inheritance - including the order of succession, the circle of heirs, the distribution of inheritance shares, and the grounds and procedures for disinheritance.

Beginning the analysis of property relations, it is necessary to provide a description of the main institutions of property law. It should be noted that land was the primary means of production and the main object of property rights. Students need to identify the forms of land ownership, the specific nature of land use by soldiers in Ancient Babylon, and to determine the possibility of land participation in the turnover, including any existing restrictions and methods of protection for various forms of land ownership. In describing obligation relations, students should establish the grounds for the emergence of obligations as seen in the Code of Hammurabi, as well as the guarantees put in place to ensure their fulfillment.

Examining criminal provisions, it is important to define what was considered a crime under the legal system of Ancient Babylon. Students should describe the types of crimes, identify the principles used to determine liability, the aggravating, mitigating, and discharging from liability circumstances, and analyse the purposes and forms of punishment.

In conclusion, students should outline the further fate of the Babylonian kingdom.

The syllabus is compiled in accordance with the requirements of FSES HE

I. GENERAL PROVISIONS

1.1 Aims and objectives of mastering the discipline (module)

The purpose of mastering the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' is the formation of students' ability to actively master a foreign language, including in the sphere of professional activity of a lawyer, as well as readiness for intercultural communication, which is conditioned by the communicative orientation of the discipline and competence-based approach to the organization of the educational process.

The objectives of mastering the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' are:

1. Mastering by students of language material: linguistic, sociolinguistic, cultural, discursive knowledge, including the expansion of the vocabulary at the expense of common, general scientific, general humanitarian, socio-political and basic legal vocabulary.

2. Development and improvement of skills of reading literature in a foreign language in order to obtain meaningful information, including professional information. Special attention is paid to mastering all types of reading (browsing, introductory, studying, searching), since reading as a type of speech activity is widely demanded in solving a large number of communicative tasks.

3. Development and improvement of speaking (monologic and dialogic speech) and listening skills are focused on expressing and understanding information and different communicative intentions typical for situations of sociocultural communication (message, report, discussion, etc.), as well as for the professional and business sphere of activity of future lawyers.

4. Developing the skills of working with information in a foreign language and ways of processing it into various types of documentation by means of abstracting, annotating and translating into Russian.

5. Development and formation of writing skills, the main task of which is to develop the ability to conduct business and personal correspondence, prepare statements, CVs, abstracts and summaries, fill in forms and questionnaires, as well as to make working notes while reading and listening.

6. Formation of skills of achieving semantic equivalence when transferring information of both socio-cultural and professional nature from a foreign language into Russian.

1.2 Pedagogical and methodological principles applied to the mastering of the discipline (module)

It should be noted that the syllabus of the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' is developed taking into account the following pedagogical and methodological principles:

The principle of communicative orientation, which is based on the prevalence of problem-speech and creative tasks over reproductive and training ones; imitation of authentic situations of professional communication, development of spontaneous response skills in the process of communication, formation of psychological readiness for professional foreign-language communication.

The principle of cultural and pedagogical appropriateness, which implies a careful selection of the discipline topics in accordance with the professional communicative needs of a future lawyer, language (terminological), speech and country studies material, as well as the selection of tasks and forms of work taking into account the age, depth of knowledge of the subject professional topics and the expected context of future lawyers' activity.

The principle of consciousness of learning, which activates the purposeful perception and comprehension of the studied language phenomena for the purpose of their further creative processing in the course of speech activity.

The principle of integrativeness, which is understood as the integration of knowledge from various subject disciplines, with simultaneous development of both communicative and professional-communicative, informational and social skills and competences.

The principle of non-linearity, aimed at simultaneous use of different sources of information, rotation of previously obtained information in different modules of the discipline to solve new problems, which also implies the possibility of formation or improvement of several different competences in the course of one topic.

The principle of learner autonomy, which is realised through the openness of information about the learning process, the structure of the discipline, the requirements for training, the content of control and criteria for evaluating the knowledge, skills and abilities acquired. The organisation of classroom and independent work, aimed at the student's awareness of a high level of personal responsibility for the results of academic work, simultaneously provides the opportunity to independently choose the sequence and depth of study of the material, as well as compliance with reporting deadlines.

The principle of personality-oriented education, which is based on the careful selection of the content of the educational material, taking into account the individual professional interests of students, which are often at the intersection of academic disciplines.

The principle of conformity of the content of the discipline (module) to the modern achievements of the development of society, science, culture and personality, which implies the inclusion in the content of education not only traditional knowledge, skills and abilities, but also those that reflect the current level of development of science, technology and society.

The principle of structural unity of the content of professional education at different levels of its formation implies coherence of such components as theoretical understanding of the subject matter, curriculum, teaching material.

1.3 Educational potential of the discipline (module)

The educational potential of the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' allows to participate in the formation of such general cultural competences as the ability to work in a team, tolerantly perceiving social, ethnic, confessional and cultural differences, to form a respectful attitude to the spiritual and material values of other countries and peoples, to improve the moral qualities of the student. Achieving this goal is based on the concept of a personal and humane approach to learning. This approach is now taking centre stage all over the world: humanism is becoming one of the leading principles of education and upbringing. A holistic learning process in higher education means the achievement of educational effect not only in close interrelation with all other educational goals, but also in the process of interrelated implementation of different aspects of education. Such aspects include the following:

- active life position, citizenship, realisation of one's responsibility to the future of the country, one's national dignity and equality of nations, ability to work for the benefit of society and the state;
- respect for other peoples and cultures, historical and spiritual values and traditions, cultural heritage - overcoming national prejudices and discrimination of other nations and peoples;
- high morality, formation of such moral qualities as honesty, decency, responsibility for one's deeds, actions and thoughts;
- general culture of interpersonal communication, allowing, in the process of communication, to set a goal and choose the form of communication, orientated in the situation;
- cognitive activity, aspiration to self-education, ability to set the goal of educational activity, to plan, search and use rational ways of its realisation, to estimate its results, to carry out self-control;
- motivation, conscious attitude to mastering a foreign language as a means of communication, cognition and self-improvement.

As a result of educational work a moral, spiritualized, noble personality of a man and citizen capable of self-organization and self-education should be formed.

Successful mastering of the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' contributes to a fuller formation of a wide range of general cultural, general professional, professional competences in the students as outlined in the Federal State Educational Standards of Higher Education (FSSES HE) in various socio-cultural spheres, as well as in norm-setting, law enforcement, law enforcement and expert-consulting activities by expanding the opportunities of students to use sources of foreign language origin and skills of communication in a foreign language.

1.4 Place of the discipline (module) in the structure of the basic professional academic program

The discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' belongs to the compulsory part of Block 1. Disciplines (modules) of the basic professional academic program of higher education. It has a content-logical connection with the disciplines 'Foreign Language in Law', 'Financial Law', 'Administrative Law', 'Philosophy' and others.

The mastering of the discipline provides an opportunity to expand and deepen the knowledge obtained at the previous stage of education, to acquire skills and abilities determined by the content of the program. Competences, which are formed in the process of mastering the discipline, are necessary for successful professional activity. Students acquire the ability to independently find and use the necessary content-logical links with other disciplines of the main professional educational program of higher education, due to the ability to extract and use information from foreign-language sources.

For successful mastering of the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' of a law school the level of communicative knowledge of a foreign language in the performance of the main types of speech activity (speaking, writing, reading and listening), reaching the threshold level Intermediate/Upper Intermediate on the pan-European scale, according to the document of the Council of Europe called 'Common European Framework of Reference: Learning, Teaching, Assessment' is accepted.

1.5 Formed competences and indicators of their achievement (planned results of mastering the discipline (module))

As a result of mastering the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' the student should have the following competences:

Universal competence:

UK-4 is able to carry out business communication in oral and written forms in the state language of the Russian Federation and foreign language(s);

general professional competence:

OPK-5 is able to build logically correct, reasoned and clear oral and written speech with uniform and correct use of professional legal vocabulary.

In the table below, the listed competences assigned to the discipline in the curriculum do not correlate directly with the topics studied, but correlate with the results of mastering the modules of the educational process according to the principle of non-linear learning.

2.2 Lecture classes

The syllabus of the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' does not provide for lecture classes.

2.3 Seminar-type classes

Means of foreign language professional communication

The following means of foreign-language professional communication are used during the seminar-type classes:

- phonetics

During the study of the discipline (module) 'Foreign language' the main importance is attached to the further development of listening and pronunciation skills taking into account the peculiarities of intonation of various communicative types of utterances.

- vocabulary

When students acquire language knowledge, the main attention is paid to the enrichment of the lexical stock at the expense of new lexical units from the category of common, general scientific, humanitarian and basic legal vocabulary (in accordance with the subject of the discipline), the most frequently occurring lexical units of functional nature (speech clichés). During the period of study (180 academic hours according to the curriculum), the reproductive acquisition of vocabulary of terminological character will amount to approximately 250-300 units, the accompanying vocabulary of general scientific and functional character - approximately 90-130 units, and the receptive acquisition of vocabulary will amount to approximately 300-400 lexical units.

- grammar

In the sphere of studying the grammatical aspect of speech activity it is supposed to repeat, deepen and systematise the grammatical structures studied within the framework of the general education standard in order to activate the skills and abilities of structural and semantic analysis of the text, as well as the applied use of grammatical phenomena in foreign language communication.

2.3.2. Information material on the discipline (module)

Information material on the subject of the discipline is represented by professionally oriented authentic and adapted texts, text files, CDs, elementary databases, sections of websites, web pages, fragments of original educational literature on the speciality and other materials related both to the broad profile of the university and narrowly specialised.

2.3.3. Educational technologies

In the process of teaching the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' the repetition, correction and improvement of students' knowledge in the field of phonetics, vocabulary and grammar of the studied foreign languages is carried out.

The planning of a seminar-type class in the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' is based on the principle of non-linearity, according to which the structure of the class can variably combine several types of learning activities, namely: work with lexico-grammatical material, reading, listening, speaking, writing, elements of translation (from a foreign language into Russian).

2.4 Self-study

The development of self-study skills with a high degree of autonomy and the ability to self-organisation and self-education are an integral part of the general professional and professional competence of students.

The organisation of independent work in a foreign language requires the introduction of a wide range of multimedia, electronic and distance learning technologies with a guaranteed ability to receive-transfer information. Wide access to information of legal and linguo-country information in a foreign language can increase motivation to learn a foreign language, stimulate a creative approach to the development of communicative skills, will allow individualising the way of obtaining the necessary knowledge.

The organisation of independent work is a unity of three interrelated forms:

1. Classroom self-study activities, which are carried out under the direct supervision of the teacher;
2. Extracurricular self-study work on the teacher's assignment.
3. Creative self-study work, including research work.

The main thing in the organisation of independent work is the optimisation of its separate types and creation of conditions of high activity, independence and responsibility of students in the classroom and outside it in the course of all types of learning activities.

2.4.1. Classroom self-study activities

The use of computer technology is encouraged (although the absence of computers is allowed). In the case of linguo-computer-based learning, the main type becomes their out-of-classroom independent work on the teacher's assignment and creative independent work. In this case, the classroom work acts as a preparatory stage for independent fulfilment of tasks.

The students who are not confident enough in mastering a foreign language in the sphere of professional communication should be more intensively involved in independent work. It is necessary to create conditions for the formation of a strong motivation to independently acquire knowledge, to show initiative and readiness to discuss the results of their work.

The students are offered a variety of foreign language tasks, which require the ability to use electronic dictionaries, libraries, databases, search engines (Google, Yandex), online versions of the world's leading newspapers and magazines, and all the proposed tasks are significantly different from the usual language exercises, because to perform them the student must apply previously acquired knowledge on the use of computer software resources, to do a given amount of work and present the results in a certain form.

2.4.2. Options for extracurricular and creative self-study work:

1. Obtaining, processing and recording information on a given topic.
2. Familiarisation with linguistic and cultural information for the preparation of presentations in the classroom.

3. Familiarisation with professionally relevant information on a given topic presented in a foreign language.

4. Preparation of presentations and writing of abstracts, reports on professionally oriented topics with the right to choose a topic.

5. Selecting and studying legal sources in a foreign language, working with periodicals, preparing thematic reviews on periodicals.

6. Preparation for participation in scientific legal conferences both inside and outside the university.

7. Preparation of talks on topical issues of modern law for different audiences (high school students, students of non-legal universities, etc.).

8. Preparation of thematic dictations, crossword puzzles, glossaries.

9. Development of business game scenarios.

10. Selection and familiarisation, selection and translation into Russian (depending on the purpose of the task) of legal foreign-language texts/documents necessary for the study of legal disciplines.

11. Collective or individual project work on a given or independently chosen topic.

When determining the final evaluation of the study of foreign language discipline 30% of it should be the evaluation of independent work of the student.

Teachers conducting training sessions in order to assess the assimilation of knowledge, skills and level of acquired competences carry out the assessment control (check) of self-study activities of students. Thus, the control is carried out 6 times during the training of foreign language for full-time education. At the end of modules 1, 2, 4 the control of independent extracurricular work is carried out. At the end of modules 3 and 5 the control of independent creative work is carried out.

2.4.3. Examples of extracurricular and creative self-study activities

1. 'Job Search. Find on the Internet sites in the foreign language you are studying, containing recommendations on how to write a CV and prepare for a job interview. Select the most relevant questions, prepare answers to them and write a CV (development of the skills of exploratory reading and writing).

2. 'Preparing for participation in a scientific-practical conference of professional orientation'. Find in the Internet or other information sources articles in a foreign language, which give recommendations on how to write scientific communications / theses / reports. Select the most interesting information from your point of view and tell about it in the classroom (development of skills of exploratory reading and speaking).

3. Find material (articles/annotations/essays/reports) on the topic of your interest on the Internet or other information sources and write out examples of definitions, classifications, description of structure, functions, origin, comparison, evaluation of speech, etc. from the selected annotations and articles. Highlight graphically the linguistic means by which the author expresses the specified speech functions (development of skills of exploratory reading and writing).

4. Find in the Internet or other information sources an article in a foreign language containing information on the issue you are interested in. Identify its structural and functional parts (introduction, main part, conclusion) using graphical means. Find definitions, classifications, descriptions, comparisons, etc. in the article, print the corresponding subheadings before each semantic part. Now (using what you have done) make an abstract of the article you have read (development of the skills of reviewing and studying reading, as well as writing).

5. Listen to the audio text according to the teacher's assignment (on an audio cassette, on a CD, on a certain Internet site) and summarise the main/secondary information of the text to answer the teacher's questions during the classroom session (development of listening, writing and speaking skills).

III. QUALITY ASSESSMENT OF MASTERING THE DISCIPLINE (MODULE)

3.1. Assessment materials

For the implementation of procedures of current control of progress, as well as interim certification on the results of mastering the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' creates a fund of assessment materials that allow to assess the achievement of planned in the educational program learning outcomes and the level of competence stated in the program of the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language'.

In order to improve the quality of education, the system of higher education uses a point-rating system of measuring and evaluating the educational activity of students. The use of this system is aimed at solving such important tasks as:

- increasing the motivation of students to active and uniform educational activity during the whole semester on assimilation of scientific knowledge and acquisition of general and professional competences;
- improving the planning and organisation of the educational process by strengthening the role of individualisation of learning, motivated systematic independent work of students aimed at the ability to self-development, self-organisation, self-education and self-realisation;
- development of unified requirements for the assessment of students' achievements in the discipline;
- obtaining versatile and differentiated information about the quality and performance of training on the basis of the ordering of the system of control of knowledge, skills and competences;
- formation of an educational environment that allows the transition to the credit-modular organisation of the educational process;
- formation of objective information about personal learning achievements of students for their moral and material encouragement.

During the semester the teacher carries out three control checks of knowledge, skills, skills and personal qualities - competences for each student from the study group. The control of learning material assimilation is evenly distributed during the semester.

Assessment for the mastering of the discipline, exhibited in the exam sheet and student's credit assessment book, is formed on the basis of accumulated points on the results of current and intermediate control.

In order to bring the current control of progress and interim certification of students following the results of the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' to the tasks of their future professional activity to the control procedures, as well as to the examination of assessment means attract external experts from among the teachers of the relevant departments, teachers of related educational areas, specialists in the development and certification of assessment means.

When teaching the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' to disabled people and persons with disabilities for their convenience, special forms and procedures for the current control of progress and interim certification on the results of mastering the discipline are developed.

3.2. Types and forms of control

The main types of control of the level of educational achievements of students (knowledge, skills, skills and personal qualities - competences) in the framework of this system on the discipline are:

- current assessment of students' knowledge;
- final control on the disciplinary module;
- intermediate assessment of the discipline.

Forms of current assessment can be:

questioning (continuous or selective, written or oral, etc.);

testing (written or computerized);

checking of individual homework assignments;

preparation of essays and reports;

participation in preparing and conducting role-playing and business games;

other forms (at the discretion of the teacher).

When assessing the current performance of the teacher takes into account all types of learning activities of the student (classroom and extracurricular independent work), namely:

1. activity of his/her participation in the work in the classroom;
2. successful formation of skills of general cultural competences in the form of public speaking, ability to listen attentively and understand the statements of other students, to ask questions;
3. the ability to generalise, analyse, perceive information, set a goal and choose ways to achieve it;
4. the ability to build a logical, correct, reasoned and clear oral and written speech;
5. readiness of the student for the class, completeness and quality of homework (independent work);
6. use of additional sources of information in the preparation of homework, including from global computer networks;
7. representativeness of the form of homework.

As forms of control of the training module such methods of verification are used as:

- testing (including computerised testing);
- interview/credit assessment;
- control work;
- independent (individual creative) work;
- business game;
- other forms (at the discretion of the teacher).

3.2.1 Module-based credit assessment

As one of the effective forms of both end-of-term and intermediate control can be offered personally-oriented technology 'module based credit assessment' - a form in which there is a differentiated approach to students with different levels of foreign language proficiency, when students independently choose for themselves tasks of different complexity and the sequence of the credit assessment.

The credit assessment requires good preliminary preparation of students and appropriate methodological support of the lesson. The credit assessment includes several stages (the number can vary and be unlimited). The number of task variants at each stage can also vary (preferably according to the number of students or more, but not less). The rating of a task is determined taking into account its complexity. Teachers have answers to the written assignments, keys to the tests and a rating scale for each assignment. The students independently choose for themselves tasks of different complexity and the sequence of the route. If a very difficult task is chosen, the student has the right to change it for an easier one or to leave the route. The stages are, respectively, vocabulary control, grammar control, reading control, speaking control, listening control; an additional stage is a creative task.

Within each stage, the teacher should prepare tasks of varying degrees of difficulty, assessed by different number of points (from 1 to 5).

The student has the right to choose the tasks according to his/her level of preparation: either it will be one complex task for 5 points, or several simple ones.

The tasks, the correct answers to which will correspond to the mark 'satisfactory', contain the minimum required by this topic. In order to master the advanced level (with a mark of 'good' or 'excellent'), the questions on the above didactic units are expanded, deepened and complicated.

In such a system, both the teacher and the student know the weight of the mark and the rating of the task. If we take, for example, the stage of checking the knowledge of grammar, then the range can vary from tasks for choosing the correct variant from 3 proposed (multiple choice test) to composing their own sentences with the given grammatical phenomenon, or to correct mistakes in a coherent narrative.

Vocabulary control can begin with simple translation of words from a foreign language into Russian and end with translation of whole sentences from Russian into a foreign language, or exercises on word formation.

As creative tasks it is possible to offer students to solve or compose a crossword puzzle on vocabulary on a given topic, to make a colourful advertisement of a company or service, etc.

The module based credit assessment is an alternative form of traditional control and allows to diversify and combine different methods of control, to stimulate students' activity, to develop their creative abilities, to form a psychologically comfortable environment during the control points.

3.2.2 Interim assessment

Intermediate assesment on disciplines is a form of control, conducted at the end of the study of the discipline in the semester. In accordance with the curriculum, the intermediate certification of the discipline is a credit assessment and mixed type exam, which may include:

1. written translation of an authentic text of professional orientation from a foreign language into Russian with a dictionary 800 p. zn. for 0,5 akad. hour;
2. introductory reading of the text (without a dictionary) and answering the teacher's questions 1500 p. zn. for 0.25 akad. hour;
3. interview on an oral topic (optional).
4. Project technology can be recognised as one of the possible forms of intermediate control, as students can fully reveal their research, creative, practice-oriented, information skills and abilities when compiling projects.

Project work, which involves extracurricular creative independent work, is a multilevel approach to language learning, covering reading, listening, speaking and writing. The project method promotes the development of active independent thinking of students and orientates them towards joint research work. Project-based learning is relevant because it teaches students to cooperate, and learning to cooperate fosters such moral values as mutual assistance and empathy, forms creative abilities and activates students. In general, in the process of project-based learning, the inseparability of education and upbringing can be traced.

V. MATERIAL AND TECHNICAL SUPPORT

5.1 Provision of the educational process with other library and information resources and means of providing the educational process

Students are provided with access (remote access) to modern professional databases and information reference systems. Full-text work program of the discipline (module) is placed in the Digital Scientific, Educational and Social Network of the University (hereinafter - TSNOSS), in the system of which 'Electronic personal accounts of the student and scientific and pedagogical worker' function. Access to the materials is possible by entering an individual password. CNOSS is designed to create a personal-oriented information and communication environment that provides information interaction between all participants of the educational process of the Kutafin University, including the provision of publicly available and personalised reference, scientific, educational, social information through services based on the applied information systems of the Kutafin University.

Each student during the entire period of study is provided with individual unrestricted access to electronic library systems (electronic libraries) and to the electronic information and educational environment of the Kutafin University. In addition to the electronic libraries of Kutafin University (MSAL), it is provided with individual unrestricted access to all remote electronic library systems, databases and legal reference systems connected at Kutafin University (MSAL) on the basis of licence agreements and having adapted versions of websites for students with disabilities.

The electronic library system (electronic library) and electronic information and educational environment provide the possibility of simultaneous access of 100 per cent of students from any point where there is access to the information and telecommunication network 'Internet' both on the territory of the Kutafin University (MSAL) and outside it.

The Library's fund of electronic resources includes the following legal reference systems, databases and electronic library systems:

Foreign Language in Jurisprudence: syllabus of the discipline (module)/ T.A. Aganina, N.Y. Ilyina, K.Y. Matiyashina - M.: Publishing Centre of Kutafin Moscow State Law University (MSAL), 2025.

The syllabus is compiled in accordance with the requirements of FSES HE

I. GENERAL PROVISIONS

1.1 Aims and objectives of mastering the discipline (module)

The purpose of mastering the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language in Jurisprudence' is the formation of students' ability to actively master a foreign language, including in the sphere of professional activity of a lawyer, as well as readiness for intercultural communication, which is conditioned by the communicative orientation of the discipline and competence-based approach to the organization of the educational process.

The objectives of mastering the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language in Jurisprudence' are:

1. Mastering by students of language material: linguistic, sociolinguistic, cultural, discursive knowledge, including the expansion of the vocabulary at the expense of common, general scientific, general humanitarian, socio-political and basic legal vocabulary.

2. Development and improvement of skills of reading literature in a foreign language in order to obtain meaningful information, including professional information. Special attention is paid to mastering all types of reading (browsing, introductory, studying, searching), since reading as a type of speech activity is widely demanded in solving a large number of communicative tasks.

3. Development and improvement of speaking (monologic and dialogic speech) and listening skills are focused on expressing and understanding information and different communicative intentions typical for situations of sociocultural communication (message, report, discussion, etc.), as well as for the professional and business sphere of activity of future lawyers.

4. Developing the skills of working with information in a foreign language and ways of processing it into various types of documentation by means of abstracting, annotating and translating into Russian.

5. Development and formation of writing skills, the main task of which is to develop the ability to conduct business and personal correspondence, prepare statements, CVs, abstracts and summaries, fill in forms and questionnaires, as well as to make working notes while reading and listening.

6. Formation of skills of achieving semantic equivalence when transferring information of both socio-cultural and professional nature from a foreign language into Russian.

1.2 Pedagogical and methodological principles applied to the mastering of the discipline (module)

It should be noted that the syllabus of the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language in Jurisprudence' is developed taking into account the following pedagogical and methodological principles:

The principle of communicative orientation, which is based on the prevalence of problem-speech and creative tasks over reproductive and training ones; imitation of authentic situations of professional communication, development of spontaneous response skills in the process of communication, formation of psychological readiness for professional foreign-language communication.

The principle of cultural and pedagogical appropriateness, which implies a careful selection of the discipline topics in accordance with the professional communicative needs of a future lawyer, language (terminological), speech and country studies material, as well as the selection of tasks and forms of work taking into account the age, depth of knowledge of the subject professional topics and the expected context of future lawyers' activity.

The principle of consciousness of learning, which activates the purposeful perception and comprehension of the studied language phenomena for the purpose of their further creative processing in the course of speech activity.

The principle of integrativeness, which is understood as the integration of knowledge from various subject disciplines, with simultaneous development of both communicative and professional-communicative, informational and social skills and competences.

The principle of non-linearity, aimed at simultaneous use of different sources of information, rotation of previously obtained information in different modules of the discipline to solve new problems, which also implies the possibility of formation or improvement of several different competences in the course of one topic.

The principle of learner autonomy, which is realised through the openness of information about the learning process, the structure of the discipline, the requirements for training, the content of control and criteria for evaluating the knowledge, skills and abilities acquired. The organisation of classroom and independent work, aimed at the student's awareness of a high level of personal responsibility for the results of academic work, simultaneously provides the opportunity to independently choose the sequence and depth of study of the material, as well as compliance with reporting deadlines.

The principle of personality-oriented education, which is based on the careful selection of the content of the educational material, taking into account the individual professional interests of students, which are often at the intersection of academic disciplines.

The principle of conformity of the content of the discipline (module) to the modern achievements of the development of society, science, culture and personality, which implies the inclusion in the content of education not only traditional knowledge, skills and abilities, but also those that reflect the current level of development of science, technology and society.

The principle of structural unity of the content of professional education at different levels of its formation implies coherence of such components as theoretical understanding of the subject matter, curriculum, teaching material.

1.3 Educational potential of the discipline (module)

The educational potential of the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language in Jurisprudence' allows to participate in the formation of such general cultural competences as the ability to work in a team, tolerantly perceiving social, ethnic, confessional and cultural differences, to form a respectful attitude to the spiritual and material values of other countries and peoples, to improve the moral qualities of the student. Achieving this goal is based on the concept of a personal and humane approach to learning. This approach is now taking centre stage all over the world: humanism is becoming one of the leading principles of education and upbringing. A holistic learning process in higher education means the achievement of educational effect not only in close interrelation with all other educational goals, but also in the process of interrelated implementation of different aspects of education. Such aspects include the following:

- active life position, citizenship, realisation of one's responsibility to the future of the country, one's national dignity and equality of nations, ability to work for the benefit of society and the state;
- respect for other peoples and cultures, historical and spiritual values and traditions, cultural heritage - overcoming national prejudices and discrimination of other nations and peoples;
- high morality, formation of such moral qualities as honesty, decency, responsibility for one's deeds, actions and thoughts;
- general culture of interpersonal communication, allowing, in the process of communication, to set a goal and choose the form of communication, orientated in the situation;
- cognitive activity, aspiration to self-education, ability to set the goal of educational activity, to plan, search and use rational ways of its realisation, to estimate its results, to carry out self-control;
- motivation, conscious attitude to mastering a foreign language as a means of communication, cognition and self-improvement.

As a result of educational work a moral, spiritualized, noble personality of a man and citizen capable of self-organization and self-education should be formed.

Successful mastering of the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language' contributes to a fuller formation of a wide range of general cultural, general professional, professional competences in the students as outlined in the Federal State Educational Standards of Higher Education (FSSES HE) in various socio-cultural spheres, as well as in norm-setting, law enforcement, law enforcement and expert-consulting activities by expanding the opportunities of students to use sources of foreign language origin and skills of communication in a foreign language.

1.4 Place of the discipline (module) in the structure of the basic professional academic program

The discipline (module) 'Foreign Language in Jurisprudence' belongs to the compulsory part of Block 1. Disciplines (modules) of the basic professional academic program of higher education. It has a content-logical connection with the disciplines 'Foreign Language', 'Financial Law', 'Administrative Law', 'Philosophy' and others.

The mastering of the discipline provides an opportunity to expand and deepen the knowledge obtained at the previous stage of education, to acquire skills and abilities determined by the content of the program. Competences, which are formed in the process of mastering the discipline, are necessary for successful professional activity. Students acquire the ability to independently find and use the necessary content-logical links with other disciplines of the main professional educational program of higher education, due to the ability to extract and use information from foreign-language sources.

For successful mastering of the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language in Jurisprudence' of a law school the level of communicative knowledge of a foreign language in the performance of the main types of speech activity (speaking, writing, reading and listening), reaching the threshold level Intermediate/Upper Intermediate on the pan-European scale, according to the document of the Council of Europe called 'Common European Framework of Reference: Learning, Teaching, Assessment' is accepted.

1.5 Formed competences and indicators of their achievement (planned results of mastering the discipline (module))

As a result of mastering the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language in Jurisprudence' the student should have the following competences:

Universal competence:

UK-4 - capable of carrying out business communication in oral and written forms in the state language of the Russian Federation and foreign language(s);

2.2 Lecture classes

The syllabus of the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language in Jurisprudence' does not provide for lecture classes.

2.3 Seminar-type classes

Means of foreign language professional communication

The following means of foreign-language professional communication are used during the seminar-type classes:

- phonetics

During the study of the discipline (module) 'Foreign language in Jurisprudence' the main importance is attached to the further development of listening and pronunciation skills taking into account the peculiarities of intonation of various communicative types of utterances.

- vocabulary

When students acquire language knowledge, the main attention is paid to the enrichment of the lexical stock at the expense of new lexical units from the category of common, general scientific, humanitarian and basic legal vocabulary (in accordance with the subject of the discipline), the most frequently occurring lexical units of functional nature (speech clichés). During the period of study (216 academic hours according to the curriculum), the reproductive acquisition of vocabulary of terminological character will amount to approximately 250-300 units, the accompanying vocabulary of general scientific and functional character - approximately 90-130 units, and the receptive acquisition of vocabulary will amount to approximately 300-400 lexical units.

- grammar

In the sphere of studying the grammatical aspect of speech activity it is supposed to repeat, deepen and systematize the grammatical structures studied within the framework of the general education standard in order to activate the skills and abilities of structural and semantic analysis of the text, as well as the applied use of grammatical phenomena in foreign language communication.

2.3.2. Information material on the discipline (module)

Information material on the subject of the discipline is represented by professionally oriented authentic and adapted texts, text files, CDs, elementary databases, sections of websites, web pages, fragments of original educational literature on the speciality and other materials related both to the broad profile of the university and narrowly specialised.

2.3.3. Educational technologies

In the process of teaching the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language in Jurisprudence' the repetition, correction and improvement of students' knowledge in the field of phonetics, vocabulary and grammar of the studied foreign languages is carried out.

The planning of a seminar-type class in the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language in Jurisprudence' is based on the principle of non-linearity, according to which the structure of the class can variably combine several types of learning activities, namely: work with lexical and grammatical material, reading, listening, speaking, writing, elements of translation (from a foreign language into Russian).

Term	Type of class	Available interactive methods of learning and teaching	Number of ac.hours
3/4/5	Seminars	- activities in computer labs, use of the Internet, authentic audio and video programs, applications with a selection of various information;	18
		- differentiated tasks, multi-level tests, development of learning trajectories (student-centered technologies);	30
		- searching for and selecting professionally oriented texts, exercises, audio and video materials, commentaries, summarizing, and rendering (technology for developing critical thinking through reading and writing);	18

		- situation modeling, professionally oriented tasks, problem-based learning, pair and small group work, independent work via the Internet (integrative technologies), brainstorming, problem-based discussion, didactic role-playing games, case studies, round tables.	30

Discussion of issues related to sustainable development and its legal enforcement. Developing skills for conducting a professional dispute. Monitoring the performance of self-study work.

2.4 Self-study

The development of self-study skills with a high degree of autonomy and the ability to self-organisation and self-education are an integral part of the general professional and professional competence of students.

The organisation of independent work in a foreign language requires the introduction of a wide range of multimedia, electronic and distance learning technologies with a guaranteed ability to receive-transfer information. Wide access to information of legal and linguo-country information in a foreign language can increase motivation to learn a foreign language, stimulate a creative approach to the development of communicative skills, will allow individualising the way of obtaining the necessary knowledge.

The organisation of independent work is a unity of three interrelated forms:

1. Classroom self-study activities, which are carried out under the direct supervision of the teacher;
2. Extracurricular self-study work on the teacher's assignment.
3. Creative self-study work, including research work.

The main thing in the organisation of independent work is the optimisation of its separate types and creation of conditions of high activity, independence and responsibility of students in the classroom and outside it in the course of all types of learning activities.

2.4.1. Classroom self-study activities

The use of computer technology is encouraged (although the absence of computers is allowed). In the case of linguo-computer-based learning, the main type becomes their out-of-classroom independent work on the teacher's assignment and creative independent work. In this case, the classroom work acts as a preparatory stage for independent fulfilment of tasks.

The students who are not confident enough in mastering a foreign language in the sphere of professional communication should be more intensively involved in independent work. It is necessary to create conditions for the formation of a strong motivation to independently acquire knowledge, to show initiative and readiness to discuss the results of their work.

The students are offered a variety of foreign language tasks, which require the ability to use electronic dictionaries, libraries, databases, search engines (Google, Yandex), online versions of the world's leading newspapers and magazines, and all the proposed tasks are significantly different from the usual language exercises, because to perform them the student must apply previously acquired knowledge on the use of computer software resources, to do a given amount of work and present the results in a certain form.

2.4.2. Options for extracurricular and creative self-study work:

1. Obtaining, processing and recording information on a given topic.

2. Familiarisation with linguistic and cultural information for the preparation of presentations in the classroom.

3. Familiarisation with professionally relevant information on a given topic presented in a foreign language.

4. Preparation of presentations and writing of abstracts, reports on professionally oriented topics with the right to choose a topic.

5. Selecting and studying legal sources in a foreign language, working with periodicals, preparing thematic reviews on periodicals.

6. Preparation for participation in scientific legal conferences both inside and outside the university.

7. Preparation of talks on topical issues of modern law for different audiences (high school students, students of non-legal universities, etc.).

8. Preparation of thematic dictations, crossword puzzles, glossaries.

9. Development of business game scenarios.

10. Selection and familiarisation, selection and translation into Russian (depending on the purpose of the task) of legal foreign-language texts/documents necessary for the study of legal disciplines.

11. Collective or individual project work on a given or independently chosen topic.

When determining the final evaluation of the study of foreign language discipline 30% of it should be the evaluation of independent work of the student.

Teachers conducting training sessions in order to assess the assimilation of knowledge, skills and level of acquired competences carry out the assessment control (check) of self-study activities of students. Thus, the control is carried out 6 times during the training of foreign language for full-time education. At the end of modules 1, 2, 4 the control of independent extracurricular work is carried out. At the end of modules 3 and 5 the control of independent creative work is carried out.

2.4.3. Examples of extracurricular and creative self-study activities

1. 'Job Search. Find on the Internet sites in the foreign language you are studying, containing recommendations on how to write a CV and prepare for a job interview. Select the most relevant questions, prepare answers to them and write a CV (development of the skills of exploratory reading and writing).

2. 'Preparing for participation in a scientific-practical conference of professional orientation'. Find in the Internet or other information sources articles in a foreign language, which give recommendations on how to write scientific communications / theses / reports. Select the most interesting information from your point of view and tell about it in the classroom (development of skills of exploratory reading and speaking).

3. Find material (articles/annotations/essays/reports) on the topic of your interest on the Internet or other information sources and write out examples of definitions, classifications, description of structure, functions, origin, comparison, evaluation of speech, etc. from the selected annotations and articles. Highlight graphically the linguistic means by which the author expresses the specified speech functions (development of skills of exploratory reading and writing).

4. Find in the Internet or other information sources an article in a foreign language containing information on the issue you are interested in. Identify its structural and functional parts (introduction, main part, conclusion) using graphical means. Find definitions, classifications, descriptions, comparisons, etc. in the article, print the corresponding subheadings before each semantic part. Now (using what you have done) make an abstract of the article you have read (development of the skills of reviewing and studying reading, as well as writing).

5. Listen to the audio text according to the teacher's assignment (on an audio cassette, on a CD, on a certain Internet site) and summarise the main/secondary information of the text to answer the teacher's questions during the classroom session (development of listening, writing and speaking skills).

III. QUALITY ASSESSMENT OF MASTERING THE DISCIPLINE (MODULE)

3.1. Assessment materials

For the implementation of procedures of current control of progress, as well as interim certification on the results of mastering the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language in Jurisprudence' creates a fund of assessment materials that allow to assess the achievement of planned in the educational program learning outcomes and the level of competence stated in the program of the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language in Jurisprudence'.

In order to improve the quality of education, the system of higher education uses a point-rating system of measuring and evaluating the educational activity of students. The use of this system is aimed at solving such important tasks as:

- increasing the motivation of students to active and uniform educational activity during the whole semester on assimilation of scientific knowledge and acquisition of general and professional competences;
- improving the planning and organisation of the educational process by strengthening the role of individualisation of learning, motivated systematic independent work of students aimed at the ability to self-development, self-organisation, self-education and self-realisation;
- development of unified requirements for the assessment of students' achievements in the discipline;
- obtaining versatile and differentiated information about the quality and performance of training on the basis of the ordering of the system of control of knowledge, skills and competences;
- formation of an educational environment that allows the transition to the credit-modular organisation of the educational process;
- formation of objective information about personal learning achievements of students for their moral and material encouragement.

During the semester the teacher carries out three control checks of knowledge, skills, skills and personal qualities - competences for each student from the study group. The control of learning material assimilation is evenly distributed during the semester.

Assessment for the mastering of the discipline, exhibited in the exam sheet and student's credit assessment book, is formed on the basis of accumulated points on the results of current and intermediate control.

In order to bring the current control of progress and interim certification of students following the results of the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language in Jurisprudence' to the tasks of their future professional activity to the control procedures, as well as to the examination of assessment means attract external experts from among the teachers of the relevant departments, teachers of related educational areas, specialists in the development and certification of assessment means.

When teaching the discipline (module) 'Foreign Language in Jurisprudence' to disabled people and persons with disabilities for their convenience, special forms and procedures for the current control of progress and interim certification on the results of mastering the discipline are developed.

3.2. Types and forms of control

The main types of control of the level of educational achievements of students (knowledge, skills, skills and personal qualities - competences) in the framework of this system on the discipline are:

- current assessment of students' knowledge;
- final control on the disciplinary module;
- intermediate assessment of the discipline.

Forms of current assessment can be:

questioning (continuous or selective, written or oral, etc.);

testing (written or computerized);

checking of individual homework assignments;

preparation of essays and reports;

participation in preparing and conducting role-playing and business games;

other forms (at the discretion of the teacher).

When assessing the current performance of the teacher takes into account all types of learning activities of the student (classroom and extracurricular independent work), namely:

1. activity of his/her participation in the work in the classroom;
2. successful formation of skills of general cultural competences in the form of public speaking, ability to listen attentively and understand the statements of other students, to ask questions;
3. the ability to generalise, analyse, perceive information, set a goal and choose ways to achieve it;
4. the ability to build a logical, correct, reasoned and clear oral and written speech;
5. readiness of the student for the class, completeness and quality of homework (independent work);
6. use of additional sources of information in the preparation of homework, including from global computer networks;

7. representativeness of the form of homework.

As forms of control of the training module such methods of verification are used as:

- testing (including computerised testing);
- interview/credit assessment;
- control work;
- independent (individual creative) work;
- business game;
- other forms (at the discretion of the teacher).

3.2.1 Module-based credit assessment

As one of the effective forms of both end-of-term and intermediate control can be offered personally-oriented technology 'module based credit assessment' - a form in which there is a differentiated approach to students with different levels of foreign language proficiency, when students independently choose for themselves tasks of different complexity and the sequence of the credit assessment.

The credit assessment requires good preliminary preparation of students and appropriate methodological support of the lesson. The credit assessment includes several stages (the number can vary and be unlimited). The number of task variants at each stage can also vary (preferably according to the number of students or more, but not less). The rating of a task is determined taking into account its complexity. Teachers have answers to the written assignments, keys to the tests and a rating scale for each assignment. The students independently choose for themselves tasks of different complexity and the sequence of the route. If a very difficult task is chosen, the student has the right to change it for an easier one or to leave the route. The stages are, respectively, vocabulary control, grammar control, reading control, speaking control, listening control; an additional stage is a creative task.

Within each stage, the teacher should prepare tasks of varying degrees of difficulty, assessed by different number of points (from 1 to 5).

The student has the right to choose the tasks according to his/her level of preparation: either it will be one complex task for 5 points, or several simple ones.

The tasks, the correct answers to which will correspond to the mark 'satisfactory', contain the minimum required by this topic. In order to master the advanced level (with a mark of 'good' or 'excellent'), the questions on the above didactic units are expanded, deepened and complicated.

In such a system, both the teacher and the student know the weight of the mark and the rating of the task. If we take, for example, the stage of checking the knowledge of grammar, then the range can vary from tasks for choosing the correct variant from 3 proposed (multiple choice test) to composing their own sentences with the given grammatical phenomenon, or to correct mistakes in a coherent narrative.

Vocabulary control can begin with simple translation of words from a foreign language into Russian and end with translation of whole sentences from Russian into a foreign language, or exercises on word formation.

As creative tasks it is possible to offer students to solve or compose a crossword puzzle on vocabulary on a given topic, to make a colourful advertisement of a company or service, etc.

The module based credit assessment is an alternative form of traditional control and allows diversifying and combining different methods of control, to stimulate students' activity, to develop their creative abilities, to form a psychologically comfortable environment during the control points.

3.2.2 Interim assessment

Intermediate assesment on disciplines is a form of control, conducted at the end of the study of the discipline in the semester. In accordance with the curriculum, the intermediate certification of the discipline is a credit assessment and mixed type exam, which may include:

1. written translation of an authentic text of professional orientation from a foreign language into Russian with a dictionary 800 p. zn. for 0,5 akad. hour;
2. introductory reading of the text (without a dictionary) and answering the teacher's questions 1500 p. zn. for 0.25 akad. hour;
3. interview on an oral topic (optional).
4. Project technology can be recognised as one of the possible forms of intermediate control, as students can fully reveal their research, creative, practice-oriented, information skills and abilities when compiling projects.

Project work, which involves extracurricular creative independent work, is a multilevel approach to language learning, covering reading, listening, speaking and writing. The project method promotes the development of active independent thinking of students and orientates them towards joint research work. Project-based learning is relevant because it teaches students to cooperate, and learning to cooperate fosters such moral values as mutual assistance and empathy, forms creative abilities and activates students. In general, in the process of project-based learning, the inseparability of education and upbringing can be traced.

V. MATERIAL AND TECHNICAL SUPPORT

5.1 Provision of the educational process with other library and information resources and means of providing the educational process

Students are provided with access (remote access) to modern professional databases and information reference systems. Full-text work program of the discipline (module) is placed in the Digital Scientific, Educational and Social Network of the University (hereinafter - TSNOSS), in the system of which 'Electronic personal accounts of the student and scientific and pedagogical worker' function. Access to the materials is possible by entering an individual password. CNOSS is designed to create a personal-oriented information and communication environment that provides information interaction between all participants of the educational process of the Kutafin University, including the provision of publicly available and personalised reference, scientific, educational, social information through services based on the applied information systems of the Kutafin University. Each student during the entire period of study is provided with individual unrestricted access to electronic library systems (electronic libraries) and to the electronic information and educational environment of the Kutafin University. In addition to the electronic libraries of Kutafin University (MSAL), it is provided with individual unrestricted access to all remote electronic library systems, databases and legal reference systems connected at Kutafin University (MSAL) on the basis of licence agreements and having adapted versions of websites for students with disabilities.

The electronic library system (electronic library) and electronic information and educational environment provide the possibility of simultaneous access of 100 per cent of students from any point where there is access to the information and telecommunication network 'Internet' both on the territory of the Kutafin University (MSAL) and outside it.

I. GENERAL PROVISIONS

1.1. Objectives and tasks of mastering the discipline (module).

The purpose of mastering the discipline (module) "Theory of State and Law" is to obtain knowledge concerning the theoretical foundations and scientific concepts of the emergence, development, change of types and forms of state and law; functions of the state and law; the system of law and the system of legislation; the mechanism of legal regulation; sources of law; legal relations; the main forms of implementing the law; interpretation of law; lawful behavior and offenses; legal liability, human rights. This will allow students to acquire and develop the ability to independently assess specific tasks, and, using theoretical skills and abilities, analyze various legal situations, look for the most optimal ways to resolve them. When passing the discipline (module) "Theory of State and Law", three main goals are comprehensively formed and achieved - general educational, legal and practical, revealing issues about the essence, content and forms of the state and law, the evolution of state and legal institutions. Consistent mastering of key concepts and categories that form the theoretical and methodological foundation of industry legal disciplines (modules) provides an understanding of the meaning of political and legal processes within which the formation and development of state and law institutions occurs, forms in students a responsible civic attitude and professional skills in various areas of state and legal activity.

The objects of professional activity of students are public relations in the sphere of implementing legal norms, ensuring legality and law and order.

The discipline (module) "Theory of State and Law" provides the student with the necessary baggage of basic knowledge and skills, without which further successful mastery of specialized subjects and disciplines (modules), as well as the application of acquired knowledge in practice, is impossible.

When passing the discipline (module), issues of increasing the general legal culture of students are comprehensively resolved. The objectives of the discipline (module) "Theory of State and Law" are to develop the ability and readiness in the process of professional activity to implement and interpret legal norms; carry out their examination and systematization; participate in law-making activities.

When completing the course (module) "Theory of State and Law", three main goals are comprehensively formed and achieved - general educational, legal and practical, revealing issues about the essence, content and forms of the state and law, the evolution of state and legal institutions.

Consistent mastering of key concepts and categories that form the theoretical and methodological foundation of sectoral legal disciplines (modules) provides an understanding of the meaning of political and legal processes within which the formation and development of state and law institutions occurs, forms in students a responsible civic attitude and professional skills in various areas of state and legal activity.

The objects of professional activity of students are public relations in the sphere of implementing legal norms, ensuring legality and law and order. The discipline (module) "Theory of State and Law" provides the student with the necessary baggage of basic knowledge and skills, without which further successful mastery of specialized subjects and disciplines (modules), as well as the application of acquired knowledge in practice, is impossible.

When passing the discipline (module), issues of increasing the general legal culture of students are comprehensively resolved.

The objectives of the discipline (module) "Theory of State and Law" are the formation of the ability and readiness in the process of professional activity to implement and interpret legal norms; carry out their examination and systematization; participate in law-making activities.

1.2. The place of the discipline (module) in the structure of the OEP HE

The discipline (module) "Theory of State and Law" is a mandatory part of Block 1. "Disciplines (modules)" of the main professional educational program of higher education.

The discipline (module) is based on the "input" knowledge that students have when receiving secondary general education.

The students master the discipline (module) "Theory of State and Law" simultaneously with such disciplines (modules) as "Philosophy", "History of the State and Law of Russia", "History of the State and Law of Foreign Countries". At the same time, the discipline (module) "Theory of State and Law" is basic for studying such disciplines (modules) as "Constitutional Law", "Administrative Law", "Civil Law (module)", "Labor Law", "Criminal Law (module)", "Land Law", "Financial Law", and other industry-specific legal disciplines (modules). Students acquire the ability to independently find and use the necessary substantive and logical connections with other disciplines (modules) of the program, such as: Constitutional Law; Legal Technique.

1.3. Formed competencies and indicators of their achievement (planned results of mastering the discipline (module))

Upon completion of the course (module), the student must possess the following competencies:

Universal competencies:

- is able to search, critically analyze and synthesize information, apply a systematic approach to solving assigned tasks (UC-1);
- is able to perceive the intercultural diversity of society in socio-historical, ethical and philosophical contexts (UC-5);

Professional competencies:

- is able to develop draft regulatory legal acts, legal norms for various levels of rule-making and areas of professional activity, assess possible legal risks of implementing regulatory requirements or other decisions, the need to change regulatory legal acts and justify such changes (PC-1);

General professional competencies:

Module 1.

Topic. Subject and methodology of the state and law

1. State and law as objects of study of social sciences. The subject of the theory of state and law. Theory of state and law as a science discipline (module).
2. Methodology of the theory of state and law.
3. Interdisciplinary relations of the theory of state and law in the system of social and legal sciences. 3.

Preparation tasks:

- To make up for the knowledge and skills acquired by them as a result of mastering 'History' and 'Social Science' studied in the framework of secondary (complete) general education, including on the basis of the knowledge obtained as part of the study of the optional subject 'Jurisprudence' at school.

Topic. Origin of the state and law

1. General characterisation of the original social systems. Institutions of social power and normative systems of primitive societies.
2. Prerequisites and peculiarities of the emergence of law. Prerequisites for the emergence of statehood.
3. The main theories of the emergence of the state and law.

Preparation tasks:

- To make up for the knowledge and skills acquired as a result of mastering 'History' and 'Social Studies' studied in the framework of secondary (complete) general education;

- special attention should be paid to the problem of correlation between the forms of social organisation of primitive societies and the forms of organisation of public power and social and normative regulation. The power and law of primitive society derived from the collective beginning in its organisation and functioning. Law as a social institution emerges practically together with the state, because in many respects they are called to ensure the effectiveness of each other's action. Bodies of state power became the main structures controlling the fulfilment of legal prescriptions and realising in case of their violation appropriate legal sanctions.

Topic. The concept of law. Principles and functions of law

1. The role of legal understanding in the definition of law. Signs of the right. The essence and content of law.
2. The concept of functions of law. The system of functions of law. Principles of law: concept and classification.
3. Law in the system of social and normative regulation.
4. Law and other social institutions.

Preparation tasks:

- to make up for the knowledge on the issues of institutions of power and normative regulators of early and transitional societies, received by them during the study of previous topics of this discipline (module);

- it is important to pay special attention to the issues of potestary law, historical forms of emergence and existence of law: customary law (proto-law), authorized customary law (legal custom), religious law, judicial law, legislative law. It is important to examine the concept of mononorms in more detail, analyzing its significance in the development, of the theory of the origin of law. The origin, character, nature of law are conditioned by many factors - economic, political, cultural, national, religious. The main mission of law is to be an objective, fair and effective regulator of social relations, the participants of which are carriers of relevant interests and needs. An important aspect of law is that it acts as an official measure, a scale of individual freedom, freedom legally recognized, guaranteed, expressed (formalized) in the form of laws and other normative acts.

Topic. Law in the system of social and normative regulation

1. The concept of social regulation. Normative and non-normative regulators.
Law in the system of social regulation.

2. Classification of social norms.

3. Correlation of social and technical norms. Technical-legal norms.

4. Law and customs. Law and morality. Law and religion.

Preparation tasks:

1. study the recommended academic literature on the topic.

2. Make a comparative table "Social norms".

3. Find examples of technical-legal norms in the current normative legal acts of the Russian Federation.

When studying this topic it is necessary to take into account the following:

- it is important to understand that social systems constitute a variety of systems of behavior regulation;

- It is accepted to distinguish between normative regulation proper and non-normative regulation, which is based on value, directive and informational ways of influencing people's consciousness and actions;

- technical regulators are of special importance in the general mechanism of behavior regulation, providing the most effective ways of interaction with objects of the natural world, objects and means of labor, and technical means;

- all social norms, operating both in traditional and modern society, have the purpose of ordering social relations and bringing certainty into them;

- it is important not only to distinguish between separate forms of social regulation - customs, morality, religion and law, but, above all, between their overlap, intersection and collisions in the real process of social communication.

Topic. The concept and types of forms (sources) of law

1. The concept of "form (source of law)". Correlation of the concepts of "form of law" and "source of law".

2. Types of sources of law. General characteristics.

3. Customary law and legal custom.

4. Judicial law. Judicial precedent.

5. Normative legal act: concept, features and system.

Preparation tasks:

1. study the recommended academic literature on the topic.
2. Make a scheme "Hierarchy of normative legal acts in the Russian Federation".

When studying this topic it is necessary to take into account the following there are different approaches to the definition of the relationship between the concepts of "source of law" and "form of law": identification and distinction of these categories;

The sources of law in the substantive sense and sources of law in the legal or formal sense. The source of law in the legal sense is a form of expression, fixation, positivization of objective law;

- mastering the material of this topic presupposes knowledge of the main forms of law - legal customs, legal precedents, legal doctrines, normative legal acts, with which the development and functioning of various legal systems is connected

Topic. Norms of law

1. The concept and features of the norm of law.
2. Logical structure of the norm of law.
3. Classification of norms of law.
4. Methods of presentation of norms of law

Preparation tasks:

1. Study the recommended academic literature on the topic.
2. Make a scheme "Classification of norms of law".

When studying this topic it is necessary to take into account the following:

- norm of law is the primary element of the system of law, so it is necessary to be clearly oriented in the system of their main and optional features;

- it is important to distinguish between norms-prescriptions, norms-objectives, norms-definitions and other special rules in terms of the composition of the constituent elements, structure and performed functions in the mechanism of legal regulation;

- legal science distinguishes different types of hypothesis, disposition and sanction as elements of the structure of a legal norm;

- for a clearer understanding of the relationship between the rules of behavior and forms of their objectification it is necessary to carefully consider the options developed by legal practice of the presentation of legal norms in the articles of normative acts: direct, reference and blanket.

MODULE 2.

Topic. Lawmaking and systematization of law

1. Legal formation and law-making.
2. The concept, principles and types of law-making.
3. Law-making process. Legislative process.
4. Stages of the legislative process.

5. Limits of validity of normative acts.
6. Systematization of normative legal acts

Preparation tasks:

1. study the recommended academic literature on the topic.
 2. Make a scheme "Stages of the legislative process in the Russian Federation".
 3. Make a comparative table "Systematization of normative legal acts".
- When studying this topic, it is necessary to take into account the following:
- there are various forms of legal process, providing the formation of the development and reproduction of law;
 - the process of normative formation, law-making and lawmaking are distinguished;
 - the concept of "lawmaking" covers all types and methods of activity to formulate and formalize volitional decisions general rule of behavior;
 - lawmaking in relation to different types of legal systems is characterized by a certain subject composition, procedures for the development of normative legal provisions, stages of development and adoption of rules of conduct;
 - the issues of systematization of the current normative massif, especially such forms as incorporation, consolidation and codification, are of significant importance in the study of the topic.

Preparation tasks:

- The study of this topic assumes that students have knowledge of the concept, attributes and functions of law, legal norms, systematisation of law, the concept and types of law-making, sources of law, legal technique. Systematicity is a general property of all types of law. The system of law shows what elements, parts of law consist of and how they relate to each other. Under the system of law is understood its internal structure, formed objectively as a reflection of the really existing and developing social relations. The actual social order of society, the state determines this or that system of law, its branches, institutes. The structure of law is ultimately predetermined by the nature of social relations at a particular stage of historical development.

Topic. Legal Technique

1. Legal technique: concept and types.
2. Means, techniques, rules, methods of legal technique.
3. Technical-legal categories.
4. Legal documents: concept, signs, requisites and types.

Preparation tasks:

1. study the recommended academic literature on the topic.
2. Make a scheme "Types of legal documents".

3. Find examples of technical-legal categories in the current normative legal acts of the Russian Federation.

When studying this topic it is necessary to take into account the following:

legal technique is understood as a system of rules, techniques and methods of preparation, execution, publication of normative legal acts and other legal documents;

- it is necessary to distinguish separate types of legal technique, serving the law-making process itself, as well as the processes of application and interpretation of law;

- special attention should be paid to the rules of construction and design of normative legal acts, requisites of certain types of legal documents;

- the role of technical-legal categories in the mechanism of legal regulation - legal axioms, legal fictions, legal presumptions - is of significant importance.

Topic. Realisation of law. Gaps and conflicts in the law. Interpretation of law

1. The concept of realisation of law. Forms of realisation of law. Law enforcement as a special form of realisation of the right.

2. Law enforcement acts: concept and classification.

3. The concept of a gap in the law. Collisionality of law.

4. The concept of interpretation of law. Methods of interpretation of law.

5. Types of interpretation of law. Acts of interpreting law.

Preparation tasks:

- special attention should be paid to the fact that the process of implementation of the law proceeds under the influence of a number of factors - socio-economic, political, cultural, moral, psychological, organisational and others. The mechanism of the implementation of law is quite complex and multidimensional. The implementation of law is a complex of interrelated legal activities, the nature and directions of which depend on the peculiarities of certain norms, their objectives and content, legal force and hierarchy, sectoral affiliation;

- Special attention should be paid to the issues covered, concerning the concept and attributes of law, its internal structure, legal norms, their main varieties, the mechanism of the State, and the system of State bodies. The study of the topic includes the analysis of the two main legal processes of the implementation of law - the implementation of subjective law and the implementation of objective law.

MODULE 3.

Topic. Mechanism of legal regulation

1. The concept of the mechanism of legal regulation. Elements of the mechanism of legal regulation.

2. Types, methods and ways of legal regulation. Limits of legal regulation.

3. The concept of legal consciousness. Functions, types and levels of legal consciousness.

4. The concept of 'legal culture'. Legal realism, legal idealism and legal nihilism.

Preparation tasks:

- Law as an instrument of social management is designed to order social relations, ensuring the implementation of positive interests of subjects. The mechanism of legal regulation is a system of different in nature and function legal means to achieve its goals. The concept of the mechanism of legal regulation allows to collect and systematise legal means of legal impact on social relations, to designate their place and role.

- special attention should be paid to the issues of the concept and attributes of law, the system of law, its structural elements, implementation and interpretation of legal norms.

- Legal consciousness is one of the forms of social consciousness, which plays a special role in judicial, prosecutorial and investigative practice. With the help of legal consciousness all elements of the legal system of society are comprehended, evaluated, analysed. Legal consciousness is closely connected with legal culture, legal education of a citizen. Legal culture reflects human activity not only directly in the legal sphere, but also outside it, associated with the application of legal knowledge. When studying this topic, students should understand that legal regulation, its boundaries and effectiveness directly depend on and are determined by the level of development of legal consciousness and legal culture.

Topic. Lawful behaviour and offence

1. The concept of lawful behaviour. Typology of lawful behaviour.
2. The concept of offence. Legal construction of the composition of an offence.
3. Types of offences.

Preparation tasks:

- Lawful behaviour is the most important social characteristic of a person, the essence of which is manifested in practical activity. Lawful behaviour is such behaviour that complies with the requirements of legal norms. Obedience to legal imperatives is conditioned by the life experience of an individual, his cultural, moral and legal views.

- Illegal behaviour is opposed to lawful behaviour. By their orientation and content, these concepts act as antipodes, characterised by polarity. Offences undermine the foundations of the normal life of society, the regime of law and order. In preparation for the lecture, students should focus on the concept and attributes of law, the mechanism of the state, legal relations, and the implementation of law.

- The material of this topic allows students to get a necessary and sufficient understanding of two forms of social behaviour - lawful and unlawful behaviour.

Topic. Legal responsibility

1. General theory of legal responsibility. Goals, functions and principles of legal responsibility.
2. Circumstances excluding legal responsibility. Grounds for exemption from legal responsibility.

Topic. Law and order. Human rights.

1. The concept of legality. Legality and law. Legality and the state. Principles and guarantees of legality.
2. The concept of law and order. The system of legal orders.
3. Human and civil rights. Evolution of the concept of human rights. Main historical documents.
4. The system of human rights. International legal institutions for the protection of human rights.

Preparation tasks:

- preparation for the lecture is based on the students' knowledge of the issues devoted to the concept and attributes of law, system of law and system of legislation, legal technique, lawful behaviour, offences and legal responsibility;
- legality is connected with the strict and strict observance by all subjects of law of the laws existing in the country and subordinate normative acts based on them;
- law and order is a system of relations protected, defended and regulated by law. Special attention should be paid to the factors affecting the level of legality and law and order;
- the search for an optimal model of the relationship between the state and the individual is always a complex problem. These models depend crucially on the nature of society, the type of property, democracy, economic development and culture. Human rights and freedoms are natural and inalienable and are recognised as a supreme value. Recognition, observance and protection of human rights are the responsibility of the State;
- It is necessary to dwell in detail on the essence and social purpose of the state, functions of the state, the concept and attributes of law, implementation of law, lawful behaviour, offences and legal responsibility;
- It is necessary to familiarise oneself with various theoretical approaches in the study of the relationship between the state and the individual.

Topic. Legal systems of modern times

1. The concept of legal system. Types of legal systems: general and special.
2. Comparative law: method, science and discipline (module).

3. Globalisation processes and legal systems.

Preparation tasks:

- The legal system is an integrating category reflecting the entire legal organisation of society. In addition to law as the core element, the legal system includes many other components: law-making, justice, legal practice, normative, law enforcement acts, acts of interpretation of law, legal relations, subjective rights and legal duties, legality, mechanisms of legal regulation, legal consciousness and so on;
- special attention should be paid to the topics on sources of law, system of law and system of legislation, implementation and interpretation of law;
- you should familiarise yourself with modern points of view on the interaction, mutual influence and mutual enrichment of legal systems, especially in the context of globalisation and unification of socio-economic and socio-cultural conditions of social development.

MODULE 4.

Topic. The concept of the state. Functions of the state

1. The concept of the state. Historical typology. Formational and civilisational approaches to the typology of the state.
2. Functions of the state: concept and classification. Forms and methods of exercising the functions of the state.

Preparation tasks:

- The state is a political organisation of sovereign public authority, which has been separated from society and conditioned by its socio-economic pattern, traditions, culture. The state as a governing system has its own internal logic of development, clear structural organisation, specific mechanism of interaction between structural elements.
- It is necessary to repeat the educational material obtained during the study of the subjects 'History' and 'Social Studies' in the framework of secondary (complete) education, paying special attention to the features that constitute statehood as such, specific features that characterise the historical varieties of the institution of the state, arising at certain phases of socio-economic and socio-political development of social systems.

Topic. Form of the state

1. The concept of the form of the state. Form of government, form of territorial structure and form of political regime.
2. Interstate associations.

Preparation tasks:

- The form of the state, as a way of organising political power, is influenced by factors of socio-economic, national-historical, geographical, religious nature. The political life of society and the stability of political institutions largely depend on the form of the state.
- It is necessary to make up for the knowledge of 'History' and 'Social Studies', received in the framework of secondary (full) education.

- It is necessary to pay special attention to the historical forms of the emergence of the state, models of statehood, to repeat the main theories of the origin of the state.

Topic. Mechanism of the state

1. The concept of 'mechanism of the state'. Functions of the state and the mechanism of the state. The principle of separation of state power and the mechanism of the state.

2. The concept of a state body. System and types of state bodies.

3. Principles of organisation and activity of state bodies.

4. Public service.

Preparation tasks:

- The state acts, manifests itself only as a system, as an ordered set of special bodies, collectives of people who manage the affairs of society on its behalf and within the limits of granted powers. The mechanism of the state is an organisational and material force, with which the state pursues a certain policy. The analysis of the state from the point of view of its mechanism allows to reveal the place and role of each element in the system of state power, to determine its optimal structure, hierarchical relations with other elements.

- It is necessary to repeat the material on the origin of the state and law, the concept and functions of the state, and the forms of the state.

- It is important to analyse the state not only as a political corporation of citizens, but also as an administrative institution.

- It is necessary to know the concept of the state, material (substantive) and formal (instrumental) functions of the state, methods and forms of their implementation, trends in the development of state functions in the context of globalisation.

Topic. The state in the political system of society

1. The concept and levels of the political system of society. The place of the state in the political system.

2. The state and civil society.

Preparation tasks:

- it is necessary to repeat the passed material, having learnt that the state as a political and legal institution exists in the system of social relations; understand the differences between the political and civil component of the social system, which is fixed by the categories civil society and political society or state.

1. The concept and attributes of a norm of law.
2. Logical structure of the norm of law.
3. Classification of norms of law.
4. Methods of presentation of norms of law in normative legal acts.

Preparation tasks:

1. Study the recommended academic literature on the topic.
2. Make a scheme 'Classification of norms of law'.

When studying this topic it is necessary to take into account the following:

- a norm of law is a primary element of the system of law, therefore it is necessary to be clearly orientated in the system of their main and optional features;

- it is important to distinguish between norms-prescriptions, norms-objectives, norms-definitions and other special rules in terms of the composition of the constituent elements, structure and fulfilled functions in the mechanism of legal regulation;

- legal science distinguishes different types of hypothesis, disposition and sanction as elements of the structure of a legal norm;

- for a clearer understanding of the relationship between the rules of behaviour and forms of their objectification, it is necessary to carefully consider the options developed by legal practice of the presentation of legal norms in the articles of normative acts: direct, reference and blanket.

MODULE 2.

Topic 7: Law-making and systematisation of law

1. Legal formation and law-making.
2. The concept, principles and types of law-making.
3. Law-making process. Legislative process.
4. Stages of the legislative process.
5. Limits of validity of normative acts.
6. Systematisation of normative legal acts.

Preparation tasks:

1. Study the recommended academic literature on the topic.
2. Make a scheme 'Stages of the legislative process in the Russian Federation'.
3. Make a comparative table 'Systematisation of normative legal acts'.

When studying this topic it is necessary to take into account the following:

- there are various forms of legal process, providing the formation of the development and reproduction of law;
- The process of normative formation, law-making and lawmaking are distinguished;
- the concept of 'lawmaking' covers all types and methods of activity on formulation and execution of volitional decisions of the general rule of behaviour;
- law-making in relation to different types of legal systems is characterised by a certain subject composition, procedures for the development of normative legal provisions, stages of development and adoption of rules of conduct;
- the issues of systematisation of the current normative massif, especially such forms as incorporation, consolidation and codification, are of significant importance in the study of the topic.

Topic 8: Legal Technique

1. Legal technique: concept and types.
2. Means, techniques, rules, methods of legal technique.
3. Technical-legal categories.
4. Legal documents: concept, attributes, requisites and types.

Preparation tasks:

1. Study the recommended academic literature on the topic.
2. Draw up a scheme 'Types of legal documents'.
3. Find examples of technical-legal categories in the current normative legal acts of the Russian Federation.

When studying this topic it is necessary to take into account the following:

- legal technique is understood as a system of rules, techniques and methods of preparation, execution, publication of normative legal acts and other legal documents;
- it is necessary to distinguish separate types of legal technique, serving the law-making process itself, as well as the processes of application and interpretation of law;
- special attention should be paid to the rules of construction and design of normative legal acts, requisites of certain types of legal documents;

- the role of technical-legal categories in the mechanism of legal regulation - legal axioms, legal fictions, legal presumptions - is of significant importance.

Topic 9: System of Law and System of Legislation

1. The concept and structural elements of the system of law.
2. The main criteria for dividing law into branches: the subject and method of legal regulation.
- 3.
3. The system of branches of law.
4. Public and private law. Substantive and procedural law. National and international law.
5. System of law and system of legislation: subject and functional relations

Preparation tasks:

1. Study the recommended academic literature on the topic.
2. Draw up a table 'Structural elements of the system of law'.

When studying this topic it is necessary to take into account the following:

- the key element of the system of law is a legal institute (a relatively autonomous legal formation that provides targeted regulation of certain types of social relations), the theory of legal institutes is a central part of the theory of law, as they are the supporting structures of individual branches of law;
- branches of law differ in the subject matter and methods of legal regulation;
- it is necessary to be clearly orientated in the material and formal criteria of differentiation of branches of law developed by legal science;
- the issues of definition and qualification of the concepts of 'public and private law', 'substantive and procedural law', 'objective and subjective law', as well as the correlation of national and international law are of significant importance.

Topic 10. Legal relations

1. The concept and attributes of legal relations.
2. Classification of legal relations.
3. Structure of legal relations.
4. Subjects of legal relations.
5. Objects of legal relations.
6. The content of legal relations.
7. Legal facts: concept and classification. Legal composition.

Preparation tasks:

1. Study the recommended academic literature on the topic.
2. Draw up a scheme 'The structure of legal relations'.

When studying this topic it is necessary to take into account the following:

- the concept of 'legal relation' is one of the key categories of theoretical jurisprudence, it is necessary to pay special attention to the issue of correlation of legal norms and legal relations;

- volitional, normative-duty content of law within the framework of legal relations is manifested in the form of subjective legal rights and subjective legal obligations;
- special attention should be paid to the identification of the main characteristics of legal relations - their subject composition, objects and content;
- differences in the subject composition, objects and content of legal relations determine the diversity of legal relations as a form of realisation of law;
- special attention should be paid to the issue of classification of legal relations and the grounds for their emergence, change and termination, simple and complex legal facts and legal states.

Topic 11. Realisation of law. Gaps and conflicts in the law

1. The concept and forms of realisation of law.
2. Law enforcement as a form of realisation of law. Subjects and stages of law enforcement process.
3. Law enforcement acts: concept, classification, correlation with normative-legal acts.
4. Gaps in the law: concept and types. Ways to eliminate and overcome gaps.
5. Collisions in law. The procedure for resolving conflicts in law.

Preparation tasks:

1. Study the recommended academic literature on the topic.
2. Make a comparative table 'Forms of the implementation of law'.
3. Find in the current normative legal acts of the Russian Federation the norms regulating the issue of applying the law by analogy.

When studying this topic it is necessary to take into account the following:

- the differences between the two main legal processes of the implementation of law - the implementation of subjective right and the implementation of objective right characterise the various forms of the implementation of law: compliance, use and execution of law and application of law;
- each form of law implementation is characterised by its subject composition, legal actions and procedures;
- law enforcement activity is a complex legal process, in which the subjects are specially authorised bodies, whose activity is subordinated to a system of legal criteria-requirements, which together ensure the legality of the decisions made;
- application of legal norms is formalised by acts-documents, acts of application of law, the legal nature of which reveals itself when comparing them with normative legal acts;
- it is necessary to clearly distinguish between the legal nature of the gap in legal regulation and conflict of law. The gap of law is the absence of legal regulation of social relations. Collisionality of law is a system of contradictions between individual norms and legal acts regulating social relations.
- Legal theory and practice have developed a number of approaches and ways to overcome legal gaps and resolve legal conflicts. Special attention should be paid to the analysis of objective and subjective factors of their occurrence, political, economic and legal reasons for their formation and development.

Topic 12. Interpretation of law

1. The concept and role of interpretation of law.
2. Methods (techniques) of interpreting law.
3. Types of interpretation of law. Subjects of interpretation.
4. Acts of interpreting law: concepts and classification.
5. Acts of interpretation of law and normative legal acts.

Preparation tasks:

1. Study the recommended academic literature on the topic.
2. Make a scheme 'Types of interpretation of law'.
3. Select examples of legal norms in the current normative legal acts of the Russian Federation to illustrate certain ways of interpreting the law.

When studying this topic it is necessary to take into account the following:

- Under the interpretation of legal norms is understood the activity aimed at establishing the legal content of law, disclosure of the actual will of the legislator;
- Interpretation of law is a complex integrated phenomenon, combining elements of research, understanding of law and formal explanation of law, which has certain legal consequences;
- legal practice has developed a number of universally recognised ways of interpreting law, it is necessary to clearly distinguish their place and importance in the general mechanism of implementation and application of law;
- The result of the interpretation of law consists of acts of interpretation or interpretative acts, which have their own structure, content, form and requisites;
- legal qualification of acts of interpretation of law implies their comparison with normative legal acts and acts of application of law.
- A special place in the study of this topic is given to the role of legal interpretation in relation to different types of legal systems.

MODULE 3.

Topic 13. Mechanism of legal regulation

1. Legal regulation and legal impact: general and special.

1. The concept, types, objective and subjective sides of lawful behaviour.
2. The concept and characteristics of an offence. Legal construction of an offence: elements and characteristics.
3. Types of offences.
4. Prevention of offences.

Preparation tasks:

1. Study the recommended academic literature on the topic.
2. Make a table 'Composition of an offence: elements and characteristics'.
3. Find in the current normative legal acts of the Russian Federation the directions of prevention of offences.

When studying this topic it is necessary to take into account the following:

- there are two forms of social behaviour - lawful (conscious volitional actions of individuals and legal entities, corresponding to the prescriptions of legal norms) and unlawful behaviour (synonymous with deviating from the normatively established standard of social behaviour), both forms of behaviour are characterised by certain features;

- taking into account the volitional aspect of both forms of social behaviour, it is necessary to distinguish between objective and subjective grounds of lawful and unlawful behaviour - their subjects, objects, objective side and subjective side;

- when studying the category of offence, it is necessary to distinguish between the causes and conditions of offences, taking into account that the fight against offences includes two main directions: prevention of committing offences and consistent application of measures of legal responsibility.

Topic 16. Legal liability

1. Concept, attributes, grounds of legal responsibility.
2. Goals, functions and principles of legal responsibility.
3. Types and measures of legal responsibility.
4. Circumstances that exclude legal responsibility. Grounds for exemption from legal responsibility.

Preparation tasks:

1. Study the recommended academic literature on the topic.

2. Draw up a table 'Types of legal responsibility'.

When studying this topic it is necessary to take into account the following:

- the issues of legal responsibility occupy a central place in the theory of state and law, legal responsibility is a complex legal category and legal institute;

- it is necessary to study the whole complex of features that qualify legal responsibility as a form and measure of social state coercion;

- it is necessary to disclose the goals, functions and principles of legal responsibility, the grounds of legal responsibility;

- the normative basis of legal responsibility is the norms of law, and the factual basis is the offence;

- it is necessary to clearly distinguish between separate types of legal liability in terms of their sectoral affiliation, content, forms of implementation and sanctions;

- of fundamental importance are the issues concerning the circumstances excluding legal liability (insanity, incapacity, etc.), as well as the grounds for exemption from legal liability, based on the legislative definitions.

Topic 17. Law and order

1. The concept of legality.

2. Principles and guarantees of legality.
3. The concept of law and order. Correlation of legality and law and order.
4. National and international legal order.

Preparation tasks:

1. Study the recommended academic literature on the topic.
2. Prepare for a discussion on the correlation between national and international legal order.

When studying this topic it is necessary to take into account the following:

- legality and law and order are complex categories, since in legal science the concept of 'legality' is disclosed on the basis of different ideas about the forms and ways of legal organisation of social systems;
- legality is understood as a principle of state-legal life in general, a method of public administration, as a legal regime of behaviour of subjects of law;
- it is necessary to grasp the existence of a wide range of principles of legality, considered as fundamental principles, ideas and requirements imposed on various subjects of law within a certain social order of social relations, all these principles are not abstract categories, but 'suffered' in practice forms of organisation of society on legal principles;
- law and order in this sense is nothing but a manifestation of the principle of legality, it is simultaneously realised and unrealised legality;
- The factors contributing to legality and law and order are, ultimately, all the constituent elements of the existing legal system - the system of law, the system of legislation, the system of legal education and upbringing.

Topic 18. Human rights

1. Theoretical approaches. Evolution of the concept of human rights.
2. Legal status of an individual: concept, structure and types.
3. Guarantees of individual rights and freedoms. Restrictions on the rights and freedoms of the individual.

V. MATERIAL, TECHNICAL AND SOFTWARE SUPPORT OF THE ACADEMIC DISCIPLINE (MODULE)

5.1. Providing the educational process with other library and information resources and means of supporting the educational process

Students are provided with access (remote access) to modern professional databases and information reference systems. The full-text work program of the academic discipline (module) is posted in the Digital Scientific, Educational and Social Network of the University (hereinafter referred to as the DSES), in the system of which "Electronic personal accounts of students and research and teaching staff" are functioning. Access to materials is possible by entering an individual password. The Center for Personal Information and Communications is designed to create a personality-oriented information and communication environment that ensures information interaction of all participants in the educational process of O.E. Kutafin University (MSAL), including providing them with publicly available and personalized reference, scientific, educational, social information through services operating on the basis of applied information systems of O.E. Kutafin University (MSAL). Each student is provided with individual unlimited access to electronic library systems (electronic libraries) and to the electronic information and educational environment of O.E. Kutafin University (MSAL) throughout the entire period of study. In addition to the electronic libraries of O.E. Kutafin Moscow State Law University (MSAL), it is provided with individual unlimited access to all remote electronic library systems, databases and reference and legal systems connected to the O.E. Incident # 1.

On September 20, 202__, a citizen of the Russian Federation Bubnov, born in 1995, who has a higher education and speaks the state language, submitted documents to the territorial body of the Federal Tax Service to participate in the competition for a civil service position in the category "supporting specialists" of the senior group of civil service positions.

Entering the civil service, Bubnov presented a number of documents to the employer's representative. A competition commission was established by a legal act of the territorial body of the Federal Tax Service to conduct a competition to fill a vacant civil service position.

The competition commission consists of a representative of the employer and civil servants authorized by him (including those from the civil service and personnel department, the legal (legal) department and the department where the competition is held to fill a vacant civil service position), independent experts - representatives of scientific and educational organizations.

The competition consisted in assessing the professional level of applicants for a civil service position in the territorial body of the Federal Tax Service, their compliance with the established qualification requirements for filling a civil service position.

Bubnov won the competition, on October 20, 202__ . A service contract was signed with him.

On December 15, 202_, to fill a civil service position in the same territorial body of the Federal Tax Service, Bubnov's cousin Ivanov submitted an application for participation in the competition. Bubnov's position was connected with direct subordination to his brother in the event of Ivanov's victory in the competition.

Questions about the incident:

1. What legal norms govern the relations described in this situation?
2. Do administrative-legal or labor relations arise in this situation? If so, describe the structure of these relationships.
3. How should this situation be resolved? Can a citizen of Bubnov remain in a civil service position in a territorial body of the Federal Tax Service if he wins the Ivanov competition? Can Ivanov be accepted into the civil service, based on the conditions of the incident?

Incident # 1

Pobedinin, a student of the Moscow State Law University, was walking on Moscow's Red Square. Police officers Sergeant Sergeev and Private Alekseyev approached him. Without introducing himself, Sergeant Sergeev asked Ivanov to produce an identity document. The student explained to the police that he had left his passport at home and that he only had a student ID with him. The police officers explained to Pobedin that the student ID card was not a document proving the identity of a citizen of the Russian Federation, and rudely asked him to follow them to the nearest police station for identification. Pobedin spent 3 hours in the Kitay-Gorod police department, after which he was released home, without drawing up any procedural documents.

Questions about the incident:

1. List the regulatory legal acts that are necessary to resolve this situation.
2. Are the demands and actions of police officers legitimate in this situation?
3. Has the student Pobedinus violated the norms of the legislation of the Russian Federation?
4. Can Pobedinus use administrative and legal means to protect his rights and freedoms in this situation? If so, which ones and in what order?

Incident# 2

Citizen Matveev came to the ice rink on a day off to relax and go ice skating. According to the rules established at the rink, in addition to paying for admission and rental of skates, it was also necessary to deposit a passport or other identity document. Matveyev paid the set amount for the rental, and handed over not a passport, but a driver's license to the tenant of the skating rink, the owner of "Snezhok" LLC, Citizen Aliyev, as a pledge. Citizen Aliyev accepted the document and allowed Citizen Matveev to enter the ice rink.

Questions about the incident:

1. Are there any violations of legal norms in the context of this incident? Was the deposit of a passport or other identity document legally established by the rules of LLC "Snezhok"?

2. What documents certify the identity of a citizen of the Russian Federation? Which state control and supervisory authority can be contacted with a complaint if there are violations of legal norms in the conditions of the task?

Incident #3

On May 1, 202__, at the Pyatnitskoe Shosse metro station in Moscow, police officers checked the documents of foreign citizens. In this regard, they stopped I., a native of Tajikistan, and K., a native of Ukraine, who were moving in the direction of the metro entrance, to check their passports. During the inspection, it turned out that they did not have any documents confirming their right to legally stay in the Russian Federation. When asked about the reason for the absence of these documents, I. and K. said that they were stolen, but they do not know where to turn in case of loss of documents, since they are residents of other countries.

The police officers detained these citizens and took them to the police station, where they drew up a protocol on the case of an administrative offense under Part 1. 1 of Article 18.8 of the Administrative Code of the Russian Federation, which establishes administrative liability for violation by a foreign citizen or a stateless person of the regime of stay (residence) in the Russian Federation, expressed in the absence of documents confirming the right to the right to stay (reside) in the Russian Federation, or in case of loss of such documents; in failure to submit an application for their loss to the relevant body, or in evasion from leaving the Russian Federation after a certain period of stay, if these actions do not contain signs of a criminally punishable act.

After 10 days, the case was referred to the Justice of the Peace. According to the decision of the Justice of the Peace, these foreign citizens were brought to administrative responsibility with an administrative fine of 7,000 rubles.

Questions about the incident:

1. Determine the rules of law governing the social relations described in the situation, and justify their choice.
2. What are the main differences between the administrative and legal status of foreign citizens and the administrative and legal status of Russian citizens?
3. Identify the circumstances that are of legal significance when bringing foreign citizens to administrative responsibility.

Practical lesson No. 1 on topic 5. Subjects of executive power

Incident # 1

Description of the situation (document text):

The President of the Russian Federation, in his annual address to the Federal Assembly of the Russian Federation in December 202__, instructed the Government of the Russian Federation to reduce the country's inflation rate by no more than 4% until October next year.

On October 13, 202__, the President of the Russian Federation personally held a meeting of the Government of the Russian Federation and heard reports from the Chairman of the Government of the Russian Federation, the First Deputy Chairman of the Government of the Russian Federation, and the Minister of Economic Development of the Russian Federation. From the content of the reports, it follows that the Government of the Russian Federation failed to reduce the rate of inflation in the Russian Federation, and by October 202__, the inflation rate was more than 10 %.

The President of the Russian Federation asked several questions to the members of the Government regarding the reasons for non-fulfillment of the assignment. The Prime Minister of the Russian Federation replied that the order was not issued by an official decree and for this reason was advisory and promising for the Russian economy. The Head of State expressed his clear dissatisfaction with the activities of the Russian Government, which in the context of the economic crisis could not influence one of the key macroeconomic indicators.

At the end of the meeting of the Government of the Russian Federation, the President of the Russian Federation criticized the members of the supreme executive body and said that he was resigning it. In the evening of the same day on the official Internet portal of legal information <http://pravo.gov.ru> <http://pravo.gov.ru> The Decree of the President of the Russian Federation on the resignation of the Government of the Russian Federation was published. In the text of the Decree, it was indicated that the powers of the Prime Minister of the Russian Federation will temporarily be performed by the Head of the Presidential Administration.

The Prime Minister of the Russian Federation disagreed with the decision of the President of the Russian Federation, referring to the fact that first the issue of confidence in the Government of the Russian Federation should be resolved in the constitutional order.

Questions about the incident:

1. What regulatory legal acts are necessary to resolve the described situation?
2. What are the legal implications of the situation described above?
3. What violations of the law on the part of officials are present in this situation? Could the Prime Minister of the Russian Federation disagree with the decision of the President of the Russian Federation and raise the issue of confidence in the Federation Council?

Incident 2

The Chairman of the Government of the Russian Federation on January 19, 202__, at a regular meeting of the Government of the Russian Federation, signed a corresponding official order instructing the Minister of Transport of the Russian Federation to reduce the number of federal highways that do not meet state technical requirements to at least 10% during the current calendar year.

On December 21 of the same year, at a meeting of the Government of the Russian Federation, the Prime Minister of the Russian Federation gave the Minister the opportunity to make a report on the implementation of this order. The Minister of Transport said that the number of roads that do not meet the established standards is decreasing. Nevertheless, the growth rate of high-quality roads remains low, and the number of federal highways that do not meet state standards is 20 %.

The Prime Minister of the Russian Federation asked several clarifying questions to the Minister of Transport regarding the reasons for non-compliance with the order regarding reducing the number of federal roads that do not meet the standards. The Minister referred to the economic crisis in the country and the lack of adequate funding for the repair of federal highways from the federal budget.

After discussing the report, the Prime Minister of the Russian Federation recognized the results of the ministry's work as unsatisfactory and signed an order to remove its head from office. In the evening of the same day, the document was published on the official Internet portal of legal information (<http://pravo.gov.ru>).

The next day, the Prime Minister of the Russian Federation met with the President of the Russian Federation and discussed possible candidates for the post of Minister of Transport of Russia.

Questions about the incident:

1. What regulatory legal acts are necessary to resolve the described situation?
2. What are the legal implications of the situation described above?
3. Is the procedure for removing the Minister of Transport of the Russian Federation described in the task legal? Give a legal analysis of the incident.

Practical lesson #1 on topic #6 "Administrative and legal status of civil servants"

Incident 1

18-year-old Russian citizen Tuchkov, who also has Kyrgyz citizenship, who notified the migration authorities of the Russian Federation in a timely manner about this fact, received a summons to the military enlistment office with a request to appear for conscription in the Armed Forces of the Russian Federation. Tuchkov arrived at the military enlistment office, where he passed a medical examination, according to the results of which he was declared fit for military service. After that, Tuchkov refused to serve on conscription, referring to the fact that citizens of the Russian Federation who have citizenship of another state cannot perform military service on conscription, but can only enter it under a contract, exclusively at their own request.

Questions about the incident:

1. Determine the legal norms governing the described relationships and justify their choice.
2. What are the circumstances described in the situation described above that are of legal significance for resolving the incident? Were the norms of the legislation on conscription and military service correctly applied by both sides in this situation? Justify your answer for each item.
3. What are the possible actions of the military enlistment office and citizen Tuchkov in the future?

Incident 2

The lieutenants of Petersburgers and Sibirtsev arrived in the city of N-sk on a referral from the University of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of Russia, where they were trained in accordance with a contract that provides for the obligation of a citizen or employee of the internal affairs bodies to serve in the internal affairs bodies after completing their studies in an educational organization of higher education or a scientific organization of the federal executive authority in the field of internal affairs. less than 5 years old.

They came to the Department of Internal Affairs of the N-ska, where the specified lieutenants Petersburzhtsev and Sibirtsev were signed service contracts. While still studying at the University, Petersburgers and Siberians were sworn in as employees of the internal affairs bodies of the Russian Federation.

As they got acquainted with the city, they saw a rally taking place on the main city square, where representatives of various political parties criticized the activities of the President of the Russian Federation, the Government of the Russian Federation, the State Duma of the Federal Assembly of the Russian Federation and various executive and local government bodies.

Imbued with the ideas expressed by the protesters, Petersburgers also spoke at this rally with criticism of the position of the Minister of Internal Affairs on some issues. He also participated in picketing of the local Department of Internal Affairs, and was detained for participating in uncoordinated picketing.

Sibirtsev joined the organization of the strike of state and municipal employees of the city of N-Ska and joined the trade union of state employees and was immediately elected to the position of deputy chairman of the specified trade union.

As a result, the actions of both lieutenants were recognized as a gross violation of official discipline by an employee of the internal affairs bodies, and they were dismissed by the head of the internal affairs department of the N-ska.

Also, a decision was made to collect tuition fees for both of them.

Questions about the incident:

1. Determine the legal norms governing the described relationships and justify their choice.
2. What are the circumstances described in the situation described above that are of legal significance for resolving the incident? Have the norms of the law on service in the internal affairs bodies been applied correctly in this situation? Justify your answer for each item.
3. What are the possible actions of Petersburgsev and Sibirtsev's dismissal from service in the internal affairs bodies? What are the possible actions of Petersburgsev and Sibirtsev to collect the cost of studying at the university from them?

Incident 1

Citizen Kozlov together with his friends Novikov and Murzin on May 1, 202_ at about 10 o'clock in the morning with the flag of the USSR were near the monument to Lenin on the central square of the city of Ensk. The company gathered at the monument behaved peacefully and did not violate public order by their actions. Police officers Sergeant Volkov and Private Semenov, who were on duty on the square at that time, approached a group of friends and asked them to leave this place in connection with the official event organized by the city administration at 11 o'clock on the same day. However, Kozlov and his friends refused to comply with this requirement. After that, Sergeant Volkov asked each member of the company to produce identification documents. In response, citizen Kozlov said that this request of the police officer is illegal and he and his friends are not going to present documents. After listening to Kozlov, the police officers used physical force against the citizens and took them to the nearest police station in the city of Ensk. There, a protocol on an administrative offense for failure to comply with the legal requirements of law enforcement officers was drawn up for each citizen. A week later, Judge Ivanov imposed administrative fines of 5,000 rubles on Kozlov, Novikov and Murzin and additional punishments of 100 hours of compulsory labor for each person brought to justice.

Practical lesson on topic # 9 "Administrative and legal coercion"

Incident # 1

During a routine inspection of the residents of the house No. 5 on Mira Street on October 1, 202_ by the district police commissioner Captain Smirnov, it was established that Alekseyev, a student of the State University who arrived in Moscow from Ryazan, had expired his passport due to reaching the age of 20. At the time of the inspection, the student Alekseyev was 21 years old, and his passport was not replaced.

The district police officer said that on this fact he will be forced to draw up a protocol on an administrative offense for living at the place of stay without a passport. Alekseyev did not object to this, stating that he did indeed have an expired passport, but this passport was registered at the place of stay and this circumstance does not violate the requirements of the legislation of the Russian Federation.

The district police officer additionally checked the registration document at the place of stay and told the student that since the passport is invalid, the registration document is also invalid, and he will be forced to draw up two reports on an administrative offense.

After that, the district police officer drew up reports on administrative offenses, brought student Alekseev to administrative responsibility for living on an invalid passport and living at the place of stay without registration, assigning punishments for the first fact-an administrative fine of 3,000 rubles, and for the second fact – an administrative fine of 5,000 rubles.

Questions about the incident:

1. What regulatory legal acts are necessary to resolve this situation?
2. What administrative and legal enforcement measures have been applied to the police in this situation?
3. Are there any violations of legal norms in the context of this task?
4. What is the procedural procedure for bringing to administrative responsibility for committing the acts specified in the task conditions? Could the student Alekseyev not let the district commissioner Smirnov into the residential premises?

Practical lesson # 1 on topic # 11 "Administrative and procedural activities"

Incident # 1

The citizen appealed to the Ministry of Finance of the Russian Federation with a complaint against the decision of the Federal Service for State Registration, Cadastre and Cartography to refuse him state registration of the garage. Considering that his rights were significantly violated, he formulated several requirements in the complaint: first, to recognize the decision of Rosreestr as essentially illegal and oblige his authorized bodies and officials to carry out state registration of the right to a garage; second, to return to him the state fee paid for the implementation of state registration of the right to real estate; and, third, bring all responsible persons to disciplinary responsibility.

Questions about the incident:

1. Do administrative and procedural relations arise in this situation? If so, what type of administrative process do these legal relationships relate to?
2. Determine the legal rules governing the situation described.
3. Does the Russian Ministry of Finance have the authority to consider the complaint? Justify the answer. Give a legal analysis of the requirements set out by the citizen in the complaint.

Topics of essays and research papers

1. Scientific approaches to the definition of the concept of "administrative process".
2. Problems of codification of procedural legislation.

Practical lesson # 2 on the topic # 11 "Administrative and procedural activities"

Incident # 1

09.10.2023 based on the results of consideration of the documents submitted by Petrov A.V. for state registration, the Federal Tax Service for the Krasnoarmeysky district of Volgograd decided to refuse state registration due to the failure of the applicant to submit the necessary documents for state registration, as well as the signing by an unauthorized person of an application for state registration or an application for making changes to the information about a legal entity contained in Unified State Register of Legal Entities.

The Department of the Federal Tax Service for the Volgograd Region (hereinafter referred to as the Department of the Federal Tax Service for the Volgograd Region), having considered A.V. Petrov's request to restore the deadline for filing a complaint against the decision of the Federal Tax Service for the Krasnoarmeysky District of Volgograd dated 09.10.2023, concluded that there were no valid reasons for missing the deadline for filing a complaint, and by letter No. 08-25/2 dated 15.01.2024/ 05296 rejected the applicant.

The law regulating the public relations in question has been amended to provide for a mandatory pre-trial procedure for appealing decisions on refusal of State registration.

Petrov A.V., believing that the registration authority groundlessly and in violation of the provisions of Law No. 129-FZ issued the appealed decision, 10.04.2024 appealed to the Arbitration Court of the Volgograd region with the above requirements. When applying to the court, the applicant presented evidence of sending a complaint against the decision of the territorial registration authority to the Department of the Federal Tax Service for the Volgograd Region before applying to the court.

Questions about the incident:

1. What legal norms govern the relations described in this situation? On the basis of what norms (including points and articles) did the tax authorities decide to refuse state registration due to the failure of the applicant to submit the necessary documents for state registration, as well as the signing by an unauthorized person of an application for state registration or an application for making changes to the information about a legal entity contained in the Unified State Register of Legal Entities?

2. What circumstances described in the situation described above are of legal significance for resolving the incident? What regulatory legal act provided for a mandatory pre-trial procedure for appealing decisions on refusal of state registration? What is the procedure for reviewing and time limits for filing a complaint against the decision of the registration authority?

3. What violations of the law on the part of officials are present in this task? Can a citizen Petrov A.V. appeal against the decision of the tax authority despite the fact that the Department of the Federal Tax Service for the Volgograd region refused to consider the complaint? What regulatory legal acts should be followed in this situation when appealing illegal decisions of state authorities to the court? Is this right guaranteed by the Constitution of the Russian Federation?

Practical lesson # 1 on topic # 12 "Ensuring the rule of law in the sphere of executive power implementation"

Incident # 1

The Governor of the N-th region issued a Decree "On certain issues of holding public events in the territory of the N-th region "(hereinafter referred to as the Decree).

In addition to the places where holding public events is prohibited in accordance with Part 2 of Article 8 of Federal Law No. 54-FZ of June 19, 2004 "On Meetings, Rallies, Demonstrations, Marches and Picketing", Paragraph 6 of the Decree established the following places:: 1) territories adjacent closer than 100 meters to medical institutions, children's and educational institutions, religious, sports and recreation organizations; 2) territories adjacent closer than 20 meters to buildings where state authorities and local self-government bodies are located; and others.

Citizen I. applied to the district court for invalidation of paragraph 6 of the Decree, as it violates the principle of legality.

Questions about the incident:

1. What legal norms govern the relations described in this situation? Justify the answer.

2. Whether there is a violation of the law in the described situation. If so, how is it expressed?

3. What types of state control can be applied in this situation to ensure the rule of law?

4. Does I. have the right to apply to the district court for invalidation of paragraph 6 of the Decree? What decision should be made on the case? Justify your position.

Practical lesson # 2 on topic # 12 "Ensuring the rule of law in the implementation of executive power"

Incident # 1

E. Gremuchaya, an employee of the federal TV channel, together with the crew of the program "Boiling Point" is preparing a series of programs about the quality of services of public catering enterprises, hotels, and other consumer market facilities, in particular restaurants.

On December 13, 202__, the TV channel was filming a TV program in Zhel-togorsk. The film crew headed by the author of the program E. Gremuchaya, without notifying the employees and management of Ogonyok LLC, began videotaping visitors, employees, and premises of the restaurant owned by Ogonyok LLC. In addition, the program author and operator entered warehouses and production facilities (kitchens, cold storage rooms), checked compliance with sanitary requirements for the maintenance of production and storage facilities, as well as requirements for stored and manufactured products (expiration dates, terms and conditions of food storage, measuring the humidity level in the room using special devices checking compliance with the requirements for special clothing for employees of premises, etc.).

At the same time, at the request of the security guards to turn off the equipment and show permission to shoot, E. Gremuchaya said:: "Filming is permitted in accordance with the Constitution of the Russian Federation and the Federal Law on Mass Media, and obstructing the legitimate activities of a journalist is unacceptable and punishable." In response to the request to leave the Ogonyok restaurant and get the consent of the LLC management to hold such events, the film crew presented the TV channel's ID cards and continued preparing the report.

The director of the restaurant questioned the legitimacy of this check and the correctness of the procedure for its implementation.

Questions about the incident:

1. What rules of law govern the relations described in this situation? Is there any state or public control or administrative supervision here? Justify the answer.

2. Determine the circumstances that are important for protecting the rights of Ogonyok LLC in an administrative manner?

3. What actions should be taken and in what order to protect the interests of a business entity in the situation described in the task, if it is established that violations of the law were committed by the mass media?

Incident # 2.

The Prosecutor's Office of the city of Sevastopol, with the involvement of specialists from the Main Directorate for Migration Issues of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of Russia, conducted an audit of the implementation of migration legislation.

In January 202__, it was established that in violation of the requirements of the law, the management of LLC "Romashka" hired 10 citizens from Uzbekistan.

During the audit, it was found that LLC "Romashka" did not ensure the migration registration of these foreign citizens staying in the hostel "Romantic", which is on the balance sheet of the enterprise and thereby violated the current legislation. LLC "Romashka" did not admit its guilt in committing this administrative offense, arguing that foreign citizens should register for migration themselves.

The Prosecutor's Office of Sevastopol initiated an administrative offense case against Romashka LLC.

Questions about the incident:

1. Give a brief description of the prosecutor's supervision. What forms of public prosecutor's response to detected violations exist?

2. Please list the regulatory legal acts that are necessary to resolve this situation? Give a legal analysis of this situation.

3. What measures of prosecutor's response can the Prosecutor's office of Sevastopol apply in this case? What should be included in the content of this document?

Practical lesson # 5 on topic # 14 "Legal foundations of management in the administrative and political sphere"

Incident # 1

In order to counteract covert foreign interference in the internal political affairs of Russia, the Government of the Russian Federation decided to include the Novy Vektor public association in the Register of Non-Profit Organizations performing the Functions of a Foreign agent. The decision taken by the Government of the Russian Federation was executed on its own instructions by the territorial body of the Ministry of Justice of the Russian Federation, which notified the public association "Novy Vektor" of the assigned status of a foreign agent 5 days later.

The head of the Novy Vektor public association decided to appeal this decision to the court, since his activities are related to an independent assessment and collection of public opinion on issues not included in the list of information in the field of military and military-technical activities, which, if received by a foreign state, can be used against the security of the Russian Federation.

Questions about the incident:

1. What regulatory legal acts are necessary for the legal assessment of the described situation?
2. What decision should the court make in this situation?

Incident # 2

In connection with the entry into force of Federal Law No. 10-FZ of February 6, 2023 "On Probation in the Russian Federation", the Federal Penitentiary Service of Russia, as a subject of probation, developed rules for organizing the activities of probation centers, according to which specialized organizations were supposed to be created in order to provide assistance to persons who are subject to penitentiary or post-penitentiary probation, including providing a temporary place of stay. Probation centers, according to the provisions of the normative legal act, were planned to be established in the system of bodies and institutions of the penitentiary system, as well as by religious organizations, public associations and other interested entities.

The draft regulatory legal act, which includes these provisions, was drawn up by the legal group of its developers in the form of an order and submitted for signature to the Director of the Federal Penitentiary Service of Russia.

Questions about the incident:

1. What regulatory legal acts are necessary for the legal assessment of the described situation?
2. Is the Director of the Federal Penitentiary Service of Russia authorized to adopt an order approving the rules for organizing the activities of probation centers? Explain your answer.

Practical lesson # 1 on topic # 16 Legal bases of management in the socio-cultural sphere

An incident.

The educational organization of secondary professional education "Law College of Modern Law" since September 1, 2022 carried out educational activities on the territory of the city of Moscow.

According to the requirements of the educational legislation, in order to conduct educational activities, it is necessary to obtain a license to conduct educational activities and pass the procedure of state accreditation of the educational program. The licensing procedure was carried out in 2022, and in 2023 only one program of secondary vocational education was accredited out of three programs, the implementation of which the College informed applicants and parents on its website. In addition, the college was recruiting for additional education programs: foreign language courses, computer science programs, trainings in the field of business communication, development of speech and negotiation skills.

On September 25, 2024, the Moscow Department of Education received an appeal from a group of parents of College students who pointed out the lack of licensing of additional education provided by the educational organization, as well as the lack of accreditation of a number of College educational programs and the incomplete implementation of some educational programs provided for in the curriculum. In particular, in the four subjects specified in the curriculum and in the schedule, training was not conducted under the pretext of transferring these subjects to another semester. No complaint was sent to the college management.

Taking into account these violations, as well as the need to prepare a response on the merits of the appeal of students' parents, the Moscow Department of Education decided to conduct an unscheduled inspection of the College's educational activities.

On November 1, 2024, the expert assigned to conduct an unscheduled field inspection arrived at the educational organization to conduct an inspection.

The deputy director of the educational organization reported that the head of the institution (who was notified in advance of the inspection date) is being treated, and for this reason the inspection is not legitimate, since the head must be present during its conduct. In addition, the Prosecutor's office must agree to conduct an unscheduled inspection.

Despite the arguments made, the inspection of the educational organization was carried out, and its results, issued in the form of an inspection report, were not signed by the head of the college.

Questions about the incident:

1. Determine the rules of law governing the social relations described in the situation, and justify their choice.

2. Identify the circumstances that are relevant to protecting students' rights. What can be considered as evidence of committing an offense in the field of educational activities and in the field of violation by an educational organization of the requirements of the legislation on state control (supervision)?

3. What actions need to be taken and in what order to protect the rights of students, as well as to protect public interests when conducting state control (supervision) activities?

Topics of essays and research papers.

1. Provision of public services in the social and cultural sphere.

2. Administrative and legal bases of educational activity and the education system.

3. Administrative and legal regulation in the field of scientific and technological development.

Practical lesson # 2 on topic # 16 "Legal foundations of management in the socio-cultural sphere"

An incident.

In the summer, a children's health tent camp was set up in the Vladivostok area. There were no normal communal living conditions in the camp. Children washed their faces with water from the river. The children had no place to wash every day, once a week they were taken to a public bath, and the toilet was also not equipped. Local residents were dissatisfied with the current situation, and most importantly, they felt sorry for the children who did not have normal living conditions. When the third camp shift arrived, local residents filed a complaint with Rospotrebnadzor.

At 12.00 o'clock on August 4, 2024, the chief specialist-expert of the Department of supervision of hygiene of children and adolescents of the Department of Rospotrebnadzor for the Primorsky Territory A. conducted an unscheduled inspection of the Children's and Youth Organization "Rosinka".

As a result of the inspection, it was established that the Children's and Youth Organization "Rosinka" carries out activities to organize children's recreation in the tent camp without establishing the proper conditions for this, which is confirmed by the act of acceptance and inspection of the suburban health camp dated 04.08.2024, as well as video materials available in the case file indicating the functioning of the children's tent camp at the time of 04.08.2024., without eliminating the relevant violations that pose a threat to the life and (or) health of children.

The head of the Children's and youth organization "Rosinka" B. denied guilt in committing an offense and in support of his arguments said that Spartan conditions were specially created for the children in order to educate them fortitude, courage and tempering necessary for participation in sports competitions. That is, this is one of the special and necessary conditions created for the training of children.

Based on the available materials, Rospotrebnadzor initiated an administrative offense case against the Rosinka Children's and Youth Organization.

After 30 days, the case was referred to the judge. According to the court's decision, the Children's and Youth organization "Rosinka" was brought to administrative responsibility in the form of a fine of 9 thousand rubles.

Questions about the incident:

1. What legal norms govern the relations described in this situation? Justify the answer.
2. What are the circumstances described in the situation described above that are of legal significance to you? How should the actions of the Children's and Youth Organization "Rosinka" be properly qualified, under what article of the Administrative Code of the Russian Federation?
3. What violations of the law during the proceedings on this administrative offense case are present in the situation under consideration? What actions should be taken to eliminate the violations committed?

Incident

The following appeal was sent to the Minister of Sports of the region: "Dear Minister of the Region, I am writing to complain to you! The role of physical education in the life of the state is very important. Certain positive trends in the direction of increasing the sports potential of our country have been outlined, but this is not enough. I complain that the sports infrastructure in the region is poorly developed, there are not enough full-time specialists in physical culture and sports, and the positions of our regional athletes in the international sports arena are weakening." Having given a legal assessment of this appeal as a complaint and considering that the issues contained therein fall outside the competence of the regional Ministry, the Minister of Sports of the Region sent the appeal for consideration on its merits to the Ministry of Sports of the Russian Federation.

Questions about the incident:

1. Conduct a legal analysis of the situation.

2.4. Independent work

Independent work is one of the most important components of the educational process. Its purpose is to consolidate the skills, abilities and knowledge acquired in classroom classes, and it ensures the formation of students' cognitive activity techniques, interest in creative work, and the ability to independently solve professional problems.

Independent work in mastering the discipline is an important condition for the formation of appropriate competencies in students.

There are two types of independent work:

- classroom independent work;
- extracurricular independent work.

Classroom independent work both precedes lectures and practical classes, and is carried out after studying a specific topic to consolidate the knowledge gained, identify the internal relationship of the concepts, categories and institutions studied, and form practical skills in preparing organizational, administrative and legal documents.

Classroom independent work is carried out in the following forms:

- study of recommended regulatory legal acts, basic and supplementary literature;
- search for and study additional regulatory legal acts, scientific literature, and examples from judicial and law enforcement practice, including using the Internet and reference legal systems;
- search and analyze various legal and socio-political information on curriculum topics, including using the Internet;
- solving problems (cases) and test tasks based on materials available at the department;
- preparation of research papers, reports, essays, presentations;
- drawing up diagrams, tables, diagrams and annotations to them;
- project activities;
- preparing for the interactive part of classes;
- development of presentations and diagrams for each practical lesson on the topic;
- selection of materials for debates, colloquiums and collecting information for business games on the issues of each practical lesson;
- control work for part-time students in the discipline "Administrative Law".

Model (features) of independent work on individual sections and topics of the course:

- study of normative legal acts, educational and scientific literature on the relevant topic;
- identification and preparation for discussion of unclear and controversial issues;
- drawing up diagrams, comparative tables and annotations to them;
- writing essays and essays on a given (selected) topic;
- study of additional questions and topics determined by agreement with the teacher (optional).

Extracurricular independent work is aimed at studying additional issues related to independent work of students, acquiring new skills and abilities that are necessary and mandatory for mastering the full range of competencies formed during the study of the discipline.

According to the teacher's decision, if, for example, the student did not attend classroom classes or did not systematically complete tasks to prepare for classroom classes, extracurricular independent work can be performed in the form of an individual task, including both tasks on individual topics and on the entire discipline as a whole.

The purpose of studying the topic "Management and executive power" is to familiarize students of a law school with one of the most important legal branches – administrative law. Administrative law studies managerial relations, especially those related to the exercise of executive power. And the executive power in the system of separation of powers is designed to ensure the implementation of general requirements, rules formulated by the norms of legislation, their unwavering implementation by all state and non-state entities, all citizens. Thus, the executive branch ensures the implementation of State policy. Achieving these goals implies the creation of a system of public and state administration, a special mechanism of executive power, i.e. a system of state bodies in which the practical implementation of executive power is carried out. These are the executive authorities (or state administration). Their activities are essentially managerial, executive, and non-judicial. Administrative reform serves to improve the efficiency of public administration and the executive branch. It is necessary in order to improve the quality of public administration in all sectors and spheres - economic, socio-cultural, administrative and political, to improve the system and structure of federal executive bodies, the civil service, to eliminate administrative barriers primarily to small and medium-sized businesses, to eliminate redundant, duplicative functions of executive bodies and federal agencies., and regional ones. Topic 1 of the work program is devoted to issues of public administration and executive power.

The fundamental issues of administrative law are the subject, method and system of administrative law. Administrative law is one of the most complex and large-scale branches of Russian law. This is due to the specific subject of this branch of law, the breadth and depth of public relations that are regulated by its norms. Administrative law, being an integral part of the Russian legal system, relates to it as a part and a whole and is closely related to other branches of Russian law, such as constitutional, civil, labor, financial, criminal, etc. Considering this topic, it should be understood that administrative law can be considered as a branch of law, a science and an academic discipline. It is also necessary to determine the methodological basis for the formation of administrative law.

First of all, it should be noted that administrative law is one of the branches of public law. As noted by the well-known Russian economist A. I. Elistratov, public relations in comparison with private relations have significant features. Private relations are the relations of individuals among themselves, family and property relations that are formed on the basis of their private interests. Public relations are relations between a representative of the state authority and a person: their content is the public interest, the interest of the state authority. The peculiarity of a public relationship is that here one of the participants in the relationship is the state authority (state authorities). This is a permanent partner of a person in public relations.

The sphere of administrative law includes managerial relations that have a state content. This shows that not all public relations, which are managerial in nature, can be attributed to the subject of administrative law. In particular, relations that arise in connection with the functioning of non-governmental organizations (public associations, commercial structures, etc.) do not belong to the subject of administrative law. Thus, the purpose of intra-union, intra-party and similar managerial relations is to ensure the necessary self-organization (organization of one's own affairs), and not to express the interests of the state. They are dominated by the will and interests of the members of these associations, which are not expressed in legal norms, for example, in statutory norms. But this does not mean that administrative law is indifferent to the organization and activities of non-State formations. Its norms have a certain regulatory effect on them in cases where this is directly provided for by the current legislation.

When determining the subject of administrative law, it is necessary to take into account the sphere of public administration, which covers any manifestations of public and managerial activities; the presence of an active subject of executive power or other executive body in it; the practical implementation of their administrative powers granted for the implementation of public and managerial activities. In essence, these are the conditions under which managerial relations arise "in connection" and "about" the practical implementation of the tasks and functions of the executive branch.

In addition, it should be noted that the subject of administrative law includes internal or intra-organizational relations in executive bodies, as well as in the offices of legislative, judicial and other state bodies.

Topic 2. Administrative law as a branch of law, science and academic discipline

Introduction to the recommended legal literature and regulatory legal acts on the issues of lectures and practical classes, preparation of questions to the teacher of the discipline on problems that are not sufficiently clear to the student based on the results of familiarization with the recommended sources of the discipline (questions are prepared in writing, Preparation of written answers and diagrams-for each question of the topic; report (message) and presentation to illustrate it. Prepare a glossary on the topic, define the following concepts: subject of administrative law, method of administrative law, system of administrative law. Solving practical problems and incidents at the direction of the discipline teacher (approximate practical problems and incidents are described in the section "Evaluation tools" of the work program").

Independent work of students on topic 3

Administrative and legal norms and administrative and legal relations are closely related to each other, since they are derived from social relations that make up the subject of administrative law.

A norm of administrative law is a rule, a certain measure of proper behavior, established by the state and protected by State funds. A rule of law in its legal meaning is a certain rule of conduct, the observance of which is guaranteed by various kinds of organizational, explanatory and stimulating means, as well as the application of legal enforcement measures (disciplinary, administrative, material, criminal liability) against those who do not comply with them. Such qualities are fully inherent in administrative and legal norms. They determine the main parameters of state-managerial activity and the managerial relations that arise in its process (for example, the legal status of a citizen, subjects of executive power).

Administrative and legal norms have a certain hierarchy. This means that there is a certain hierarchy of administrative and legal norms: constitutional norms, norms of laws, and norms established directly by subjects of executive power (for example, the Government of the Russian Federation).

Being a secondary (derived) form of legal establishment, administrative and legal norms created directly by the subjects of executive power ensure the effectiveness of constitutional and legislative legal norms. Thus, they serve as one of the essential legal tools that give these norms the character of actual legal regulations, as well as detailing and specifying the general rules of conduct contained in them.

Administrative-legal relations are one of the types of legal relations, i.e. public relations in the management sphere, regulated by law. An administrative legal relationship is the result of the regulatory influence of a legal norm on the managerial public attitude, which gives it a legal form.

It should be noted that the norm of administrative law itself does not create a specific administrative-legal relationship. It is the basis for its emergence, under appropriate conditions and in the presence of appropriate subjects, the management relationship acquires an administrative and legal "shell", establishes the scope of powers of these parties, their mutual rights and obligations, as well as legal responsibility for non-performance of duties or violation of rights. The administrative and legal norm defines for one party the type and measure of possible behavior, and for the other-the type and measure of proper behavior.

The administrative-legal relation can be defined as the administrative-legal norm-regulated managerial public relation that develops in the sphere of public administration and the implementation of executive power.

Topic 3. Administrative and legal norms and administrative and legal relations Familiarization with the recommended legal literature and regulatory legal acts on the issues of lectures and practical classes, preparation of questions to the teacher of the discipline on problems that are not sufficiently clear to the student based on the results of familiarization with the recommended sources of the discipline (questions are prepared in writing, for the possibility of evaluating the development of the material). Preparation of written answers and diagrams-for each question of the topic; report (message) and presentation to illustrate it. Prepare a glossary on the topic, define the following concepts: administrative and legal norm, structure of administrative and legal norm, administrative and legal relations, structure of administrative and legal relations. Solving practical problems and incidents at the direction of the discipline teacher (approximate practical problems and incidents are described in the section "Evaluation tools" of the work program").

Independent work of students on topic 4

The topic is devoted to topical issues of the administrative and legal status of citizens as subjects of administrative law.

Individuals can include the following categories of individual subjects: citizens of the Russian Federation, foreign citizens, persons with dual or multiple citizenship, and stateless persons. All categories of individuals have a different scope of administrative and legal status and all of them are subjects of administrative law.

Citizens of the Russian Federation, acting as a subject of administrative law, have the corresponding administrative and legal status, fixed in the legal norms defining their social and legal role in the state and society.

The administrative and legal status of a citizen includes administrative legal personality, consisting of legal capacity and legal capacity, a set of his rights and obligations, state guarantees for the exercise of these rights and obligations, provided by legal means and means of their protection.

When studying the topic under consideration, it is necessary, first of all, to pay attention to the concept, general characteristics of elements of the administrative and legal status of both citizens of the Russian Federation and foreign citizens, stateless persons, refugees, and internally displaced persons.

The administrative and legal status of a citizen of the Russian Federation or a foreign citizen is determined by the Constitution of the Russian Federation, international legal treaties; the Federal Law "On Citizenship of the Russian Federation", the Federal Law "On the Legal Status of Foreign Citizens in the Russian Federation", the Law of the Russian Federation "On the Right of Citizens of the Russian Federation to Freedom of movement, The Law of the Russian Federation "On Internally displaced persons", the Law of the Russian Federation of February 19, 1993 No. 4528-1 "On refugees", etc.

Special attention should be paid to studying the concept and types of citizens ' appeals: proposals, applications, complaints.

Independent work of students on topic 5

The topic is devoted to topical issues of the administrative and legal status of executive authorities as subjects of administrative law.

Executive authorities are a special type of organizations of people that have the following characteristics: they are organized collectives; they are an autonomous part of the state apparatus; they perform state public functions, realize the public interest; they act on behalf of the state; they have their own competence; they are responsible to the state for their activities, and so on. The President of the Russian Federation, as the head of state, has a lot of powers in the sphere of executive power. In particular, he is the Supreme Commander-in-Chief, directs some executive authorities (the Ministry of Internal Affairs of the Russian Federation, the Federal Security Service of the Russian Federation, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Russian Federation, etc.), appoints the Chairman of the Government of the Russian Federation with the consent of the State Duma of the Russian Federation, and so on.

The Government of the Russian Federation is the highest executive body of state power.

The system of federal executive bodies of the Russian Federation includes federal ministries, federal services, and federal agencies. The structure of federal executive bodies is established by Presidential Decree No. 326 of 11.05.2024 "On the structure of Federal Executive Bodies".

According to the Constitution of the Russian Federation, within the limits of the jurisdiction of the Russian Federation and the powers of the Russian Federation in matters of joint jurisdiction of the Russian Federation and constituent entities of the Russian Federation, federal executive bodies and executive bodies of constituent entities of the Russian Federation form a single system of executive power in the Russian Federation.

A system of executive authorities headed by the highest executive body of State power of the subject of the Russian Federation is established in the subject of the Russian Federation.

The structure of executive bodies of state power of a subject of the Russian Federation is determined by the highest official of the subject of the Russian Federation (head of the highest executive body of state power of a subject of the Russian Federation) in accordance with the constitution (charter) of the subject of the Russian Federation.

When studying the topic under consideration, it is necessary, first of all, to pay attention to such theoretical issues as: the concept, signs, principles of organization and activity of executive authorities, classification and their types, functions, powers and competence of executive authorities.

The administrative and legal status of executive bodies is defined by the Constitution of the Russian Federation, the Federal Law "On the Government of the Russian Federation", the Federal Law "On General Principles of Organization of Legislative (Representative) and Executive Bodies of State Power of the Constituent Entities of the Russian Federation", the Federal Law "On Organization of Provision of State and Municipal Services", the Criminal Code "On the System and Structure of Federal Executive Bodies" Federal Executive Bodies ' Structure, Decree of the President of the Russian Federation "On assessing the effectiveness of the Activities of Executive Bodies of Constituent Entities of the Russian Federation", etc.

Organizations with state powers, such as extra-budgetary funds, state-owned companies, and state corporations, deserve special attention.

When studying the topic under consideration, it is necessary, first of all, to pay attention to the concept and purpose of administrative and legal forms in the mechanism of administrative and legal regulation of public administration, the provision of public services to citizens. Particular attention should be paid to the study of administrative and legal forms of opm as a means of external expression of public administration, which determine the limits of specific managerial actions performed directly by state bodies and their officials. Of particular importance are the problems of applying administrative and legal forms in the management activities of State bodies that affect the fundamental rights and interests of citizens. It should be borne in mind that the form of management is a certain part of the management activities of the body, its structural divisions and officials. Each form of management involves the performance by specific subjects of certain actions that specifically reveal the content of management activities, the management impact itself. The main concepts that allow us to consider the term "form of management" are "management goals", "management functions", "management tasks", "powers", "competence". These concepts also determine the choice of management methods (methods of managerial influence of the subject of management on the objects of management) in a specific management situation. Management functions determine the main content of management activities. All forms of management used by the subjects of management are subordinated to the goals of management. By means of forms of management, management bodies exercise their powers that correspond to the competence of these bodies established in the regulatory act. The form of management is a means of implementing managerial functions to achieve management goals. When describing administrative and legal forms, it is necessary to pay attention to their connection with the exercise by state authorities and local self-government bodies of power of a law-establishing, law-enforcement, regulatory and law enforcement nature. This makes it necessary to understand the content of law-establishing, law-enforcement, regulatory and law enforcement forms of public administration. Special attention should be paid to the study of the specifics of administrative contracts as a special legal form of regulating administrative and legal relations, which, in contrast to the usual unilaterally authoritative legal acts, implies equality between the subjects of relations when they are concluded. In addition, when studying the section, you should understand the specifics of non-legal forms of public administration. The latter include, first of all, various kinds of organizational, material, technical and other actions that are often found in the daily activities of executive authorities. It is also necessary to pay attention to the main areas of improvement of administrative and legal forms of implementation of executive power and public administration in general.

Administrative coercion is one of the most important sections of administrative law. Administrative coercion as a specific method of protection and protection of the constitutional legal order in force in the country has a number of distinctive features. In this regard, when studying the section, it is important to understand the grounds and procedure for applying various types of administrative coercion. According to the grounds of application, administrative coercion is divided into coercion in the form of bringing to administrative responsibility for committed offenses and objective coercion in the absence of an offense, applied due to public and state necessity or for socially useful and objectively necessary control and preventive purposes. It should be noted that various types of administrative coercion are used by various executive authorities and their officials in the conditions and in the order of off-duty subordination, and this distinguishes administrative coercion from official disciplinary coercion, which is associated with the application of various and diverse disciplinary measures. An important area of independent training is to understand the modern scientific classification of administrative coercion measures, which are divided into five main types according to their content and the immediate purpose of their application: 1) Administrative and preventive measures applied for public and state needs due to the existing special conditions and circumstances (administrative and preventive measures applied due to state and public necessity include, for example, requisition, quarantine, reservation, establishment of a regime of restricted zones and closed territories, various restrictions and prohibitions on the use of drugs). implementation of certain actions (such as holding demonstrations, street demonstrations, etc.). The state and public need to overcome many special extraordinary circumstances that interfere with the normal functioning of society is the main reason why the executive authorities are responsible for implementing the above-mentioned and similar administrative preventive measures. 2) Administrative measures of a control and preventive nature (administrative measures of a control and preventive nature include, for example, mandatory state registration (of weapons, vehicles, charters of public associations, etc.), all measures of the licensing system, licensing of various types of production, economic and entrepreneurial activities, quotas for the export and import of a certain type of goods and products, inspections of vehicles, hand luggage and baggage of air transport passengers, etc.). 3) Administrative preventive measures and enforcement of proceedings in cases of administrative offenses (both of these groups of administrative enforcement measures are applied in the absence of offenses and, consequently, to law-abiding citizens and organizations, so special care, clarity and courtesy of state executive authorities and officials are required with those subjects to whom these measures are applied). measures). The immediate purpose of applying all administrative preventive measures and ensuring proceedings in cases of an administrative offense is to prevent the harmful consequences of an offense that has already been committed, or to nip in the bud an incipient offense, prevent its development and transformation into a more serious and serious violation in its content and consequences. 4) Administrative punishments are applied for the commission of administrative offenses. Administrative punishment measures, an exhaustive list of which is given in Article 3.2 of the Administrative Code of the Russian Federation, fundamentally differ from all the groups (types) of administrative coercion measures considered above in that they are applied as sanctions for committing a specific administrative offense. 5) A special group of administrative coercion is formed by administrative-restorative measures, the purpose of which is the full restoration of the violated right at the expense of a new person (the situation that existed before the violation) by decision of the authorized executive authorities and their officials. Administrative and restorative measures include: compensation for material damage caused by an administrative violation that does not exceed half of the minimum wage; demolition of unauthorized buildings and structures by decision of municipal executive authorities; administrative eviction of persons from self-occupied residential premises with the approval of the prosecutor.

When studying the section, special attention should be paid to the legal grounds for applying administrative coercion measures, the specifics and specifics of its various types.

Special administrative and legal regimes (CAD) are a type of special legal regimes. The main purpose of CAD is to ensure security and law and order primarily in the event of external and internal threats – aggression against the Russian Federation, armed conflicts, mass riots, terrorist acts, natural disasters, man-made disasters, etc. In addition, administrative and legal regimes ensure the functioning of objects and the use of objects that pose an increased public danger or are of state importance; determine the procedure for exercising rights and obligations, living conditions in territories where special environmental, sanitary, fire-fighting and other measures are carried out, as well as in territories that are special zones of state legal protection; establish the procedure for the use of information constituting a state secret, create conditions for the activities of executive authorities in non-standard situations.

The fundamental normative legal acts are: the Constitution of the Russian Federation; Federal Constitutional Law No. 3-FKZ of 30.05.2001 "On the State of Emergency"; Federal Constitutional Law No. 1-FKZ of 30.01.2002 "On Martial Law"; Federal Law No. 35-FZ of 06.03.2006 "On Countering Terrorism"; Federal Law No. 68 of 21.12.1994-Federal Law "On Protection of the Population and Territories from Natural and Man-made Emergencies"; Federal Law No. 52-FZ of 30.03.1999 (as amended on 25.11.2013) "On Sanitary and Epidemiological Welfare of the Population"; Law of the Russian Federation No. 4730-1 of 01.04.1993 "On the State Border of the Russian Federation"; Federal Law No. 114 of 15.08.1996- Federal Law "On the procedure for leaving the Russian Federation and Entering the Russian Federation" ;Law Of the Russian Federation No. 3297-1 of 14.07.1992 "On Closed administrative-territorial Formation", etc.

In the most general form, the organizational and legal structure of any administrative and legal regime includes: the goals of the regime; the grounds and procedure for introducing the regime; the powers of subjects implementing the regime; the procedure for functioning and interaction of executive authorities in the sphere of the regime; the powers of local self-government bodies in the sphere of the regime; special powers of authorized subjects in terms of regulatory legal regulation, implementation of control and supervision over the measures and measures that make up this regime; the powers of the direct executors of the regime; the procedure for the activities of organizations and citizens' behavior under the regime; the procedure for financing and compensating expenses for the implementation of regime measures at the levels of executive authorities, as well as in relation to local self-government bodies, organizations, and citizens.

In the science of administrative law, various criteria for distinguishing CAD systems have been developed: by object (territorial, object-based, modes of handling objects that pose an increased public danger or are of state importance, functional and activity modes); by subject of regulation (environmental protection, state security, public order protection); by the criterion of legal properties (ordinary and non-standard). extraordinary), etc.

A special place in the administrative and legal regulation is occupied by military, state of emergency and special status regimes, which are introduced only in the event of political, social or natural-man-made emergencies. The features of such regimes are: significant restriction of the constitutional rights, freedoms and legitimate interests of citizens and organizations; introduction of additional administrative and legal obligations and prohibitions; granting emergency powers to government bodies; introduction of forms of special administration of the territory where the regime is established, including the creation of temporary special bodies, redistribution of competence, suspension of the activities of individual state authorities, etc. local government.

Independent work of students on the topic 12

Legality is inextricably linked with the law, legal norms. The requirement to comply with legal norms applies to everyone who is within the scope of the law. Today, no one can evade the implementation of State regulations, just as the State cannot evade ensuring and protecting the legitimate rights of the individual.

Ensuring the rule of law in the exercise of executive power is primarily the task of the State and its bodies. Having the necessary organizational, material and coercive means, it is designed to reliably protect the legitimate rights and interests of citizens. However, citizens and their associations can and should, within the framework of the legal framework, influence the state apparatus in order to increase the legality of its activities. In this regard, it is important to present legality as a principle, regime and method of activity of State bodies, their officials and civil servants.

At the same time, it is necessary to understand the relationship between law and order, legitimacy and state discipline.

In the theory of administrative law, the system of methods and means of ensuring legality in the sphere of executive power traditionally includes general conditions (prerequisites) and special legal, organizational and legal methods and means of ensuring legality. The general conditions for the formation of legality include political (ideological), social, economic, and organizational prerequisites.

Among the special legal methods and means of ensuring the rule of law, legal guarantees, control and supervision, appeals against illegal actions and decisions of executive authorities and their officials are distinguished.

A special place among the methods and means of ensuring the rule of law is given to control and supervision. It is necessary to study the theoretical, methodological and legal foundations of control activities in the Russian Federation. At the same time, pay attention to the social and legal purpose, the concept and essence of control in the implementation of executive power, types of state and public control. In addition to control, the legality of the implementation of executive power is designed to ensure supervisory activities. Students should establish the ratio of control and supervision, and disclose the types of supervision in the implementation of executive power. The main attention should be paid to administrative supervision (concept, signs, types).

Appeal (protest) is becoming increasingly important in ensuring the rule of law. When studying the topic, it is necessary to understand the concept and essence of appealing against illegal actions (decisions) of state bodies, officials and civil servants, the role of administrative and judicial appeals against illegal actions (decisions) of state bodies, officials and civil servants in ensuring the legality. The legal basis for administrative and judicial appeals is formed by normative legal acts of various legal force: from the Constitution of the Russian Federation to acts of executive authorities, which establish the procedure and content of administrative appeals. There are general procedures and special types of administrative appeals. The general appeal procedure is carried out in accordance with Federal Law No. 59-FZ of 02.05.2006 "On the procedure for considering Appeals from Citizens of the Russian Federation". Special types of appeals are provided for by the Tax Code of the Russian Federation (Part I) and Federal Laws: No. 210-FZ of 27.07.2010 "On the organization of the provision of State and Municipal Services"; No. 311-FZ of 27.11.2010 "On Customs Regulation in the Russian Federation"; No. 229-FZ of 02.10.2007 "On Enforcement Proceedings".

With the adoption of the Code of Administrative Judicial Procedure of the Russian Federation, the administrative justice system received regulatory formalization. It is necessary to study the norms that establish the procedure and content of judicial appeals against illegal actions (decisions) of executive authorities and their officials.

The topic is devoted to general issues and problems of public administration. When studying it, it is necessary to pay attention to the concept and purpose of public administration, its goals, tasks and functions.

Special attention should be paid to studying the relationship between public administration and state regulation.

It is necessary to understand the difference between the functions of public administration and the competence of public administration bodies. It is necessary to pay attention to the functional aspect of the system and structure of the executive power of the Russian Federation.

When studying the competence of other public administration bodies that also perform State functions, it is necessary to understand the legal basis for transferring State functions to non-governmental organizations and the limits of their powers.

It is necessary to pay attention to the organizational structure of public administration, first of all, to the competence of the President of the Russian Federation and the Government of the Russian Federation, federal ministries, other federal executive bodies and their territorial di-

Independent work of students on topic 15

The topic is devoted to topical issues of administrative and legal regulation, including economic development, customs and foreign economic activity, industry and trade, energy, agriculture and fisheries, construction and housing and communal services, environment and nature management, as well as antimonopoly regulation, regulation in the fields of transport,transport and transport. communications, information technologies and mass communications, finance and credit.

When studying the topic under consideration, it is necessary, first of all, to pay attention to the concept and purpose of the economic sphere, state regulation in the relevant sectors and areas that are part of it, and the provision of public services that are provided to citizens.

Special attention should be paid to studying the competence of executive authorities, as well as other bodies that are responsible for state regulatory powers, namely: licensing, state registration, licensing, accreditation, quotas. Of particular importance are the problems of State control and supervision, as well as the provision of public services and the management of State property in the relevant areas.

It is necessary to pay attention to the organizational structure of public administration, first of all, to the competence of the Government of the Russian Federation, federal ministries, other federal executive bodies and their territorial divisions, executive bodies of constituent entities of the Russian Federation, and their subordination in a single system of executive power. It is important to pay special attention to the competence of the President of the Russian Federation. Despite the fact that the President of the Russian Federation has virtually no constitutional powers in the field of economics, his role in this area can be considered decisive, since he has discretionary powers in relation to both the Government of the Russian Federation and the State Duma of the Federal Assembly of the Russian Federation.

Regulation of the economic sphere has its own peculiarities, due to its assignment to the subject of joint jurisdiction of the Russian Federation and the constituent entities of the Russian Federation. In addition, certain issues are the exclusive competence of the executive authorities of the constituent entities of the Russian Federation.

The fundamental normative legal acts are: the Constitution of the Russian Federation; the Code of Administrative Offences of the Russian Federation; Federal Constitutional Law No. 2-FKZ of December 17, 1997 "On the Government of the Russian Federation"; Federal Law No. 210-FZ of July 27, 2010 "On the Organization of the Provision of State and Municipal Services"; Federal Law No. 13.07.2015 No. 218-FZ "On stategovernmental registration of real estate"; Federal law of August 8, 2001 No. 129-FZ "On state registration of legal entities and individual entrepreneurs"; Federal law of the Russian Federation from June 28, 2014 No. 172-FZ "On strategic planning in the Russian Federation"; Federal law dated December 31, 2014 No. 488-FZ "On industrial policy in the Russian Federation"; Federal law dated December 10, 2003 No. 173-FZ "On currency regulation and currency control";Federal law of December 27, 2002 No. 184-FZ "On technical regulation"; Federal law of 17.08.1995 No. 147-FZ "On natural monopolies"; Federal law dated 26.07.2006 No. 135-FZ "On protection of competition"; Federal law dated November 21, 1995 No. 170-FZ "About use of atomic energy"; Federal law of 20.12.2004 No. 166-FZ "On fisheries and conservation of aquatic biological resources";Federal law of July 24, 2008, No. 161-FZ "On the promotion of housing construction development"; Federal law of July 27, 2006 № 149-FZ "On information, information technologies and protection of information"; the Air code of the Russian Federation on March 19, 1997 No. 60-FZ; Federal law dated 9 February 2007 № 16-FZ "On transport security"; Federal law of 05.04.2013 № 41-FZ "On the accounts chamber of the Russian Federation"; Federal law of 10.07.2002 № 86-FZ "On the Central Bank of the Russian Federation (Bank of Russia)"; Federal law dated January 10, 2002 No. 7-FZ "On environmental protection".

The administrative and legal bases of economic development management include the organizational and legal management system, the content of the powers of executive authorities on regulatory legal regulation, implementation of registration, accreditation, control and supervision procedures. Management of economic development consists in developing and justifying, first of all, priority, most promising and effective directions for the development of the Russian economy, its regions, various industries, complexes, sectors, and so-called economic growth points. An important role of public administration is assigned to the sphere of property relations.

The purpose of public financial management is to ensure the general interests of the state (for example, fiscal and other public needs), as well as to protect the legitimate rights of individuals - subjects of commercial activity). Of particular importance is the administrative and legal status of the Central Bank of the Russian Federation, which is exclusively responsible for issuing cash, organizing its circulation and withdrawing it from circulation. It is important to pay attention to the control and expert-analytical activities of the Accounts Chamber of the Russian Federation.

When describing the features of administrative and legal regulation of customs affairs and foreign economic activity, the main attention should be paid to to improve the existing system of customs clearance and control, to bring the level of activity of the customs authorities of the Russian Federation closer to international standards, to improve the efficiency of the fiscal function of collecting customs payments, and to develop forms and methods of combating customs offenses. It is necessary to identify and analyze the problems of customs regulation of foreign economic activity. It is also important to study the essence of foreign trade activities, the purpose of which is to ensure the national interests of Russia by maintaining peaceful and mutually beneficial cooperation with members of the international community on the basis of generally recognized principles and norms of international law.

When describing the organizational and legal foundations of energy management, the main attention should be paid to the areas of legal regulation in the fuel and energy complex, including the oil production, oil refining, gas, coal, shale and peat industries, etc. It is necessary to disclose the competence of executive authorities on regulatory legal regulation, control and supervision. It is also important to describe the organizational and legal management system in the energy sector, the nature of administrative responsibility in the energy sector, and the powers of Rosatom.

Coverage of administrative and legal features of antimonopoly regulation involves the study of the concept and purpose of competition, methods of its protection; unfair competition, monopolistic activities, the organizational and legal structure of antimonopoly management, the competence of executive authorities in regulatory regulation, control and supervision. Establishing the administrative and legal status of the Federal Antimonopoly Service of the Russian Federation. It is also important to describe the organizational and legal features of state regulation of the activities of natural monopolies and business entities.

One of the main regulatory institutions in the spheres of industry and trade is related to the fuel and energy complex and energy conservation. Also important is the organizational and legal structure of management in the areas of industry and trade, the competence of executive authorities: the powers of regulatory regulation, control and supervision. It is important to analyze the status of Rostekhnadzor. Separately, the management bodies of the military-industrial complex should be described.

When describing the organizational and legal system of agriculture and fisheries management, it is necessary to disclose the competence of executive authorities in the field of agriculture and fisheries (powers of regulatory regulation, control and supervision). Special attention should be paid to the problems of administrative and legal regulation in the field of agriculture. It is also important to separately study the fisheries sector, which includes a wide range of activities—from forecasting the raw material base of the industry to organizing trade in fish products at home and abroad. It is necessary to determine the conditions for the intensification of agriculture, which contributes to an increase in yield and an increase in the value of land. It seems necessary not to ignore the forest industry, since Russia has a quarter of all the world's wood reserves.

When studying the organizational and legal management system in the areas of construction and housing and communal services, it is necessary to pay attention to the competence of the Ministry of Construction and Housing and Communal Services for regulatory regulation, licensing, control and supervision, etc. It is important to analyze the administrative and legal regulation of urban development activities, as well as the implementation of state programs to provide affordable housing for Russian citizens.

The purpose of the administrative and legal framework of transport management is the effective functioning of transport systems, which ensures the integrity of the country's economy, defense and security of the state, and the growth of the standard of living of the population. Separately, it is necessary to characterize the competence of executive authorities in the field of transport: the content of the powers of regulatory regulation, licensing, control and supervision. It is recommended to study the features of administrative and legal regulation in the field of road safety, as well as the administrative and legal status of management bodies in the transport and road complex.

The organizational and legal structure of management in the field of communications, information technologies and mass communications is related to the exercise of the right to search, receive, produce and distribute information, the use of information technologies, as well as ensuring the protection of information. Important aspects of this topic are: the concept and purpose of information technologies, information systems, information and telecommunications networks, and the administrative and legal status of Russian Post. The organizational and legal structure of management in the field of postal and courier communications, the competence of executive authorities (powers of regulatory regulation, control and supervision), as well as administrative responsibility in the field of communications and mass media are also important.

The organizational and legal structure of management in the fields of environment and nature management includes several areas in its content, first, environmental protection, and second, nature management. It is necessary to pay attention to the state-public nature of management, the existence of a specific management structure, which includes international organizations in the field of nature protection. Separately, the competence of executive authorities should be described: the powers of regulatory regulation, control and supervision.

b) Guidelines for completing coursework.

1. The approximate subject of coursework in administrative law is compiled taking into account the level of theoretical training of students.

2. Writing a course work on administrative law provides an opportunity to deeply study a certain educational and scientific problem of interest to the author, to reveal its content and thereby significantly increase the level of their theoretical and legal training.

Taking into account the variety of spheres and branches of state administration, the department offered a wide range of topics that actually reflect the content of the entire course "Administrative Law". Администрация, кафедра предложила широкий перечень тем, фактически Students are given the opportunity to independently choose any topic that corresponds to their personal scientific and creative interest.

3. Having chosen the topic of the course work, it is necessary to carefully study the relevant section of the textbook, after which, using this collection and other sources, independently identify legal acts related to the topic, including the latest ones, and literature, carefully read their content and on this basis draw up a plan for the course work, which should be agreed with the students. your supervisor.

4. The course work should have a clear internal structure and correct design. структура и правильное оформление.

The structure of the course work includes:

1) a plan that consistently indicates the numbers, titles of chapters or paragraphs that reveal the general content of the topic;

2) a brief introduction, which defines the purpose and objectives of the development of this topic, shows its relevance;

3) main content — the text of the course work divided into chapters or paragraphs: within the text, the number and title of each chapter or paragraph specified in the plan should be repeated; at the end of the text, the conclusion should be formulated;

4) the list of normative acts used and the list of references. At the same time, the generally accepted rules of bibliographic description of sources must be observed.

The volume of course work is 20-25 pages of typewritten text, printed at 1.5 intervals.

The correct design of the title page is important. It should indicate the full names of the topic, discipline for which the work was performed; last name, first name, patronymic of the student; number of the study group, course, faculty; last name of the teacher-supervisor.

The text of the course work should have a solid page numbering. Each page should contain fields for the reviewer's notes. On the last page, after listing legal acts and references, the student puts his signature and indicates the date. This allows the reviewer to see whether the author has taken into account the latest legal acts and literary sources.

5. The main requirement for writing a course work is to provide a sufficient scientific, theoretical and legal level of development and coverage of the chosen topic.

This is possible only on the basis of an in-depth study of current legal acts related to the topic, as well as educational and scientific literature, articles in magazines and newspapers. Now a lot of analytical materials are published.

Writing a term paper is an independent educational and scientific creative coverage of the topic's issues. The completed coursework is a clear indicator of the degree and depth of the author's mastery of the essence and content of the considered problem.

6. The student must submit the course work to the methodologist no later than one month before the start of the exam session. This requirement is provided for in the inter-session work plan of students.

7. Review of the course work is aimed at checking how fully the topic is developed, whether normative legal acts and special literature are used, as well as practical materials. At the same time, attention is drawn to the degree of creative-independence of the author in covering the issues of the topic, the ability to formulate and justify conclusions; the literacy and style of presentation of the text are evaluated; the presence of references to the sources used is checked in cases when definitions and text fragments are written verbatim from them (borrowing is not allowed without references).

8. Coursework that generally meets the required requirements is allowed for the defense. The author of such a work understands the comments, gets acquainted with them and the reviewer's recommendations, and with this in mind, prepares to defend the work in accordance with the established procedure: during the weekly consultations of the supervisor-teacher, which is preferable, or in extreme cases — during the examination session together with his group. At the same time, the authors of course papers should be ready to answer all relevant questions, including to indicate to what extent the reviewer's comments are taken into account, and his recommendations are implemented.

Based on the results of the defense, the course work is evaluated according to the five-points system/point-rating system. The corresponding grades are indicated by the teacher in the review and put in the student's credit book. The review with the assessment is submitted to the methodologist and stored in the student's personal file.

9. Неудовлетворительно The course work that does not meet the required requirements is unsatisfactorily evaluated: the topic is not disclosed; the course work plan is not agreed with the supervisor; current legal acts and special literature are not used; references to regulatory and bibliographic sources used or cited in the work, as well as to electronic resources, are not issued; there is no consistency of presentation, conclusions in each paragraph and a conclusion at the end of the work; the list of used legal acts and references is missing or carelessly compiled, including without observing the rules for bibliographic description of sources, taking into account the requirements of GOST; the work does not meet the requirement of independence, the presence of borrowed materials in it without reference to the author and (or) the source of borrowing, abstracting and descriptive presentation, lack of a creative component, or your own opinion. Such course work is subject to revision, taking into account the requirements and recommendations of the teacher, as well as re-submission for review.

Undoubtedly, "works" copied from their colleagues, as well as borrowed "computer variations" are negatively evaluated.

10. Students who fail to pass their term papers in a timely manner or receive an unsatisfactory grade on the defense are not allowed to take the exam(s).

Tasks of the test work for correspondence students

a) brief guidelines for writing a test paper.

In accordance with the curriculum of the Institute, correspondence students perform written control work on the course of administrative law.

1. This type of educational work is a form of written "report" of the student for the mandatory study of specific issues prescribed by the task. Writing a test paper gives the student the opportunity not only to study the proposed specific material, but, most importantly, to learn how to legally correctly formulate written answers to the questions posed.

2. When preparing answers to these questions, it is necessary, first of all, to thoroughly study the relevant sections of the textbook; using this collection, find and study relevant legal acts; identify and use the latest ones published after the textbook and work program were published.

3. To write a test paper on administrative law, students are offered three options for the task, each of which has three questions. Students whose surnames start from the letter "A" to the letter "I" inclusive, perform work on the first option; from "K" to "O" — on the second option; from "P" to "I" — on the third option.

In each version of the task, the theoretical question is put first. To answer it, you should carefully study the recommended literature and legal acts, understand the essence and content of the question posed, and correctly formulate a written answer to the question posed. The answer should not only be correct in substance, sufficiently complete, but at the same time as brief as possible.

The second task requires drawing up a scheme that can be used to characterize the corresponding administrative and legal category based on the analysis of a particular normative act (law, decree of the President of the Russian Federation, decree of the Government of the Russian Federation).

As the third task, a specific question is posed on the topic studied during the semester.

In the task for writing a test paper, in addition to the three options, there is one more general question that all students write answers to.

The general issue requires studying one of the most important acts of administrative legislation — the "Code of Administrative Offenses of the Russian Federation". Deep study of the Administrative Code, knowledge of its structure and content is a very important component of administrative and legal training of a general lawyer. In addition, it is necessary to study other regulatory legal acts regulating the types and procedure for applying administrative-coercive measures. The purpose of the general question is to encourage each student to recall from the course of the theory of state and law material on the concept, types and sanctions of legal liability and, based on the laws, correctly name those measures of influence (sanctions) that are administrative penalties and which are not (with mandatory qualifications). At the same time, it is necessary to refer to specific articles of regulatory legal acts.

4. The volume of written work should not exceed 20 pages of the student's notebook. The task question is reproduced in the paper, and then the answer is formulated. At the end of the paper, it is necessary to provide a list of full names of the legal acts and literary sources used, and indicate the source of their official-publication.

5. The test paper should be well designed. On the title page, you should clearly indicate your last name, first name, patronymic, course, study group number, and task option. On the pages of a notebook or printed text, you must leave fields for the teacher's notes. Pages should be numbered; there should be no grammatical or syntactic errors in the text. When using citations from relevant books or legal acts, it is necessary to refer to the source in the text or in the footnotes.

6. The completed test paper is signed by the author with the end date. This helps the teacher correctly assess whether the author has used the latest legal acts.

Completed control work is subject to registration with the course instructor. Only then is it passed to the reviewer.

7. As a result of the review, the test paper is evaluated by the teacher with one of two grades: "credited" or "not credited". If necessary, the teacher can invite the student to an interview before the final assessment of the work to clarify certain provisions of his control work.

In the case of "Not taken into account", the author will have to re-perform the control work, taking into account the comments (recommendations) of the teacher, otherwise the student is not allowed to pass the test (exam).

b) Tasks for writing a test paper.

OPTION 1
<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Expand the concept, types, and features of administrative law norms, and give examples of each of these types of administrative law norms. 2. Make a diagram: "Principles of organization and activity of executive authorities, draw a distinction in the diagram between complex principles, principles of organization and principles of activity of executive authorities." 3. Name the types of acts of the prosecutor's response to violations of the law in the order of general supervision, describe each of these types. 4. Consider the incident and answer the task questions. The V Novy Put meat processing plant released untreated industrial waste, which resulted in minor contamination of the river's running waters. In connection with this fact, an administrative case was initiated against the V Novy Put meat processing plant. Giving explanations on the case, the representative of the meat processing plant said that the release of harmful substances was made intentionally to prevent a fire at the meat processing plant. It was not possible to stop the technological process, as the equipment at the meat processing plant would have broken down. Therefore, the representative of the meat processing plant denied guilt in committing this offense and demanded the termination of the proceedings on the administrative offense case.

As a result, the V Novy Put meat processing plant was brought to administrative responsibility in the form of an administrative fine.

Questions:

What are the circumstances that preclude proceedings on an administrative offense? What forms of guilt can be identified? How is the guilt of a legal entity in committing an administrative offense determined?

List the regulatory legal acts that are necessary to resolve this situation. Give a legal assessment of this incident with reference to the legislation. Is there an administrative offense and what is it?

Are the arguments of the meat processing plant representative justified? Is it possible to terminate the proceedings in this case?

5. Common task for all variants. Determine which of the following measures of influence are administrative punishments or other measures of administrative coercion, and which relate to other types of industry-specific coercion: warning, notice, severe reprimand, seizure of property, administrative suspension of the cafeteria, transfer to a lower-paid job, deprivation of the right to hunt, dismissal, confiscation of an object (a Finnish knife), disciplinary arrest, demotion, reduction in military rank, administrative fine, demolition of an unauthorized building, seizure of things and documents, appointment to an out-of-turn squad, administrative arrest. Give a written response with references to the norms of administrative and other branches of law for each of the listed coercive measures. Determine the type of each of the listed measures, taking into account the classification of coercive measures.

OPTION 2

1. Expand the concept and types of forms of implementation of executive power, give examples of each specified form.

2. Make a diagram: "The system of executive authorities at both levels (the Russian Federation and the constituent entities of the Russian Federation)".

3. Name the compulsory measures of administrative and preventive influence, and describe each measure.

4. Consider the incident and answer the task questions.

Senior Assistant Prosecutor of Ensk Mikhailov was returning home in his private Lada car late in the evening after a long official meeting. At about 23: 00 local time, he decided to shorten his journey, passed the forbidding red traffic light at the intersection of Oktyabrskaya and Krasnoarmeyskaya Streets, exceeding the established maximum speed of movement in the locality by 25 km/h. This circumstance was noticed by the traffic police inspectors Sokolov and Orlov, who were on duty at the intersection at that time, who were forced to pursue the violator in their official car. Senior Assistant Prosecutor Mikhailov immediately drew attention to the patrol car that was being chased, and obeyed the inspector's demands, stopping at the curb. After getting out of the car, Mikhailov was outraged by the actions of the traffic police inspectors and demanded not to detain him, since he is an assistant prosecutor of the city of Leninsk, and is not subject to administrative responsibility due to the nature of his status. However, traffic police inspectors drew up reports on administrative offenses, and also prepared a report to the prosecutor of Ensk about the unworthy behavior of citizen Mikhailov. The head of the traffic police of Ensk, Solovyov, deprived Mikhailov of the right to drive a vehicle, and the prosecutor of the city of Seregin reprimanded him severely and entered him in his personal file.

Questions:

What regulatory legal acts are necessary to resolve this situation? Identify subjects of administrative legal relations. Describe the features of the administrative and legal status of the subjects.

Are there any violations of legal norms in the context of this task? If so, which ones? Is citizen Mikhailov subject to administrative responsibility?

What is the procedure for bringing law enforcement officials to administrative and disciplinary responsibility? How can the actions of Citizen Mikhailov be qualified?

5. Common task for all variants. Determine which of the following measures of influence are administrative punishments or other measures of administrative coercion, and which relate to other types of industry-specific coercion: warning, notice, severe reprimand, seizure of property, administrative suspension of the cafeteria, transfer to a lower-paid job, deprivation of the right to hunt, dismissal, confiscation of an object (a Finnish knife), disciplinary arrest, demotion, reduction in military rank, administrative fine, demolition of an unauthorized building, seizure of things and documents, appointment to an out-of-turn squad, administrative arrest. Give a written response with references to the norms of administrative and other branches of law for each of the listed coercive measures. Determine the type of each of the listed measures, taking into account the classification of coercive measures.

OPTION 3

1. Expand the concept and features of the subject of an administrative offense, describe the types of these subjects, and give examples for each type.

2. Make a diagram: "Classification of legal acts of executive power in the Russian Federation, determine their hierarchy".

3. Name the signs of an administrative offense, reveal each sign, and determine their significance.

4. Consider the incident and answer the task questions.

From the municipal educational institution "School No. 12" Inspector for minors Ivanova received information that a minor Maksimov 12 years old constantly smokes in the school toilet and does not respond to the comments of teachers. Homeroom teacher Alekseyev repeatedly called Maksimov's mother to the school and conducted serious explanatory conversations with her, but during the last visit she stated the following: yes, her son smokes, but she simply cannot influence this situation, since she is raising him alone, and the child does not listen to her.

Inspector Ivanova drew up a report on an administrative offense under Part 1 of Article 5.35 of the Administrative Code of the Russian Federation against Maksimova, on the basis of which the Commission for Juvenile Affairs and Protection of their rights brought her to administrative responsibility and imposed a fine of 500 rubles.

Citizen Maksimova did not agree with the decision and appealed to the district prosecutor's office with a complaint, in which she pointed out that she fulfills her responsibilities for raising her son, her child never skips school and studies only "good" and "excellent", she herself never ignored calls to school and never missed parent meetings. but after realizing that her conversations with her son about smoking did not have the right effect on him, she allowed him to smoke.

Questions:

What regulatory legal acts are necessary to resolve this situation? Identify subjects of administrative legal relations. Describe the features of the administrative and legal status of the subjects.

Are there any violations of legal norms in the context of this task? If so, which ones? Is Maksimova subject to administrative responsibility?

Does Maksim's actions contain the same elements of an administrative offense? Is the decision of the Commission on Juvenile Affairs valid? What explanation should the district prosecutor's office give to citizen Maksimova?

5. General task for all variants. Determine which of the following measures of influence are administrative punishments or other measures of administrative coercion, and which relate to other types of industry-specific coercion: warning, remark, severe reprimand, seizure of property, administrative suspension of the canteen, transfer to a lower-paid job, deprivation of the right to hunt, dismissal, confiscation of an object (a Finnish knife), disciplinary arrest, demotion, reduction in military rank, administrative fine, demolition of an unauthorized building, seizure of things and documents, appointment to an out-of-turn squad, administrative arrest. Give a written response with references to the norms of administrative and other branches of law for each of the listed coercive measures. Determine the type of each of the listed measures, taking into account the classification of coercive measures.

Questions for the test and exam in the discipline "Administrative Law"

Some methodological notes and recommendations

Credit according to the curriculum is carried out after studying the first (general) part of the administrative law course and to the extent of this first (general) part of the course. The list of questions for the test is given below (first part).

The exam is conducted after studying the second (special) part of the course, the list of questions on which is also given below (second part).

The exam is conducted for the entire course: both for the general and special parts of the program. Therefore, exam tickets include one question from the general part, and the second question from the special part.

2. Questions on the general and special parts of the course, in accordance with the curriculum, are listed in the list by topic and section of the course. The study of educational material and preparation of answers to questions in the specified sequence, as long-term educational practice shows, are methodically most effective.

3. The first part questions listed below are included in the tickets for the general part of the course examination test. Each test ticket will contain two questions from the general part.

4. Having received a ticket for a test or exam, first of all, you should carefully read it and understand exactly what the essence of each given question is, what you need to talk about. At the slightest ambiguity, it is necessary to consult with the teacher in order to avoid sometimes occurring errors – the so-called involuntary "question substitution": the ticket contains one question, and the student answers some other one.

5. When preparing to answer the ticket questions, having understood their content, it is necessary to formulate definitions of the relevant concepts or disclose other theoretical provisions; actively use the relevant provisions of the Constitution of the Russian Federation, constitutional and federal laws, acts of the President and Government of the Russian Federation, as well as other regulatory legal acts. It requires knowledge of not only general provisions, but also specific legal acts that define the goals and objectives, system and powers of public administration bodies for a particular industry (region, sphere). At the same time, it is desirable to give a description of the object of management itself, to show the specifics of those social relations that develop in this sphere, region, industry, and which are subject to administrative and power influence from the relevant management system.

Thus, the student will need not only knowledge of theoretical provisions, but also the ability to navigate the system of current acts of administrative legislation, as well as knowledge of the relevant specific legal act (legal norm) on the question indicated in the exam ticket.

6. When preparing for the exam, certain difficulties are caused by large-scale (voluminous) questions related to the second (special) part of the course. For example, "Public administration of the industrial complex", "Public Administration in the field of finance and credit", "Public Administration in the field of defense", etc., etc.

In the educational literature and legal acts, materials on these issues are quite clearly and compactly presented. You just need to be able to briefly and systematically state your answer during the exam: indicate the essence and general content of this industry, its concept; name the main legal acts on this issue; show the system and powers of management bodies; focus on some questions of the topic (at your discretion); possibly indicate the forms of control in this industry etc.

In short, when preparing for answers to such questions, the student is required not just knowledge, but creative and systematic generalization of this knowledge.

V. MATERIAL AND TECHNICAL SUPPORT

5.1. Providing the educational process with other library and information resources and means of ensuring the educational process

Students are provided with access (remote access) to modern professional databases and information reference systems. The full-text work program of the discipline (module) is posted in the Digital Scientific, Educational and Social Network of the University (hereinafter referred to as the DSESN), in the system of which the "Electronic personal accounts of the student and scientific and pedagogical worker" operate. Access to the materials is possible through the introduction of an individual password. The DSESN is designed to create a personality-oriented information and communication environment that provides information interaction for all participants in the educational process of Kutafin Moscow State Law University (MSAL), including the provision of publicly available and personalized reference, scientific, educational, and social information through services operating on the basis of applied information systems of Kutafin Moscow State Law University (MSAL).

During the entire period of study, each student is provided with individual unlimited access to electronic library systems (electronic libraries) and to the electronic information and educational environment of the Kutafin Moscow State Law University (MSAL). In addition to the electronic libraries of the Kutafin Moscow State Law University (MSAL), it is provided with individual unlimited access to all remote electronic library systems, databases and legal reference systems connected at the Kutafin Moscow State Law University (MSAL) on the basis of license agreements, and having adapted versions of sites for students with disabilities.

The electronic library system (electronic library) and the electronic information and educational environment provide simultaneous access to 100 percent of students from any point where there is access to the information and telecommunication network "Internet", both on the territory of the Kutafin University (MSAL) and outside it.

The Library's collection of electronic resources includes the following legal reference systems, databases and electronic library systems:

I. GENERAL PROVISIONS

1.1. Goals and Objectives of the Discipline (Module)

The goal of the discipline (module) "Civil Law (Special Part)" is to understand the essence of key legal constructs and comprehend the content of doctrinal provisions of civil law, acquire skills in interpreting legal norms and applying them to specific practical situations, familiarize with modern theoretical issues in civil law, as well as challenges in law enforcement.

The objectives of the discipline (module) "Civil Law (Special Part)" are to develop the ability and readiness of students to apply civil law norms in Russian legal proceedings and other professional activities.

1.2. Place of the Discipline (Module) in the Structure of the Higher Education Program

The discipline (module) "Civil Law (Special Part)" belongs to the mandatory part of Block 1 (B1.O) of the main professional educational program of higher education.

Mastering the discipline allows for the expansion and deepening of knowledge acquired at previous stages of study, as well as the development of skills and competencies defined by the program content. The competencies formed during the study of the discipline are essential for successful professional activity. Students acquire the ability to independently identify and utilize necessary substantive and logical connections with other disciplines in the program, such as "Civil Law (General Part)," "Civil Procedure," "Arbitration Procedure," "Family Law," "Private International Law," "Business Law," and others.

1.3. Competencies Formed and Indicators of Their Achievement (Planned Learning Outcomes of the Discipline (Module))

Upon completing the discipline (module), the student should possess the following competencies in accordance with the Federal State Educational Standard of Higher Education (FSES HE):

Universal Competencies:

UC-6 Ability to manage one's time, build and implement a self-development trajectory based on the principles of lifelong learning.

General Professional Competencies:

GPC-2 Ability to apply substantive and procedural law norms when solving professional tasks;

GPC-4 Ability to professionally interpret legal norms.

Professional Competencies:

The term paper is an independent scientific work of the student, designed to reflect practical skills acquired and results of theoretical and/or applied research. The topic of the term paper is agreed upon with the future academic supervisor.

Assignments for Control Work

General Requirements

The control work consists of solving problems from one of three variants. Students whose surnames begin with the letters “A” through “K” (inclusive) solve problems from the first variant; those from “L” through “F” (inclusive) solve the second; and from “Kh” through “Ya” (inclusive) solve the third variant. When solving a problem, it is necessary to analyze the circumstances presented in the task conditions. One should not assume any additional circumstances not specified, nor provide multiple alternative solutions. Students must justify their conclusions made in the task with references to legal norms. The full wording of the relevant norm must be provided. If there are generalizations of judicial practice issued by the highest courts of the Russian Federation (Supreme Court, Higher Arbitration Court), as well as rulings of the Constitutional Court of the Russian Federation, these should also be taken into account when solving the problems. If the problem contains multiple questions, full and substantiated answers must be given to each.

Task No. 1

In March 2024, M. delivered his car VAZ-2109 damaged in an accident for repair to employees B. and P. of JSC "Horizont," who, using a crane and a truck owned by this JSC, transported M.'s car to the organization's premises. M. paid an advance of 50% of the repair cost, amounting to 25,000 rubles. The repair was supposed to be completed within two weeks. During the repair, it turned out that the car body needed replacement. Since the required body was not in stock at JSC, B. and P. requested a postponement of performance. Makarov demanded the return of the car and compensation for damages. B. and P. agreed to return the car but refused to compensate for damages, instead demanding reimbursement of expenses already incurred for the repair. Makarov filed a lawsuit against JSC "Horizont" demanding return of the car and compensation for damages. The defendant disagreed, citing the absence of contractual relations with Makarov.

1. What contract was concluded under the conditions of the case, who are the parties, and what are the essential terms of this contract?
2. What decision should the court make?
3. What decision will the court make if, during the court proceedings, a fire occurred at the repair shop and Makarov's car was destroyed?
- 4.

Task No. 2 LLC "Legal Company 'Justa Kauza'" filed a claim in the Arbitration Court of Moscow against LLC "Stroyservice" to recover a penalty of 50,000 rubles under clause 5.4 of the legal services agreement, which stipulated that in case of termination of the contract by the client (LLC "Stroyservice") or actions (inaction) resulting in impossibility to perform the assignment (including withdrawal of the claim, revocation of power of attorney), the client must pay the contractor a penalty of 50,000 rubles. The Legal Company justified its claim by stating that it provided services under the agreement, including review of documents submitted by LLC, preparation, and filing of a claim with the Arbitration Court of Moscow against a debtor of LLC "Stroyservice." However, LLC "Stroyservice," due to an agreement with the debtor's management and in accordance with clause 1 of Article 782 of the Civil Code of the Russian Federation, notified the Legal Company of contract termination and revocation of the power of attorney. LLC "Stroyservice" filed a counterclaim seeking to declare clause 5.4 of the agreement invalid (null and void) based on clause 1 of Article 782 of the Civil Code.

The Arbitration Court of Moscow satisfied the Legal Company's claim and dismissed LLC "Stroyservice"'s counterclaim. LLC "Stroyservice" appealed the decision.

1. Can parties to a remunerated services contract refuse to perform the contract?
2. Can limitations on the parties' right to unilaterally withdraw from a remunerated services contract be established contractually?
3. Should the appellate court satisfy LLC "Stroyservice"'s appeal?

Task No. 1

Vasilyeva concluded a lifetime maintenance contract with Galochkin, under which Vasilyeva transferred an apartment to Galochkin for payment of rent. The contract was notarized. Galochkin moved into the apartment, but the parties did not manage to register the contract because Vasilyeva became ill and soon died, and most of the documents required for registration were with her. Vasilyeva's heirs demanded Galochkin's eviction, claiming the contract was invalid because it was not registered. Galochkin considers the heirs' claims unfounded because, firstly, he acquired the apartment for payment of rent; secondly, he properly fulfilled his payment obligations under the lifetime rent contract; and thirdly, he performed rent payments in good faith throughout Vasilyeva's illness.

1. Can the lifetime rent contract be considered concluded from the moment of its notarization if the rent recipient died before the contract was registered with the authority responsible for registering real estate rights and transactions?
2. Evaluate the parties' arguments.
3. Will the decision change if Vasilyeva and Galochkin submitted documents for registration of the lifetime rent contract but did not manage to register it because Vasilyeva died before the registration entry was made in the Unified State Register of Rights to Real Estate and Transactions?

Task No. 2

The Syktyvkar Paper Mill concluded a two-year supply contract for printing paper with JSC "Trest." The delivery was made in equal monthly batches of 2 tons. In the last delivery period, the supplier delivered only 1.2 tons. The buyer demanded that the supplier deliver the missing quantity within two weeks. The supplier refused, citing contract expiration, and refunded the money for the undelivered goods. JSC "Trest" filed a claim to oblige the mill to deliver the contractual quantity and compensate for losses caused by improper performance.

1. What is the procedure for making up for the short delivery of goods?
2. What liability does the seller bear for short delivery?
3. What decision should the court make?

Task No. 1

LLC "Stroycenter" filed a claim with the Arbitration Court of Moscow against the State Unitary Enterprise "Bytovik" for recovery of 1,500,000.46 rubles, representing the cost of additional work performed by LLC "Stroycenter" under a construction contract for major repairs of a non-residential premises. LLC "Stroycenter" substantiated its claim by referring to signed acts of acceptance of completed works (form KS-2) and certificates of cost (form KS-3), as well as correspondence between the parties. The defendant did not dispute acceptance of contractual works but argued that the contractor failed to observe the procedure for approving additional works under Article 743 of the Civil Code, therefore the claim should be denied.

The Arbitration Court of Moscow, upheld by the Ninth Arbitration Appeal Court, satisfied the claim in full. The courts reasoned that additional works were confirmed by acceptance acts signed without remarks, and changes in the contract volume do not justify refusal to pay for accepted works. The defendant appealed the decisions to the Federal Arbitration Court of the Moscow District.

1. What are additional works that require approval under paragraphs 3-5 of Article 743 of the Civil Code?
2. What is the procedure for approving additional works?
3. Should the cassation appeal of SUE "Bytovik" be satisfied?

Task No. 2

PJSC "Stroimekhanizatsiya" built a residential building at its own expense. Apartments were distributed among the company's employees as follows: 70% provided for use under commercial lease contracts, 30% sold. The administration based leasing decisions on recommendations from management and employee communities, business qualities, and housing needs regardless of position on the waiting list. The housing area provided often exceeded statutory norms. Some employees sued the company demanding, firstly, recognition of the commercial lease contracts as invalid; secondly, forcing the company to provide housing under commercial lease contracts. The plaintiffs argued that housing should be provided according to the priority on the waiting list and housing area norms.

1. Does the joint-stock company have the right to dispose of its housing stock by allocating residential premises under commercial lease and sale contracts?
2. Is the company free to choose persons with whom to conclude commercial lease contracts and the terms of these contracts?
